Chapter 398 Protect The Baby

Corbin found himself in an awkward situation. He didn't know whether he should follow Rayan's order or not. He looked at Rayan and Janessa. The former was furious, while the latter was shocked. It would be hard to get them to calm down.

Finally, he decided to go and find the doctor. At least that way, he could escape the two.

Knowing the kind of person Janessa was, Corbin believed that the baby had to be Rayan's.

However, his view didn't count. It was almost impossible for Rayan to take the time to analyze the situation. His recklessness was constantly placing Janessa and himself in such a dilemma.

The doctor came and luckily, the fetus wouldn't be affected by amniocentesis.

The doctor acted so quickly and carefully that Janessa didn't feel any pain during the process.

Because of Rayan's status, everything was speeded up and the whole procedure was finished very fast. The DNA results came out in half a day.

As they waited for the result, Rayan was working in the office, while Janessa was lying on the bed with her eyes closed.

She did that to avoid Rayan as she had nothing to say to him. Seeing him would only flare up her anger again.

"Mr. Lu, here are the results." Corbin put the report in Rayan's hand as he glanced at Janessa. Then he smiled thoughtfully, and walked out of the room.

Corbin walked to the entrance. He looked at the bodyguards nearby and said, "It's almost time to bring the car around.

Give them five minutes. They will be outside by then and will return home."

The bodyguards looked at him in confusion. Although they didn't understand what he was saying, they just did as they were told. One of them went to bring the car, while the other stood by the door.

In the ward, Rayan opened the report. His eyes skimmed through the first page before he got impatient and flipped to the last page. It was clearly indicated on there that the samples similarity had reached 99.999%.

That could only mean that the baby in Janessa's womb was actually his.

So the child was not Rylan's, but his.

After a year, he finally had a child again.

Rayan smiled subconsciously as he looked at the results once more.

He had never thought of having a child again until he heard that Janessa was pregnant.

And now that everything was confirmed, he felt excited to be a father. It seemed that all the anger in his mind had been replaced by his joy.

Normally, he wouldn't even look at babies as they passed by. But now, he found himself thinking about his child. He wondered how to raise and educate his child. He even thought about what his child's future job would be.

Did children really bring such happiness?

Then he looked at Janessa who was lying on the bed, and he stopped smiling.

"Janessa, you are pregnant with my child. Why didn't you tell me? Where did you think you were going with my baby?" He knew it was not easy for her to get pregnant again, so he couldn't help feeling scared.

If Rylan hadn't accidentally revealed the secret while he was drunk, he might have never known of it forever.

Janessa opened her eyes silently and looked out of the window. Her eyes were full of tears, but she tried to keep her voice steady. "Do you even have time to care about your baby? You only care about the fact that I lied to you and your perfect soul mate who lives in your house!"

Janessa's words seemed like rambling at first, but if one listened carefully, she was actually blaming Rayan for his lack of responsibility.

"My personal life has nothing to do with you. But you didn't tell me that you have my child. Do you plan on getting an abortion secretly like before and then living a happy life with Rylan?"

Every time he thought of Janessa being with another man, he felt like breaking something. It was as if something belonging to him had been stolen away.

"Yes, I'm pregnant, so what? Even if it's your child, what are you going to do?" Janessa asked him defensively.

How dare he taunt her with what happened in the past! If it weren't for the fact that Gracie hid the truth, how could she have suffered from hemorrhage and how could she have ever thought of getting an abortion?

That baby had been hers. No one regretted more than Janessa did for losing the child.

But she hadn't been given a choice back then. If she hadn't done something fast, her life would have been in danger because of ectopic pregnancy.

And now after such a long time, Rayan had mentioned it again. He even made it seem as if she had meant to lose the child.

Janessa wasn't sure what to feel as she looked at him.

"You can leave if you like, but you won't take my child away. We are going home now," Rayan said coldly.

The discharge papers had been signed and she was free to leave at any time. The reason why he lingered there for a while was because he wanted to have a truce with her.

Now it seemed that there was nothing to talk about.

"The doctor said you can't strain yourself the same way anymore, or the baby may be in danger. So don't try resisting. If I want to take you away, I will," Rayan threatened.

Janessa knew he wasn't bluffing. There was no need to prolong the inevitable. She put on her shoes obediently and followed him.

As soon as they walked out, they stirred up a lot of murmurs.

"Mr. Lu is such a good husband. He even took the time to look after his pregnant wife."

"But I heard that they already got a divorce, didn't they? And he was even with his ex-girlfriend a few days ago."

"Oh my God! How am I just hearing all this now? I really don't know who to believe anymore."

Janessa and Rayan were silent all the way back. To her surprise, he took her to the villa by the sea.

In the past, after Rayan had confessed his love to her, they lived there. They usually went to work, and on weekends, they would enjoy the ocean scenery. Life was quite cozy back then.

But the good days didn't last long.

"Why did we come here?" As Janessa entered the living room, she touched the furnishings in it. Nothing had changed.

In that villa, everything, from the ceiling fittings to the doormat, had been chosen by Janessa. She had wanted to create their world by herself.

"Take care of yourself and protect our baby. If not, I won't let you off so easily. If anything happens to my child, you will get what's coming!"

"Hey, this is my child too. Don't you dare leave! Let's get things straight!" Janessa was even more nervous now that Rayan had brought her there.

But he walked on without looking back. She followed him to the door. Willie stood at the door and smiled at her, gesturing for her to go inside.

Willie was a man with excellent fighting skills, so she didn't even try to provoke him. But she was now under house arrest.

"You are keeping me here against my will. I can sue you." Janessa tried to threaten Rayan.

"If someone in A City dares to take your case, I'll raze his house and office to the ground." It was very likely that he would do what he said. After all, his underlings were very loyal to him.

"You are a bastard!"
