Chapter 93 Come To Find Her

Janessa was determined to not pay any attention to Imani anymore.

Although Janessa had already seen through her plot and didn't get involved, she didn't expect someone would come to her for it later.

When Janessa arrived at her apartment that night, a black car that was parked there suddenly started moving towards her direction.

The security guard observed this car for a long time on his monitor. When he found its movement to be suspicious, he rushed out of his room. "Miss Qiu, please be aware of that car you see over there."

Janessa was still caught up in her own thoughts when she was brought back to reality by the guard's voice. When she turned to look she found a black car driving towards her.

The speed of the car was easily over eighty miles per hour.

Seeing no other way she ran to the nearby grassland to save her life because there was no car way there. The car could drive in high speed on the road, but on the grassland it was impossible. She had a slight opportunity of survival that way

She saw a huge tree and hid behind it quickly to avoid from getting hit by the car.

When the people in the car saw that she found a safe hiding place and there was no chance of hitting her, they decided to drive away instead of waiting.

The guard finally took off his hat after the car drove away. He then wiped his forehead and breathed heavily.

Luckily enough he was smart to take a fast decision.

Janessa stared at the car in distance as it drove away. She was in a state of utter shock. She could not recognize the vehicle at all. Why would anyone want to kill her? Also, who could it be?

She then carefully looked in every direction to make sure there were no more predators hidden anywhere. Seeing everything was clear, she walked into the community with her legs still feeling shaky.

She thought really hard, but could not figure out who they were exactly.

"Are you alright, Miss Qiu?"

The security wanted to know when he saw that she looked worried. Even though she was safe and sound, she seemed uneasy.

"Thank you. I am okay. Thank you so much for being prompt!" Janessa genuinely expressed her gratitude. She was really appreciative of the guard's smart moves.

"Thank god, you are safe. There was a woman in her forties looking for you at around three in the afternoon. However, since the security system of the community is always updated, any car without proper registration is not allowed within the premises. She was barred from entering community at the gate. I could tell from the look on her face that she was very resentful. I kept an eye on her so that she would not dare do anything out of control."

He had a sense of great self-satisfaction. He was an avid reader of detective novels. That knowledge helped him deal with the situation so steadily yet so quickly.

Janessa once again thanked him before entering her home.

At home she needed to take a long, hot bath to get out of the shock.

Janessa relaxed on her sofa and closed her eyes to relieve the stress. The result would definitely come in tomorrow. She knew nobody could wrong her at that time.

She could feel peace overcome her body and she was sleepy.

Suddenly, at this point someone banged on her door like crazy. She had a doorbell. There was no need to bang her door like that. Who could it be?

The noise immediately awoke her from her drowsy state.

"Who is there?"

When Janessa peered through the peeping hole she saw an extremely angry looking Norma. She definitely was an unexpected visitor.

This unwarranted visit made her feel uncomfortable and scared.

The police had escorted Imani away right in the morning. This incident humiliated the whole family. In these high profile circles rumors damaged everything.

They spread like wild fire. Imani's news had been the starting point of many crazy theories and fantasies in as less as three hours.

It was being talked about everywhere and by everyone. Was it because of that Norma decided to pay a visit? Janessa looked at her guest coldly as she opened the door. However, Norma ignored her completely and she behaved as if she entered her own property. She walked in with her muddy shoes and settled on the sofa in order to interrogate. "What made you leave Imani alone in that place? Janessa! Do you have any more values left within you?"

Norma was fuming at the thought that Imani was sent to the hospital in less than two hours after her visit to the police station.

And those men had planned to gang rape her precious daughter... Norma shuddered in horror. Her daughter had always been flawless since her childhood. She was her little baby. But today she was genuinely scared.

Janessa was the main reason for all of this. She would have to pay for her actions!

Norma could only imagine the kind of pain and anxiety her daughter was going through.

Imani was going crazy and Norma blamed Janessa for such a condition.

you choose to eat shit that is on you, but you really don't have to inform all around you of this disgusting hobby of yours." It was beyond Janessa's standard to speak to her anymore. This family had no shame at all!

"Listen, your daughter should have thought well about the consequences before she set me up, alright? Do not cross any limit! If She desperately wanted to draw a boundary with this selfish family.

"She set you up? Are you joking with me? Have you seen yourself? You are just a sad, old, divorced woman looking to stay that everyone is aware of what happened in that hotel, how do you think anyone will even consider her in the future?" 'What kind of a stupid logic is this? I deserved all this because I got divorced?'

She hated them with all of her gut.

relevant. How dare you compare yourself with my beautiful baby? If she desires she can marry the best man out there. But now Janessa finally sat down on the sofa with an angry expression. But she calmly said, "You can see the door right? Help yourself out right now!"

She had no respect left for such a disgusting relative anymore.

Norma was convinced that all this was Janessa's fault. She thought she could come over here and talk some senses into Janessa so she would willingly pay for her mistake, but...

"Wow, so this is how you speak to your elders now? Look at your attitude! I have taken out time from my busy schedule to come and meet you here and this is how you treat me?"

could not scold or beat her aunt away. They had all really annoyed her very much.

"Ha-ha! Shut up. If you do not leave right now I will call the security. So you better hurry up!" Janessa felt very helpless. She

"No point in calling the security guards. Listen to me very carefully. If you fail to apologize for today, you will regret it later. I will avenge you." Norma was still on the sofa and made no gesture to leave.

This was when Janessa realized that the black car from earlier might belong to her aunt.

This piece of reality sent chills down her spine. Her family wanted to kill her.

She quickly got up and informed the security room. She also kept her door open so that they could enter her house. Norma was taken aback by Janessa's heartlessness. Just to save herself from further humiliation she needed to leave before getting dragged away by the guards. While cursing Janessa she stomped away from the house.

But Janessa actually just pretended to call to the security. All she wanted was for Norma to get out.

"All of you are insane!" she groaned, shaking her head.