Home / Romance / Bye, My Ex-husband

Chapter 94 Did You Find Any Suspects

Inside the CEO's office, Corbin reported all of the appointments he had made for Rayan. "First, there will be an international meeting. After that, a press conference at two o'clock in the afternoon. At the end of the day, you're scheduled to have dinner with the CEO of the Gu Group. Your less urgent meetings were postponed to a later date."

Rayan glanced at the door a couple of times as Corbin was reporting as if he was waiting for someone. Needless to say, he was waiting for Janessa to arrive.

Today was the day Janessa promised to bring evidence that would prove that she wasn't responsible for leaking the confidential documents.

Rayan nodded unconsciously as Corbin spoke.

When Corbin was about to leave the office, Rayan suddenly asked him a question.

"What do you think about everything that's been going on?"

'Why is he asking me this?

What does he mean by that question?'

Corbin didn't know the right words to say.

As Corbin studied the expression on Rayan's face, he suddenly realized that his boss was asking about Janessa. He hesitated and decided to be honest.

"I have faith in Miss Qiu. After all, she was your wife once. I don't think she would do anything to hurt the company. Her career and reputation are on the line. She wouldn't benefit from betraying the company like this."

Corbin trusted Janessa wholeheartedly. As he watched her work on the plan, he could see that she genuinely cared about the project.

"Is that so?" Rayan asked. Corbin couldn't tell if Rayan was asking him a question or thinking out loud. Standing by the window and observing the beautiful scenery outside, Rayan didn't say another word.

After adjusting the temperature inside the office, Corbin left the room with the documents in his hand.

Janessa took the elevator to the top floor of the office and ran into Corbin as he was about to leave.

When Corbin spotted her, he gave her a knowing smile.

"Mr. Lu is inside. You may go in directly."

Janessa was bewildered by the mysterious smile on his face.

Was he playing tricks on her? Unfortunately, she didn't have the time to speak with him.

When Janessa pushed open the door, she saw Rayan standing by the window with a cigarette in his mouth, admiring the scenery.

Janessa was unaware that Rayan was a smoker. Beside him was an ashtray, which was overflowing with cigarette butts. She didn't know how many cigarettes he had smoked before she came in. The office was shrouded in smoke when she stepped inside.

Janessa wasn't fond of the smell of cigarettes. She walked toward the windows and opened all of them.

The smell of smoke gradually faded, replaced by the smell of fresh air.

Rayan didn't attempt to stop her and remained standing by the windows.

"If you don't want to live a long life, then that's your choice. However, I would like to keep living. Don't you know that secondhand smoke is harmful?" Janessa said helplessly. This man was impossible!

Rayan then placed the unlit cigarette back into the box and threw it onto the sofa.

"What's the matter?"

Janessa walked over to his desk and inserted the USB flash drive into his computer, and opened the documents she had prepared. After that, she turned on the projector and projected the computer screen onto the white wall. As she searched through the documents, she began to report her findings to Rayan.

"I'll show you everything I've gathered so far. I was able to gather all of this information with the help of my friends. This report was prepared by two computer experts. It proves that I was not responsible for leaking the documents."

Rayan quietly listened to her report.

In the past few days, Janessa had uncovered a lot of information to prove her innocence.

"One thing I couldn't figure out, was why the Gu Group found out about the leaked documents the moment it was released. It was midnight we're talking about. Several top executives of the Lu Group also knew about it, which meant that this matter was planned. These people were coordinating with each other. The person behind this wanted to destroy the partnership between the Lu Group and the Gu Group. They also wanted to get rid of me."

Even with the information she had uncovered, she was still unsure of what Rayan would decide. She might still be fired from her job.

"Is that all?"

Rayan replied coldly. Although her explanation was reasonable, he couldn't get past his prejudices against her. He still wanted to blame this matter on her.

"Wasn't this information enough?" Janessa asked. These past few days, she had worked tirelessly to get her hands on all the evidence. His indifference irritated her. Rayan remained silent.

He picked up the documents Janessa had prepared and slowly looked through all of them. After that, he threw the papers on the floor.

"Rayan, I proved to you that I wasn't the one behind this. What would it take for you to believe me? What more could I do?" Janessa said helplessly. Rayan was so blinded by his love for Gracie that he couldn't think clearly. He had no idea what kind of person she truly was.

Even if she'd given him the evidence, he still refused to believe her.

Would he believe her if she told him that Gracie was behind this?

"Did you find any other suspects?" Rayan asked. In his heart, he knew that this evidence was enough to prove that Janessa was innocent. However, he still wanted to find the person who did this.

"Are you sure you want to know?

Would you believe me if I told you?" Janessa asked hesitantly.

"It appears you do have another suspect." Rayan approached Janessa slowly.

She slowly backed away from him until she hit the wall. At that moment, he was getting too close to her, which made her uncomfortable.

Janessa placed her hand on Rayan's chest to stop him from coming closer. Then she turned her face away from his to avoid his eyes. Every time they were this close to one another, she would feel anxious.

Memories of the pain she felt in the past would linger in her thoughts.

"Tell me who you suspect it is." As Rayan observed Janessa's face, he noticed how beautiful she had become. Her skin was flawless, and she had lost the baby fat on her face.

His eyes trailed down her body, and he noticed how alluring her figure was. At that moment, all he could think about was how badly he wanted her.

"Tell me! It's not for you to decide whether I'll believe you or not. I want to know who would dare to betray my company!" He clutched her jaw tightly and forced her to look up at him.

The losses the company would suffer was the last thing on his mind. He wanted to know who would betray his trust. All of the evidence showed that he couldn't trust the people around him.

She forced herself to calm down as she looked up at him. "If I told you, would you believe me?" she asked in a slow voice.

If he refused to trust her, then what was the point of her words?

Next Chapter