

Billionaire's Ex-Wife And His Hidden Babies

Book 2- Chapter 26

'Why, Sarah? Why haven't you called me yet? Did you forget my birthday as well?' He questioned, looking at his phone and throwing it on the wall, breaking it into pieces. In a pissed mood, he walked out of his cabin.

And there he saw his mother, walking toward him with a big smile on her face.

"Everyone, please gather in the conference room on the twenty-seven floor." She said to the employees still working in the office. Sila walked toward her son, giving him a tight hug. "Happy birthday, baby."

Artemis groaned at the word 'BABY' and still hugged her back. "Thank you, Mom." Breaking the hug, he added. "You should have come here with cake, you know."

"It was important. Especially after what did to the employees. Your dad is going to tell you that you willingly did this because you wanted to share your important day with them."

"But, Mom..."

Sila glared at Artemis, shutting his mouth. "Did she reject you?" She questioned the question that everyone had wanted to know since morning.

"No. But she needs time to think, and the more time she is taking, the more irritated Bolt is getting." Artemis admitted.

"So, that bad wolf is troubling you? You can tell me, and I will leave the cat in the room if he doesn't behave like a good boy." Hearing this, Bolt growled at his human.

"I didn't do anything, mother." Bolt quickly replied to save himself from punishment.

Sila smiled before speaking, "Happy 12th birthday, Bolt."

"Thank you, mother."

"May moon goddess bless you both that thing... or that person who is right for you," Sila said, caressing his cheek.

'Moon Goddess, I hope you already know what we want, and my gut feelings are saying that Sarah is the right person for us. Please send us near us. Please.'

*

After staying at the party for a few hours, Artemis returned to his penthouse, which was on the top floor of the office, instead of going to the pack. He groaned when he smelt flowers and cake from his room. He groaned and swore to scold whoever did this by entering his penthouse.

And how the hell could the guards let enter anyone inside?

Well, that was strange for anyone to do because the door could be opened only with his fingerprint. All these things were going on his mind when he was taking big steps toward his room. He slammed the door of his room to throw everything out of the room, and his widened when his eyes landed on HER.

The smile on his lips, the shine in his eyes, and the glow on his face couldn't be described here, in his penthouse, in his room.

Not just that, she reached near him, running and hugging him tightly. A wave of spark ran all over his body.

"Happy birthday, Mate."

*

A few hours before!!

*

'It's his birthday today.' She cursed and quickly called him. And someone received her call on the first ring. Before she could wish him a happy birthday, she heard the voice of her brother.

"What now, Sarah?" Colton asked. That was when she realized that in a hurry, she had dialed her brother instead of Artemis.

"Nothing. I'm sorry. I accidentally called you."

"Okay. Good night."

"Good night." After disconnecting the call, she dialed Artemis's number this time, making sure that she was calling the right person, but his number was switched off. She tried to call him again, but his phone was switched off.

"I hope he is all right." Thinking this, she sat on the bed and started chanting mantras to separate her soul from her body to check on Artemis, whose number was switched off. Soon, her soul was out of her body, and she traveled directly to the place where Artemis had stayed two days before and wasn't very surprised to find it empty. The room was almost in the same state in which she had left.

'So, he left.' She thought with a heavy heart when she didn't find anything in Artemis's room. 'But I shouldn't be feeling bad about it, right? After all, I wanted SPACE thing.'

She flew into her room to recall one of her best memories. Also, she believed that there was a reason that the room was still not clean.

'Or maybe because it's his hotel. He would have asked to keep it the way for a reason?' With this thought, she looked around and found Artemis's visiting card on the desk. She smiled, looking at the clue that he had left for him with the hope of her arrival at his place. She couldn't lift the card, but she made sure to remember the address.

Once her soul enters her body after reaching near it. And the next thing she did was teleported herself to the address mentioned on his card, remembering perfectly that Artemis's penthouse was on the top of the office building. She couldn't have used teleportation power earlier as well, but she wasn't sure about the fact that Artemis was still in his suite. The last thing that she would want to scare any new customer.

In the next moment, she was inside his penthouse.

'So, this is the room where he stays.' She thought, looking at the master-size bedroom. 'But where is he, by the way?' She looked for him but couldn't find her anywhere in the penthouse, and his phone was still switched off.

'This is the result of my SPACE thing.' She cursed inwardly and chanted another spell to reach near her torn panties which she doubted that Artemis would have thrown, and there was she reached in Artemis's coat pocket in spirit form, which was cutting the birthday cake of his birthday.

'This man is unbelievable. What would his werewolves' friends think after smelling the scent of my panties? Shit!' She muttered, shaking her head, and getting red in embarrassment.

.

#TBC