Chapter 369. Achievements in The Business

After Ding Shan's movie was aired, she won the praise of countless Film Critics and audiences with her superb acting skills. The following year, she won the Golden Horse award for Best Supporting female lead for the role of Xu Zhen.

The following year, Ding Shan worked with a famous director in the country, Jia Rui. The movie '10000 kilometers' became the country's Top Box Office and was nominated for three international awards. This movie flowed with the tragic collision of the times and a person's fate. It was a genius work that director Jia Rui had been polishing for ten years. With this movie, Ding Shan swept away three domestic film awards and set a record for the highest number of awards for a single film in the country.

In the third year, 'The Peaceful Era,' with Bao Hua as the scriptwriter and director, broke the record for the highest viewership ratings in the past ten years. This TV series told the changes in the fate of three generations of medical families in various periods over the past hundred years. It involved The secret history of officialdom, family turmoil, love and hatred, and the ups and downs of the business world. It was like a grand epic.

In her youth, Ding Shan played the female lead in the 'Age of peace.' Although she only appeared in eight episodes, she showed no weakness among the top veteran actors. Instead, she used her emotional and superb acting skills to stand out among famous actors.

After the TV series was aired, the actress for the female lead, a 45-year-old legendary senior in the entertainment industry, praised Ding Shan in an interview as a true actress, giving her hope for young actors.

With such high praise, Ding Shan officially entered the ranks of capable actors. In the same year, she participated in producing a low-budget film, 'The Genius Novelist,' which became the famous work of the young director Li Dan. Ding Shan's influence and popularity soared again, becoming the most dazzling movie star in the country and winning the Golden Palm Tree award for Best Female Lead with this film.

At this point, Ding Shan became the first actress in Chinese film history to have won all five awards for an actress. She was also selected for the top ten most beautiful people of the year by the International media.

At this stage, the audience looked forward to Ding Shan going international and creating more legends.

However, they didn't expect any news of Ding Shan for nearly half a year at her peak.

Only today did the audience discover that Ding Shan was already married and had children.

Many people wished Ding Shan well, but at the same time, they were worried that she would return to her family and give up her career.

Three months after her pregnancy became a hot topic, Ding Shan's Times Studio released a picture of Ding Shan's schedule for the year's second half. Only then did the fans feel relieved. It seemed that Ding

Shan would film abroad in the second half of the year, and she might be working with a foreign director. It appeared that Ding Shan had no intention of giving up her career.

At the same time, Ding Shan's Times Studio was also developing very well. The young actors in the studio, represented by Yang Lu, had become the backbone of the domestic film and television industry. Ding Shan's studio style was the same as hers, rigorous, practical, and never involved in any unspoken rules or shady operations.

She wanted to make the other party pay for his evil deeds at all costs. When the actors in the studio were threatened by capital with unequal party treaties, Times Studio directly contacted their legal team to take the other to court. The lawsuit lasted two and a half years and cost tens of millions.

Under the influence of Times Studio, many domestic talent agencies were also slowly regulating their behavior.

As she said, Ding Shan began to use her small power to change the industry slowly.

At the end of the year, Ding Shan finished her filming overseas and returned to the studio to celebrate with her employees.

Yang Lu had set the venue for the gathering. After Ding Shan arrived, Xiang Hong called and said he would be coming too.

"What about the children?" Ding Shan asked, a little worried.

After she gave birth, she went out to work. Usually, Xiang Hong was the one who took care of the children. He had specially set up a well-equipped children's room in his office. He worked while taking care of the two children. Because of this incident, many people in his company called him the "President's nanny." Yin Hui even laughed at him crazily in private.

However, Xiang Hong himself did not care about these things. On the contrary, he enjoyed intimate time with his two children. His only regret was that Ding Shan was always too busy with work and could not accompany him.

But he also understood Ding Shan. Ding Shan had her dreams and pursuits. He was willing to stand behind her and guard her. This was also his promise to her when they were in love.

"I was going to send them to Xu Yan's house, but my parents insisted that I send the children over, saying they miss their grandchildren." Said Xiang Hong with a smile.

When Ding Shan wanted to marry Xiang Hong, the Xiang family unanimously opposed it. Without a second word, Xiang Hong had written a declaration of abandonment of his right of inheritance.
