Chapter 20

Just then, a knock came at the door, and in the next second, someone pushed into the room.

It was Eleanor.

She was wearing a sultry red dress that clung to her every curve.

She was as flamboyant as ever, and was practically bubbling with excitement.

Rosalynn took one look at Eleanor, her eyes narrowing slightly, before striding out of the office as quickly as she could.

The flush in Rosalynn's cheeks did not escape Eleanor's notice, and she instantly perked up.

Had Rosalynn been doing something with Brian when they were alone just now? ©

"Mr. Hughes."

Eleanor mustered her most charming smile and approached Brian.

Brian's brows furrowed into a dark scowl the moment his eyes landed on Eleanor.

"How did you know I'm here?" ©

The smile froze on Eleanor's face. Even a fool would know that Brian was in a foul mood.

"Lasked Edwin."

"What do you want?"

Brian took a pack of cigarettes out of his pocket and stood in front of the massive French windows. There was a significant chill in his tone.

“Well, there’s a party I’m attending this weekend. Do you think you can make time and be my plus one?”

Eleanor sidled up next to Brian and began rubbing against his arm.

The cloying scent of her perfume washed over him.

Brian pocketed his cigarettes again. He pulled away from her with a frown and walked back to his desk.

“I’m afraid I don’t have the time.”

He wasn’t nearly half as interested in her as he had been that night.

Perhaps it was the drug at work, but he had found her utterly irresistible back then.
