Chapter 372 Her Status Soared

Thirty minutes later, Luke entered the ward with his hands on his waist, limping and with a black eye.

Ryan was at his heels. Compared with Luke's discomfiture, Ryan's hair was carefully brushed, and he seemed as calm as he usually was. He looked as though he had just come back from a walk.

The porridge was finally ready. She filled two bowls—one for each of the two children. The instant she saw Luke's state, she choked and her eyes widened in shock. "Are you okay?" she asked with concern.

Luke cast a scornful glance at Ryan and nodded in response. "I'm fine."

Wendy hurriedly took off her apron and walked to Ryan, who then took it and hung it on the shelf.

"You beat him too hard, didn't you?" she asked in a low voice.

Ryan reassured her, "It's fine. He's used to it."

"What?" Wendy was dumbfounded.

Precious put down her spoon and explained, "Mommy, Daddy means that Uncle Luke is used to being beaten."

'How could someone get used to being beaten?' Wendy was flabbergasted.

"Daddy sometimes beat Uncle Luke all night long. Don't worry. Uncle Luke won't fall apart."

Luke was filled with grief and indignation upon hearing the little girl's words. 'How could she make fun of her own uncle?' He turned to look at Wendy and put on a pitiful look. "Wendy..."

"Are you okay?" she worriedly asked.

Luke was moved by her concern. Ironically, his future sister-in-law was more considerate than his brother.

All of a sudden, Luke straightened up and ran to Wendy with his phone in his hand. "Wendy, take a look at the comments about the latest episode of the Story of Concubine Ivanka. People are talking about you and Bruce. I can't blame them. I, too, cried when I watched it. I must say, you're so good at acting. I have a feeling that you'll be a hit because of this."

Wendy snatched the phone from his hand. She then scrolled through the comments and randomly read some.

"It hurts! Weston was such a gentleman. How could he die like that?! No wonder Faye changed and became the villain. No one can bear to see her beloved die miserably in front of her."

"Wendy's acting is so good. I've watched that scene again and again, and I still cry every time. Her acting is impressive."

"It turns out that the slaughter of Faye's family has something to do with Ivanka's family. No wonder Faye treated everyone else indifferently but became aggressive as soon as she saw Ivanka. Also, as I reviewed the previous episodes, I noticed that Faye has been hiding her true feelings all the time. Whenever she was with the emperor, she was indifferent. But her hands were clenched into fists, and sometimes, hatred could be seen in her eyes. The actress has done a good job in her character. She has a keen eye for detail."

"Faye looked different when she was an innocent little girl than after she became the emperor's woman. If it weren't for the same face, I wouldn't have believed that they were played by the same actress. Her character is dynamic, yet she nailed it every time! She's young, beautiful, and excellent at acting. I'm sure she'll be a big hit in the future!"

"From now on, I'll support Wendy!"

The comments were all positive.

Wendy scrolled some more to see if there was at least one person hating on her, but there was none. Needless to say, she made it this time.

In the next few days, Wendy's fame was unprecedentedly high. Because of the complexity of her role, those who criticized her before now became her fans. She even overshadowed the lead actress of the drama, Odette.

More importantly, Wendy successfully proved her innocence through her role as Faye.

Some time ago, a rumor had spread on the Internet saying that she got the role by selling her body. That hearsay was now proven to be nothing but an attempt to drag her down.

Her conflicts with Eris in the past had been dug out. Wendy's mother died when she was young. Her father never took care of her. She and her sister depended on each other. To make things worse, Eris stole her boyfriend and set her up, which resulted in Wendy being pregnant. She then gave birth before even knowing who the father of her child was and left for the US. Four years later, she returned to her home country as an actress.

It was then that she landed a role in the Story of Concubine Ivanka. However, her mishap did not stop there. As if she had not experienced enough hardships, Evie framed her.

Wendy's story was more miserable than Faye's. The audience could not help but feel sorry for her.

The number of Wendy's fans soared. Her Facebook followers skyrocketed from hundreds of thousands to eight million overnight. In just a few days, her followers rose to more than fifteen million! This increase was unprecedented in the entertainment industry.

Thanks to her excellent acting, Wendy got rid of those rumors, and her wealth and popularity shot up. To put it simply, she had become a sensation. She was now a star.

Aside from her fame, there was something else Wendy was excited about: Raymond was finally discharged from the hospital.

It took her a moment to regain her composure when Leo told her the news. Her son had been staying in the hospital for more than three months. And now, he could finally go home.

Wendy wept tears of joy.

As Raymond could finally be discharged from the hospital, he could now return to his normal life. The dreadful time had now passed. He could live a normal life and be a healthy boy as long as no accident happened.

"Thank you, Leo," Wendy said, her eyes brimmed with tears.

Leo glanced at Ryan, who was standing behind her, and replied, "If you want to thank someone, it's Ryan. He was the one who hired those experts."

Wendy looked at Ryan with tears in her eyes.

Ryan put his hand on her shoulder and patted her back awkwardly. "It's good news. Don't cry."

"I won't." Wendy sniffed and looked into his eyes. "Ryan—"

"There's no need to thank me," he interjected, his lips pursed in displeasure.

"Okay."

Wendy asked Ryan to go through the discharge formalities, to which he happily obliged. She then returned to the ward and relayed the good news to Raymond and Precious. The two kids were ecstatic.

Raymond was a reserved and introverted kid. Although he was happy, he just smiled. Precious, on the other hand, could not contain her glee. She pranced around the ward and cheered. "Yay! Ray can now be discharged from the hospital. We can finally go home. We don't have to go to the hospital anymore!"

The little girl's happiness was infectious. Even Wendy could not stop smiling.

It was on the 28th of December when Raymond was discharged from the hospital. As it was in late winter, the wind was chilly.

Once the discharge papers had been completed, they all went downstairs and wrapped themselves tightly in thick clothes. Ryan and Luke were in charge of carrying the bags, while Wendy was in charge of the children. Hand-in-hand with the children, she followed the two men out of the elevator.

"Mommy, it's snowing!" Precious exclaimed.

Wendy looked outside the window and saw that it was true.

It was snowing heavily, and the snowflakes became bigger as time went by. The cold wind blew. It caused some snowflakes to fall on her face, making her feel cold. This was the first snow since winter.

"Wow! It's so beautiful," Precious remarked while dancing with joy.

Wendy was joyous as well. She gazed at her children with a smile.

A good snowy year indicates a good harvest. It must be a prosperous year next year.

Wendy wrapped scarves around her children's necks, so they would not catch a cold. She then tightened her grasp on their hands and ran.

"Let's go! Let's go home to celebrate the New Year!"
