Chapter 397 God Is Blessing Me

Sam understood that Wendy must have known about his original plan to replace her with Odette. When he saw that Wendy was willing to let bygones be bygones and endorse their brand, he was overjoyed. "Alright! Why don't we head upstairs and discuss the details of the contract?"

Wendy was in no hurry to move. She pointed at her phone with an apologetic smile and said, "I'm sorry. I'm afraid I have to call Carter back first. You go ahead, and I'll be there with you in short while."

Sam glanced at the screen of Wendy's phone. It was indeed Carter. "It's not a problem. Just take your time. We'll go ahead."

"Okay."

Seeing them enter the elevator, Roger walked over and gave a thumbs up to Wendy. "Wendy! That was awesome!"

Wendy was very happy. Grinning widely, she said, "Roger, can you imagine the look on Odette's face when she hears the news?"

"Oh, words won't be enough to describe it."

The two smiled at each other happily.

Roger had a completely new admiration for Wendy. 'Odette was about to sign the contract with the client, yet Wendy was able to take it back from her. This woman can't be underestimated.'

Meanwhile, Wendy really did have to call Carter. It wasn't just an excuse. She dialed his number on her phone.

"Wendy?"

"Hi, Carter."

"I was just thinking about you when you called. Wendy, if you don't give me a decision today, I'll have to go to your company to see you in person." Carter's voice sounded a little anxious. "So, have you made up your mind? Would you like to act in my upcoming play?"

Deep inside, Carter really was a bit worried. He had held on to the script for many years before finally pursuing it. The script was very well written, so the requirement for the actors was quite demanding. It was difficult for him to find actors with the right skills for the play, and so the script had to be put aside for a long time.

While shooting the Story of Concubine Ivanka, Carter met Wendy and Jeffrey. When he saw them act, he knew that he had found the right actors. It gave him a new sense of urgency to see his script come to life.

However, it was not the right moment yet at that time. Now that the Story of Concubine Ivanka was broadcast, he finally had the opportunity to shoot a new play.

He had decided on casting Jeffrey as the hero. As for the heroine, Carter wanted to get Wendy.

However, Wendy had to politely refuse his offer because she had to take care of her son, who had just undergone an operation. To be honest, Carter was a little disappointed.

During this time, he had been looking for other actresses to play the part of the heroine, but he hadn't found anyone he was satisfied with. Every time he closed his eyes and imagined the scene in the script, he would always imagine Wendy playing the part.

Recently, he had heard from Jeffrey that Wendy's son was discharged from the hospital. He immediately contacted Wendy's agent, but her agent didn't give him a definite answer.

If it was someone else who dared to have the audacity to keep him waiting, Carter would ignore her without hesitation. However, this woman was Wendy. And he knew that she was in a special situation.

Carter thought, 'I've been waiting for this play for several years now. Why not wait a few more days?' Therefore, he patiently waited for her answer.

When he received a call from Wendy, he couldn't wait anymore.

"Wendy—"

"Yes. I agree!"

"Uh..." Caught off guard, Carter was speechless. He had prepared a lot of words to try and persuade her, but he didn't expect that he wouldn't have to use them. "You agree?"

"Carter, do I need to audition?"

"No. I absolutely believe in your acting skills." In a euphoric mood, Carter burst into laughter. "You didn't even discuss the talent fee before you agreed. Aren't you afraid that I would lowball you?"

Wendy chuckled lightly. "No. It would be my honor to act in your play. Even if you offered me a basic talent fee, I wouldn't mind."

Back then, her squabble with Eris was so severe people bashed her badly on the Internet. The investors put a lot of pressure on Carter to replace her. Surprisingly, Carter held his ground and Wendy was able to keep her role. She saw it as a huge favor. She had always kept in mind, with the intention of repaying him someday.

Carter was in excellent spirits. He laughed and said, "What a sweet talker! But don't worry. I won't give you just the basic salary. I'll give you a talent fee proportionate to the market price."

There were two ways to calculate the payment for actors. One was to set the price for each episode and then calculate the payment according to the number of episodes. The other method was to give a single amount for the whole show. With Wendy's current market value, the talent fee she would get from a TV series would be more than ten million dollars.

"It's settled then. Send me your location so I can mail you the script later. You'll need to familiarize yourself with the script first. When the producer hands over the funds, we'll choose a lucky day and hold the shooting ceremony!"

"Great!"

Just like that, they settled the contract for Carter's new play. Wendy had a lot of work coming her way.

After hanging up the phone, Wendy smiled brightly. 'What a good day! Not only did I land the lead role in Carter's new play, but I also successfully took back the contract to be DM's ambassador. On top of that, the company will also arrange a driver, an assistant, and a car for me. I think God is blessing me.'

Wendy and Roger waited downstairs for a while, leaving enough time for Sam to deal with Odette. When they thought it was about time, they took the elevator to the sixteenth floor together.

As soon as they stepped out of the elevator and reached the door to the meeting room, they heard Odette's harsh voice.

"Why?! Didn't we already agree on this? The contract has already been drawn up. Why did you change your mind all of a sudden? Are you making a fool of me? You've gone too far! Do you really think that I'm a pushover?"

Wendy and Roger waited outside the meeting room. The two of them exchanged knowing looks. Thinking of how Odette must have looked at that moment, they smiled at each other.

"She's so mad."

"She stole your endorsement. She deserves it!" Roger showed her a gloating look.

Looking at him, Wendy chuckled. She then walked to the door and knocked. The voice in the meeting room suddenly stopped.

Knock! Knock! She knocked on the door once again. However, there still was no movement inside the meeting room.

When Wendy raised her hand to knock again, the door suddenly swung open.

The first thing she saw was Odette's furious face. Wendy didn't have enough time to draw back her hand from the door, and she happened to knock on Odette's nose.

Odette trembled with anger.

With a smile, Wendy withdrew her hand and said in a sheepish voice, "Ah! I'm really sorry." Her cheery tone made it clear that she wasn't sorry at all.

Odette clenched her fists in anger and asked, "Wendy, what did you do?"

Wendy shrugged her shoulders. She took a step forward and spoke in a voice that only Odette and Roger could hear. "Calm down. Isn't it normal for a client to change their mind before signing the contract? Isn't that what you told me just now?"

Hearing this, Odette froze for a moment. And then, her face twisted in anger!
