

Chapter 399 I Have My Boyfriend

Wendy cocked her eyebrows and casually flipped the pen through her fingers. "Mr. Harris, are you sure this is your final decision?"

"Yes! I'm absolutely certain!" Sam nodded his head firmly.

Seeing that he had made up his mind, Wendy quickly signed her name on the last page of the contract. With a flourish, she pressed her fingerprint and returned the contract to Sam. Right away, he took out the company's seal and sealed it to complete the contract.

Both parties officially signed the contract. From this very moment moving forward, the contract was binding and had come into legal effect. Two copies of the contract were made. Each party kept a copy.

With a smile, Wendy got up from her seat and extended a hand out to Sam. "Wishing us a pleasant cooperation!"

"To a pleasant cooperation!"

Next to them, Odette was left in a daze. She didn't expect that after she lowered her endorsement fee again, Sam would end up choosing Wendy!

She didn't come back to her senses until after the contract was completed. "Why?" she yelled.

However, the contract had come into effect. What was the point of asking why?

In order to avoid losing even more face, Mary hurried to put a stop to her, fearing that she was about to do something crazy. "Odette, we have to get back to work. Let's hurry up and leave."

"No!" Odette's eyes blazed with anger. She shook Mary off and rushed to Sam's side. "Mr. Harris, please explain to me what is going on!"

Sam's face scrunched up into a frown. DM's ambassador was selected from a list of stars from Glory Media almost every year. Seeing that, he was hesitant to leave a bad impression with an actress from the very same media company.

He gave this some good thought and then spoke as politely as he could. "Miss Haska, the terms you offered are indeed very appealing and attractive, but we think that Miss Finch would be a better choice for our brand image."

"Stop dilly-dallying. I want to know the exact reason!"

Sam's annoyance was clear as day on his face. 'I have given her my excuse. She should accept it and let everything go. Why is she being so aggressive and turning this into a bigger embarrassment than it already is? Does she think that we have no other choice but to invite her as our ambassador?'

Earlier, Sam was feeling some regrets for giving up on Odette. However, after seeing her overreact just now, he now felt lucky instead. He found out that she was really such a silly woman! He really began to doubt her standing in the entertainment world.

He had thought over these things for a long time before making up his mind to sign the contract with Wendy. He wanted to take a gamble on her.

If the ambassador he picked was Odette, with her current popularity, his choice would be considered mediocre. But things would be different if he turned the contract over to Wendy. If she was really going to work with Carter in his next drama, this would make this a really good deal.

At the very least, even if the rumors of her collaboration with Carter were fabricated, with her rising popularity, she was more than qualified to endorse DM.

In addition, in regards to appearance and temperament, Wendy was a better choice than Odette.

Even in the most basic styles of clothes, she radiated charm and elegance. Sam was sure she would be able to bring some of the fresh feelings attached to her to their brand. Therefore, after giving this some thought, he decided to go with Wendy.

"Miss Haska—"

"Give me an explanation! Explain it to me now!" Odette was enraged.

Sam's features darkened noticeably as Odette interrupted him rudely again and again. He put the contract back into his briefcase and turned to look at Odette coldly. "There are things that we should consider before making our choice. As for the reason behind our decision, we have no comment!"

Sam was not a stupid man. Just by gauging the current situation, he could tell that he would have to offend either Wendy or Odette. Since he had already chosen Wendy, the person he would have to offend had to be Odette.

"You've gone too far this time!" A fiery rage was burning in Odette's eyes.

Wendy could not help but sneer. She didn't mind bickering openly with Odette at this point. She handed her copy of the contract to Roger and stared at Odette with cold eyes.

"What on earth are you talking about? Who has gone too far this time? The deal with DM was originally something my agent cooked up. You got in the middle of my affairs and tried to steal my endorsement away. Now that the contract is out of your hands, you should have put a lid on your offensive behavior and tried to act nice in order to win over some dignity. Yet you made a big deal out of things and went as far as to blame me for going overboard. Don't you think you are being ridiculous?"

"Shut your mouth! Wendy, you are such a scheming woman!"

Wendy shrugged her shoulders and said, "If you get the endorsement today, would you still think this way?"

Anger started to well up in Odette's throat. She pointed a trembling finger at Wendy, but she could not come up with anything to refute her words.

Seeing this made Wendy chuckle. The others turned to look at Odette with strange expressions. What transpired today totally changed how they saw Odette. Odette, who appeared gentle, generous, and straightforward in the front of the camera, just showed her true face. This was a really eye-opening moment for all of them.

Sam moved his gaze away and instead turned to look at Wendy. "Miss Finch, the shooting slot for the ad has been confirmed. It's scheduled for the day after tomorrow. We will let you know by then."

"Alright."

"Bye!"

"See you later!"

After Sam and his group made their way out of the meeting room, the people from the advertising company also departed one after another.

As for the staff members of the company, they were not brain dead. They still thought Odette would marry Ryan one day. None of them dared to laugh at her. Therefore, they instantly hurried to rush out one by one.

Soon, all that was left was Odette, Mary, Wendy, and Roger in the meeting room.

After everyone else left, Odette didn't try hiding her resentment any longer. "Wendy! How dare you!"

Wendy blinked her eyes and decided to play dumb. "Is there anything I can do for you? If there's nothing important, I really have to head out now."

Odette's hands tightened into fists. The calmer Wendy appeared, the angrier Odette got.

Seeing that Wendy was just about to leave the room, Odette made her way to the door and blocked her path.

"You are something, Wendy!"

"I have to say I'm flattered!"

"I don't care whatever means you used to steal it away from me, but I won't let you get away with this!" Odette clenched her teeth tightly and her eyes became as venomous as a snake's.

Wendy was amused by Odette's words. "Is she threatening me? That is her mistake. You can sway me with reason, but I will not be intimidated by force!"

Wendy lifted her chin slightly and said, "I'll be waiting!" She and Odette were at each other's throats from the very start. And now that their fight was out in the open, she would stand up to her.

"Fine! You are certainly daring!" Odette was beyond angry at this point.

Wendy, in turn, gave her a sweet smile. "I'm not daring. But I do have a powerful boyfriend!"

When she thought of Ryan, her face lit up into a brighter smile. "Hum! With my boyfriend behind me, I'm totally fearless!"

"You must calm down, Odette," Mary said.

After Wendy and Roger left the room, Odette and Mary were the only ones who stayed behind. Seeing that Odette was shaking from head to toe, Mary grabbed her by the arm and said, "Odette, it's nothing but an endorsement from a small brand. When your agent returns, you will definitely be awarded an endorsement from an international brand. So don't waste your energy being angry about it."

"It's different! It's completely different!"

'After this day, the news that I tried to steal Wendy's endorsement but failed would spread all over the company. As the future Mrs. Oliver, this is such a humiliating blow to me!'

"Odette..."

Odette pounded her fist heavily onto the table in the meeting room and shouted out loud angrily, "Wendy! She made a complete fool out of me in front of so many people. I will never let her get away with this! Never! Absolutely never!"

"Odette, what do you plan to do?"

"Ban her from the industry!"
