

Chapter 405 Introduce You To A Man

Ding!

The elevator doors opened. They made their way out of the elevator. As soon as they entered the hall, they saw Rosie sitting on a sofa.

Right when they saw Rosie, the latter just so happened to lift up her head to meet their gaze.

When Rosie saw Kane and Wendy emerging from out of the same elevator, her eyes narrowed into two slits.

Just now, Rosie had made a phone call to Kane's secretary and the information was confirmed.

The deputy director of the PR department was indeed fired because he put something into Kane's suit pocket. This meant that everything Odette mentioned to her was true. Even if Rosie had some doubts just now, seeing Kane and Wendy walking out of the elevator together made her believe what Odette said.

Rosie's hands clenched tightly into fists. 'That bitch! How dare Wendy seduce my husband?!'

Rosie was shaking from head to toe from anger, and she could hardly stand it. But she didn't dare challenge Kane.

Rosie clenched her teeth and quickly rearranged her facial expression. Getting up, she grabbed her bag and made her way up to him.

"Honey, why are you off work so late? What took you so long? I've been here waiting for you all this time." Rosie marched right up to Kane and grabbed hold of his arm as if marking her territory.

Involuntarily, Wendy turned to look at Roger. He lowered his gaze, and his expression was covered by his hair, but she could feel his sadness emanating off his body.

Kane also turned to look at Roger when Rosie grabbed him. He quickly shook her hand off and gave her a cold look. "What are you doing here?"

"Honey..." Rosie gave him a sad look. But Kane was unfazed.

Rosie bit her bottom lip and bent her head down, saying in a sad voice, "I know you usually don't like me coming down to the company, but... There are outsiders present. Can't you try and treat me nicer?" She emphasized the word "outsider" on purpose.

Kane's eyes became two frosty points.

Rosie gave him a bitter smile. "It wasn't my idea to come here today. It was your parent's idea. They want you to come home for dinner tonight."

Narrowing his eyes at her, Kane asked, "You complained to them again, didn't you?"

"I said nothing!" Being reprimanded by Kane in front of Wendy, Rosie felt a loss of face. "Your parents said they haven't seen you at home for such a long time. It's only been five days since the New Year's Day. They don't want you to overexert yourself, so they asked me to—"

"Tell them I'm very busy!"

"But you need to eat," Rosie insisted. "They already did their grocery shopping. Your mom said that she will personally cook for you. Please come home after getting off work."

Kane's face scrunched up into a frown.

"Honey..."

"Fine. I'll be there."

The light in Rosie's eyes brightened. "Then I'll head home and help her out."

"Alright, then."

Rosie hugged Kane's arm again, pouted, and acted coquettish. "Honey, I've been down here waiting for you for two hours. I missed lunch." She rubbed her belly like she was starving. "I'm so hungry that I'm about to collapse. Do you want to have lunch with me?"

Kane glanced over at Roger subconsciously.

Wendy was right beside Roger. Rosie thought Kane was looking at Wendy. She ground her teeth violently. She smiled as if she had just noticed Wendy. "Ah! Wendy."

"Mrs. Evans," Wendy said to her in an indifferent voice.

"I'm your cousin, Wendy. Stop being so polite." Leaning her head against Kane's shoulder, Rosie stared at her with a smile. "You have yet to eat lunch, right? Do you want to join us?"

Rosie had always sided with Eris, so she and Wendy didn't exactly get along well. Though they might be cousins, they had never been close. In fact, they were more like relative strangers than family. Rosie wanted her to join them for lunch? Of course, she must have some sort of ulterior motive for asking her to come out.

Wendy refused, "No, I can't. My son is at home right now waiting for me."

"Oh, it almost slipped my mind that you have a son." Rosie sighed theatrically. "Wendy, you are a woman and you have a kid. You have to work to support your family. This must be hard for you. Well, in my eyes, women shouldn't work as hard as men. It's a women's role to stay at home to take care of her husband and child. What about this? Kane knows many business moguls. I'll ask him to have you introduced to one someday. What do you think about this?"

Wendy was rendered speechless. "Rosie never cares about me. What's going on? Is she just acting nice because Kane is present?"

Anyway, Wendy and Rosie would never end up clicking. This much she was sure of.

Before she could speak up, Kane said in a cold voice, "Stop with your nonsense!"

'Introduce someone to Wendy? If Ryan finds out, I will be doomed!'

However, these words had a completely different meaning to Rosie.

Rosie's hands tightened into fists. 'Huh? Why is he acting so agitated? Does imagining Wendy with another man get him riled up?'

This made Rosie sure that something must be going on between Kane and Wendy. Her hands were shaking. She wished she could just grab Wendy's hair and scratch her face! But she did her best to suppress her frustration.

"Honey—"

"Aren't we heading out to lunch? Let's get going!" Kane walked ahead.

"Hey! Honey, wait! Wait for me!" Rosie walked faster in order to catch up to Kane. Though she was wearing high heels, she walked very fast. In a matter of time, she caught up with him and clutched his arm.

Before they got far, Rosie's coquettish voice could still be heard. "Honey, it's so cold outside. I want to have a latte to warm myself up."

They didn't hear what Kane responded, but they saw Rosie smiling brightly. They knew that she was pleased by whatever Kane's answer was.

Rosie turned her head and squinted her eyes at Wendy.

Wendy was bewildered by the look Rosie was giving her. 'She is such a psychopath.'

Wendy turned to give Roger a worried look. "Roger..."

"I'm doing okay. Let's get going," Roger said.

Wendy wanted to ask if he was doing alright, but she couldn't ask him in front of Jasmine. She could only pat him on the arm to reassure him without saying a word.

They had been friends for a long time. Just from his expression, she could tell that he was feeling sad. It was not that she was biased. But Kane was such a bastard.

Kane and Roger shared something wonderful, but Kane couldn't bear the pressure and broke things off between them. Now that he was already married and Roger was embarking on his new life, he showed his face in front of Roger again.

'What an asshole! Roger is so soft-hearted. If it were me, I would yell at Kane and tell him to fuck off! But it was a good thing that Roger saw Kane and Rosie together. Rosie is not an easy woman to deal with. If she finds out that Kane has feelings for Roger, the whole city will know.'

Wendy wasn't aware that Rosie saw her as an enemy she had to vanquish. She was doing everything in her power to make sure Wendy was taken out of the picture.

