

Chapter 407 The Oliver Family

Outside the company, snow was falling nonstop.

"It's so cold." Rosie shivered, trying to get Kane's attention.

Normally, in situations like this one, a man would take off his own coat and lend it to his wife.

Rosie thought this was the case, but then, she was sorely mistaken.

Kane just looked at how she was dressed and remarked, "Didn't you know that before you wore that dress?"

Rosie was surprised at how apathetic he was towards her. Her heart felt even colder than her skin. Trying to hold back her anger, she held onto Kane's arm and said, "I feel warmer with I'm with you."

As if to add insult to injury, Kane pushed her away.

Rosie staggered, almost falling down. She bit her lip, staring at him with widened eyes. "Kane..."

But then she noticed that Kane was staring back at her with an impassive face. Quietly, snowflakes fell from the heavens, raining down on them. She could feel that there was a vast distance between them.

"Go home," he said.

"I thought we're having lunch together."

"I never said yes to that," said Kane.

Rosie stood there, feeling defeated. "But..."

"And what was that for?" he asked.

Rosie lowered her gaze and felt aggrieved. "Didn't you say that we're supposed to pretend like a loving couple?"

Kane took a deep breath in an attempt to calm himself down. Fortunately, the fresh air sobered him up. "There's no one else here. We don't have to act."

"Kane..."

"You should go home," he said again.

'Is he being so cold to me because I ruined his chances of being with Wendy?' Rosie wasn't going to accept this. 'I know I'm not as pretty as Wendy, but are there any other qualities I'm inferior to that bitch? She didn't receive much education, and she even has a child. What on earth does Kane even find attractive about her?'

"Kane," she called out again.

"Go home!"

"But your parents asked you to go home for dinner tonight."

"I'll come home then."

"I..." Rosie stammered.

When Kane remembered how indifferent Roger was earlier, he finally ran out of patience. He glared at Rosie and said, "Don't forget about our prenuptial agreement!"

Rosie bit her lower lip as her eyes welled up with tears. She was well aware of the fact that she had to calm down, but she just couldn't.

"Kane Evans! We've been married for almost five years. Even though our marriage is a deal, we've been together for so long. Haven't you even developed the slightest affection for me after all this time?"

"No!" Kane said crossly.

Tears began to roll down Rosie's cheeks. "Kane..."

In stark contrast to her reaction, Kane was ruthlessly composed. He squinted at her and warned, "Rosie, I pay you a hundred thousand dollars every month!"

Rosie felt like she was choked.

Kane sneered at her. 'She accuses me of being heartless while taking my money? This is ridiculous!'

To him, Rosie was just a highly-paid employee, and he could never fall in love with one of his employees.

'You are crossing the line, Rosie!' he warned.

'I...'

'If this happens again, our marriage is as good as over!'

Rosie was taken aback. 'Kane...'

'Enough! When it's just us, you're supposed to call me Mr. Evans!'

Rosie's tears streamed down her face.

But even though she looked pitiful, Kane did not have a shred of remorse for her. He just strode away and left her there.

Rosie stood rooted to her spot, watching him walk away.

The snow was falling heavier and heavier by the minute. Soon, her hair and shoulders were covered with snow, and she was frozen stiff. But no matter how physically cold she was feeling, her heart was even colder at this moment.

Back then, even though she never got along well with him, Kane never said anything so hurtful. But mere seconds ago, he even threatened her that their marriage would be over.

'Why is he doing this to me? Is it because he has someone else now? Wendy... It's that God damned Wendy again! Does that tramp have a hobby of stealing her relatives' men? First, she stole Brian from Eris. And now, she is stealing Kane from me? Fuck her! I'm never going to forgive her if Kane divorces me!'

Moments later, Rosie got into the car and went home.

Kane and Rosie lived in a duplex apartment. Although this place belonged to them both, in reality, he had only been here a handful of times. Most of the time, Rosie lived here all alone. Yes, there were maids, drivers, chefs, and even cleaning ladies in the house. But aside from them, she was on her own.

Rosie's daily routine consisted of dressing up beautifully, staying at home and watching TV, or asking the chauffeur to take her out to go shopping and drink coffee. For most people, she lived a coveted life.

And because her life here was easy and carefree, she couldn't allow herself to go back to the old life she lived before.

Soon, the car pulled over. Rosie took her purse, walking towards the apartment building in low spirits.

"Rosie, you're home," said Katelyn, Kane's mother.

"I am."

Katelyn looked behind Rosie, only to be disappointed that Kane wasn't there with her. "Isn't Kane coming home as well?"

A bitter smile appeared on Rosie's lips. "He's busy."

"Did he say he'll come back for dinner at least?"

"He didn't tell me anything."

Katelyn noticed that Rosie was in a bad mood, so she walked over towards her and dusted off the snow all over her. "What's the matter, Rosie? Did he say something that upset you?"

Rosie forced a smile. "Not really. He's just too busy. I waited for him there for two hours before I finally managed to see him. He may not be able to come back for dinner, but it's okay. I'll ask the chef to cook for us."

Upon hearing that, Katelyn was annoyed. "Kane made you wait for two hours?"

Tears began to well up in Rosie's eyes as she sniffed. "Don't worry about me. He's a man, after all. Career is the most important thing for him. He works hard so that he can give us a better life."

Her response made Katelyn felt fortunate to have her as a daughter-in-law, but at the same time, she felt guilty for Rosie. She was glad to know that her daughter-in-law was so considerate and sensible, but also, she felt guilty about hiding the past between Kane and Roger from her. ○

Katelyn and Paul decided to move in with Kane and Rosie, in hopes of helping their relationship develop. The two had only moved in here for a few days, and they had no idea about how easy and happy Rosie's life was. They really believed that she had been suffering because of Kane.

Katelyn sighed and patted Rosie's hand. "Sweetheart, I'm so sorry that you have to go through this."

"Mom, I really am okay," said Rosie.

Katelyn sighed again. "She's such a good woman. Why can't my son see how great she is?"

When Rosie was about to go upstairs, she ran into Paul coming out of his room. He was wearing a suit, looking quite energetic. The sight of his attire made Rosie glance over at Katelyn, and that was when she noticed that Katelyn was wearing a formal dress and a pearl necklace.

Stunned, Rosie asked, "Are you going out?"

"Yep! We're going to visit our old friends," Katelyn replied. "Would you like to come with us?"

"Who are you visiting?" asked Rosie.

"We are going to visit the Oliver family."

 Exclusive Offer For You

GO NOW