

Chapter 240 Your Wife Isn’t A Gambling Person?

Ryan looked at the woman on the ground, who was in a sorry state. His eyes were extremely sharp and his whole body emitted a cold aura. He looked like a devil who just came out of the hell.

"Brother-in-law, Charles Monor, come out now! Do you really not care about this matter?"

Aurora shouted loudly from the bottom of the building.

Charles, who was about to rest, heard the voice and was annoyed. He walked out of his room and stood at the corner of the second floor. "What exactly do you want to do?"

However, when Charles saw Ryan, he instantly guessed what was going on.

He walked to the first floor and looked at Ryan. "When did you come back?"

Charles was much more polite. Probably because the entire Monor family was relying on Ryan, even his tone became gentle.

"I just arrived. I didn't expect there to be such a good show at home." Ryan had a playful expression on his face.

Only then Charles remembered that Aurora had called him just now. He frowned and looked impatient. "What do you want? Didn't I say it just now? I told you to leave quickly."

"How can you say that? Aurora is my sister, my biological sister! Are you going to let her go just like that?"

“When Monor family was in trouble, my brother-in-law took out a sum of money to help us. As a person, you should know how to be grateful." Amanda interrupted and retorted Charles.

It was fine if Amanda did not mention this matter, but when it came to Charles, his face was filled with impatience.

"You still have the face to talk about this matter? They did help us back then, and I will be grateful for it for the rest of my life. But don't forget how you helped your sister and brother-in-law all these years!"

“Their family is like a bottomless pit for you to throw money into. Don't you understand?"

Usually, he could turn a blind eye to Amanda’s actions, but since they wanted to make this matter public, Charles naturally had a hundred words waiting for them.

"Alright! I didn't expect that your family is all ungrateful people. Amanda, you better remember this. From today onwards, I don't need a single cent from your family!"

Aurora said to Amanda and turned to Charles, “Charles, you said I'm gambling? Your wife isn't a gambling person? Ask her how much money she owes outside!"

Aurora felt that there was no need to help her sister to hide anymore. It would be more comfortable to say it out loud. If they wanted to continue arguing, Aurora would be happy to say everything.

"Aurora, shut up. Didn't you promise that you will never tell me this matter?" Amanda never would have thought that Aurora would easily say this matter out loud.

Back then, she had indeed gambled but she had already paid off her debts. Why should Aurora use this matter to talk about it?

Amanda was somewhat anxious and looking at her anxiety, Charles's face was full of disbelief. He did not think that his wife was also a person who gambled well.

"What did you say? Aurora, tell me again."

He could not even defend against his own wife.

"Why? You don't believe me? Back then, she wanted to gamble, so she took me to that place. Now that she has returned the money, I have to face such a huge hole. There is no such thing as this in the world! Let me tell you, even if you don't help me with this money, I still have a way to return it!"

Finishing, Aurora angrily took her things and left without turning back.

The heavy sound of the door closing could be heard. Amanda carefully raised her head to look at Charles. "Listen to my explanation. Actually this matter. . . Is my younger sister, my younger sister, she. . . "

"Your sister forced you to gamble? She took your money and brought you to bet? You still have the face to bargain with me here? Amanda, I never believed that you were a bad woman in the past, but how could you do something like gambling? Did you forget how Jonathan almost lost the Lewis family's company?"

“If it wasn't for Ryan lending him money, we wouldn't have known how the Lewis Group would be doing right now. How dare you participate in that kind of bet? Speak! How much did you lose to our family?"

Charles originally thought that his wife was only using the family's property to support his younger sister and brother-in-law. He did not expect that she would also participate in the gambling.

What good would it be to be involved with a woman like Aurora? Why did this woman not understand? Why did she not understand!

Amanda instantly knelt on the ground and hugged Charles's thigh, "It's not what you think. I don't have that intention. I just couldn't hold it in for a moment before gambling. Trust me. . . That was my first gambling. There will definitely not be a next time. I beg you. . . Please don't kick me out."

"I'm asking you now, how much did you lose to our family?"

Charles could not get angry anymore. He had always hated Aurora and her husband for gambling outside. He did not expect his wife to be such a person.

Author Note: Dear readers, thank you so much for reading my books. I really appreciate your love and support. Due to some personal problems I am unable to update regularly sometimes. I apologize for my delay. I hope you guys don't mind it.