

Chapter 280 My Son Doesn't Need A Father

"Did you fight with our daughter again?"

Amber's mother, Matilda, walked down from upstairs. When she was resting, she had heard the noise coming from downstairs just now.

Taylor's face was extremely gloomy. "Your good daughter thinks that she has a pair of well-developed wings. She no longer thinks highly of me, her father."

Taylor slapped the armrest of the sofa heavily. He was extremely furious with Amber's behavior. If it was not for the fact that he needed Amber for the marriage alliance, he would have strangled her to death.

"Can't we just talk it out nicely? Every time our daughter comes back, the two of you will have a big fight. Why?" Matilda sat at the side and tried to persuade her husband.

All these years, as a mother, she had indeed owed her daughter. When Amber was a child, Matilda focused on her son and ignored Amber. When Amber was sent away, Matilda did not take a stand for her daughter.

So ever since she brought Amber back, Matilda had been taking care of her daughter. However, she did not expect that her daughter's relationship with the family would get worse and worse over the years.

"Why should I talk to her nicely? I had already agreed to a marriage alliance between the two families with the Langford family, but when Amber came back, she rejected it directly. Isn't this making me break my promise? Where will I put my face in the future?"

Taylor's face was full of anger. He had never suffered such a petty grievance before.

Matilda sighed helplessly. "This can't be blamed entirely on Amber. She was sent out since she was young, so the education she received was different from ours. After she was brought back, that kind of thing happened again. If it was anyone else, they wouldn't be able to accept it."

Sometimes, Matilda also thought that if they didn't send Amber away back then, would there be a different result?

However, Taylor didn't listen to her advice. "This is her life. Now that the Thomas family no longer has a man, as a child of the Thomas family, she must shoulder this responsibility."

The Thomas family originally had two children, Amber and her brother. Because Amber's brother was a man, he was favored since childhood.

Taylor had raised his son for more than twenty years, but unexpectedly, his son died in a helicopter crash. This accident was so deadly that Taylor could not even find his son's corpse. If it was anyone else, they would have been bedridden by now.

Matilda knew that Taylor was determined to marry Amber to William. Once Taylor decided on something, no one would be able to change it.

"Call Amber and ask her to come back as soon as possible. Otherwise, don't blame me, her father, for being rude to her." Taylor held back his anger and ordered.

Helpless, Matilda could only call Amber.

Amber, who ran out, sat in the car with a face full of anger. She had already sacrificed her youth for this family. Could it be that she still had to sacrifice the happiness for the rest of her life?

At this time, the phone at the side buzzed and the screen displayed her mother's number.

When she saw the word "Mom" displayed on the screen, Amber's eyes finally revealed a touch of gentleness.

In the Thomas family, it was only her mother, who was good to her.

"Hello." Amber answered the phone.

"Amber, did you quarrel with your Dad again today?" Matilda asked carefully.

Hearing this, Amber's face suddenly became gloomy: "Mom, if you want to be my dad's lobbyist, then you don't have to continue talking."

"Amber, listen to me. Mom knows that you do not like to be ordered by others, but you must know that the Langford family is the head of the four big families in the capital. If you can marry into their family, you can guarantee the glory and wealth for the rest of your life."

Matilda tried to persuade her. In the Thomas family, the only one who could talk to Amber was Matilda.

Hearing this, Amber sneered. She thought that her mother called to comfort her, but she didn't expect her mother to be on the same team as Taylor.

The only difference was that Taylor was rude and Matilda was gentle to her. But the intention of both of them was same.

Use her as a chess piece for the power and glory of the Thomas family.

Amber took a deep breath and said. "Not to mention the head of the four big families in the capital, even if it is the son of the richest man in the world, I will still not marry him. All of you give up on this idea."

Did they think that the people from the Langford family were good people?

Everyone in the capital knew that she had been defiled in the past. There was also a child. This was a stain on the reputation of the wealthy families.

The Langford family clearly had a plot to marry her even though they knew about this. This showed their intention.

"Why don't you listen to my advice? Even if you don't think about yourself, you have to think about Sam. Sam is already ten years old now. You can't possibly let him never have a father, right?" Matilda tried her best to persuade Amber.

"My son doesn't need a father." Amber said coldly.

"But. . ."

"Mom!" Amber interrupted Matilda sternly, "I don't want you to tell me about this matter over the phone. I still have something to deal with, so I'll hang up first."

Before Matilda could say anything, Amber hung up the phone in an instant.

Amber held the steering wheel tightly, her nails dug deep into the cover of the steering wheel.

No one in the Thomas family was thinking about her. In their eyes, the benefits in front of them were the most important.

After calming herself down, Amber took the plane ticket that Butler Lee had prepared for her and went to the airport.

If they wanted to cause trouble, then so be it. Now that she had to go abroad to deal with matters, it could be considered to be a quiet place to hide.

