

Chapter 407 She Lost Her Memory

Several years ago, Sabrina experienced a car accident that resulted in the loss of part of her memory. When she returned home, she found herself disconnected from Bella, unable to recall who Bella was.

Bella didn't recognize Sabrina now because they hadn't seen each other for years.

Thinking of her memory loss, Sabrina couldn't believe what a coincidence it was.

Then, Sabrina asked Bella directly, "Do you remember your friend's full name?"

After some thought, Bella recalled her friend's full name. She replied, "Yes. Her real name was Sabrina. Sabrina Chavez."

Sabrina was shocked. She sat wide-eyed with her mouth agape.

"You... Are you Sabrina?" Bella asked in disbelief, raising her eyebrows after seeing Sabrina's reaction.

"Yes, I am," Sabrina replied with surprise. She couldn't believe it and was momentarily left speechless.

"Then you... Can't you recognize me? Do you remember when you couldn't locate the classroom when you first arrived at the university? I was the one who showed you where it was. You used my ID card to borrow books from the library before you got yours. Every time James assigned homework, I would copy yours..."

Bella recounted numerous memories from their past. She said quickly and with great enthusiasm, "Before you went back, you promised me that you would stay in touch when you got home."

We always hung out together before you came back, having quite a blast. But after you left, I couldn't contact you at all!"

As Bella recalled everything, her expression shifted to one of sadness. She screwed up her face, appearing confused and with mixed emotions, as if on the verge of tears.

Seeing Bella like this, Sabrina felt a pang of guilt.

Sabrina hurriedly explained, "Bella, I'm so sorry. I didn't mean to hurt your feelings. I had a car accident before I came back, and after that, I couldn't remember some things clearly."

Collen chimed in, "She's telling the truth. She hasn't even contacted Alex since she came back. She might not be here today if she hadn't accidentally enrolled in Alex's photography class."

"If you don't believe me, I can show you my hospitalization record from that time," Sabrina hastily added.

Bella stared at Sabrina and said, "That won't be necessary. I believe you."

"What a coincidence that we ran into each other again after all these years. We used to be friends," Sabrina said, smiling. "Bella, have you had dinner? It's my treat today."

"Actually, no, I haven't. When my friend told me she saw Adonis with another pretty girl, I immediately rushed over," replied Bella.

"Then order whatever you like." Sabrina signaled the waiter to come over, and he brought a set of tableware.

Bella knew that Sabrina wasn't short of money, so she flipped through the menu and said mischievously, "I'm going to order extra dishes now!"

After placing their orders, Bella added, "I knew you weren't that kind of person. When I didn't hear from you, I got anxious and went to Mathias for you. I wanted to find you but didn't know where to start looking. I did some sightseeing for a few days and then returned."

Bella's efforts to locate Sabrina indicated the strength of their past relationship.

"It doesn't matter. We were destined to meet again after a few years," Sabrina said happily.

Bella nodded in agreement. "You're right. We were destined to meet again."

Bella picked up a goblet, poured herself half a glass of red wine, and toasted. "To our friendship. Cheers!"

"Cheers!" The three of them raised their glasses and clinked them together, joking and reminiscing as they ate.

Given the long time since Bella had seen Sabrina, Bella was eager to catch up on what Sabrina had been up to all this time.

Sabrina hoped to fill in the gaps and was interested in learning about what had happened during the time she spent in Philade before the accident resulted in her memory loss.

Bella held onto the fond memories of their time together and vividly recounted every detail of that period. Like a captivating story, she shared it all with Sabrina. It felt surreal for Sabrina to hear about a part of her life she couldn't remember. However, oddly, it all sounded familiar to her.

Collen, sitting aside, didn't get a chance to join the conversation. He sat there silently, listening to the two while cutting the steak for Bella.

Bella suddenly thought of something and asked, "How are you feeling now?"

Sabrina creased her brows, a little confused by the sudden question. "I'm great." She thought she may have had a health issue in the past that she couldn't recall and asked, "Why, what's wrong?"

"Nothing. I remember you weren't in good condition for some

"I see. But I've been in good condition these years," Sabrina said, shrugging her shoulders. She didn't overthink it.

Sabrina was aware there were some thyroid gland-related diseases where patients needed to take hormone pills, affecting metabolism and causing weight gain. Sabrina just assumed that she must have had that problem back then.

"That's good to hear." Bella smiled and asked, "Are you here to continue your studies?"

"No, I'm going to be working here."

"Settling down?"

"Sort of."

Bella suggested, "I can recommend you to my dad's company if you like."

Sabrina smiled. "Thank you for your kindness, but I'm a photographer now."

"Oh, a photographer?" Bella smiled in surprise. "Can you take some photos of me? I've always wanted some nice pictures."

"Of course." Sabrina readily agreed.

"I didn't expect that you'd become a photographer! I remember that you did well in your major courses."

Back then, Bella needed to be more active in her studies. Growing up in a wealthy family, she was somewhat lazy. However, she tried her best to graduate from school successfully.

"I had a job that matched my major when I was in Mathias. But I needed a change after having the same job for a long time," Sabrina explained.

"Alright then. So, tell me, have you found a boyfriend in the past few years since you returned to Mathias?" Bella asked curiously, raising an eyebrow.

With a faint smile, Sabrina answered, "I was married once. I came to Philade because I didn't want to see my ex-husband again."

Bella didn't think it was a big deal. She asked curiously, "Is your ex-husband the same one you have loved for many years?"

At that time, Kevin had feelings for Sabrina, but he was rejected.

Bella also knew that Blayze liked Sabrina. However, Sabrina was merely grateful to him for his help but considered him only a friend, despite his feelings.

Bella remembered asking about the reason. Sabrina once explained that she had loved someone in Mathias for many years and wanted to be near him, even if she couldn't be with him. So, she never considered staying in Philade.

Collen suddenly pricked up his ears. He hadn't heard anything about this from Blayze before. But it was the first time he had seen Blayze so enthusiastic about an exchange student who had only been in Philade for a year. He assumed Blayze must have had a crush on Sabrina.

Sabrina was stunned. She didn't expect to be discussing Tyrone with Bella.

At that time, she was too young and had naive ideas about love.

"It's him. When I was with him, I found that I had thought highly of him," Sabrina reluctantly replied.

Bella nodded her head in agreement. "I feel you. So, I'm still an unmarried person."

Collen was rendered speechless.

Sabrina glanced at Collen's expression and laughed. "It's better not to be married."

After chatting with Bella, Sabrina lost track of time, realizing it was already 9 p.m.

Before parting ways, Bella made plans with Sabrina to explore Philade together the next day.

Returning to her hotel room, Sabrina started picking out clothes for the following day.

After all these years, the unexpected reunion with Bella brought surprise and excitement.

Sabrina felt it would be easier to adapt to this unfamiliar place and settle into her new life with her old friend.

She was excited about her future, though she needed to promptly confirm her job and residence.
