

Chapter 460 Let You Relax

As she spoke, Sabrina turned her head to look at Jennie lying next to her. Jennie was sleeping soundly.

Sabrina feared Jennie might wake up at any time. She didn't want Jennie to catch them in the act.

Tyrone said nothing. He exhaled deeply, and his warm breath made Sabrina's hair stand on end. He then began kissing her earlobe.

Sabrina felt like she was losing her mind. Her body quivered, and her toes curled up in pleasure.

Suddenly, Sabrina came to her senses and held Tyrone's hand. "You... What are you doing?"

"I'm helping you relax," Tyrone whispered in her ear.

"No..." she pleaded.

"I'll let you sleep after this."

Sabrina was at a loss. She bit her lip and, in a trembling voice, implored, "Tyrone... Stop... Please don't... Jennie is next to me... Don't..."

Sabrina was aroused. Just then, her body stiffened. She stared at the ceiling and panted heavily as she came.

Tyrone kissed her on the cheek and wiped her body with a wet tissue. Then, he let go of her and lay on the other side of the bed. "Let's go to sleep."

Sabrina was speechless. As drowsiness washed over her, she soon succumbed to slumber.

When Tyrone headed to Mathias International Airport to pick up

Sabrina, Keilani happened to arrive at the same time.

The moment Keilani set foot in the airport, she spotted a familiar figure—tall, handsome, and resembling a model in his well-fitting attire. Tyrone was impossible to miss.

Keilani felt a surge of joy. But just as she was about to greet Tyrone, Sabrina approached Tyrone.

Keilani stopped in her tracks, and her expression darkened. She couldn't help but ball her hands into fists.

Keilani recalled being informed by the chairman of that shooting company that her schemes to delay Sabrina's return failed. Sabrina had somehow seen through the situation and even hired a lawyer to sue the company before returning home.

Keilani couldn't fathom why her schemes always failed whenever Sabrina was involved. She cursed silently.

Standing from afar, Keilani saw Sabrina standing on tiptoes and walking over to Tyrone. Sabrina was just a few steps away from Tyrone when her phone chimed. After checking the notification, Sabrina noticed Tyrone had spotted her.

Keilani fixated her gaze on them. Tyrone effortlessly hoisted Sabrina's suitcase with one hand and intertwined his fingers with Sabrina's. Then, they strolled away, engaged in lively conversation and laughter.

Jealousy coursed through Keilani. A bitter taste welled up within her as if something were constricting her heart, making it difficult to breathe.

It was disheartening to see how tender Tyrone could be with Sabrina, while with her, he was always cold and distant. What did Sabrina have that she did not have? Tyrone didn't even spare her a glance!

"Keilani?" Alice called out. She had finally emerged from the airport. Upon seeing Keilani standing nearby, she approached Keilani with her luggage in tow. However, Alice noticed that Keilani's gaze was fixed on something, and she was lost in thought. "Keilani?"

"Huh?" Keilani snapped back to reality and turned to find Alice by her side. Keilani forced a smile and said, "You're here. Let's go."

"What were you looking at just now?" Alice walked alongside Keilani and remarked, "You seemed lost in thought."

Keilani lowered her head, a tinge of jealousy and resentment in her eyes. She clenched her teeth and muttered, "Sabrina's back. I just saw Tyrone picking her up!"

For a moment, Alice was stunned. She then offered a reassuring smile and said, "Let her enjoy her happiness for a while. When the truth comes out, Tyrone will surely break up with her."

Keilani's patience was wearing thin, but Kira had warned her against acting rashly, as preparations weren't complete.

"Wow, that's a Maserati! Keilani, your uncle really spoils you!" Alice marveled.

Keilani smiled and said nothing. Despite their strained relationship, her uncle treated her well.

Inside the car, Alice gazed at the cityscape and sighed. "So, this is Mathias. It's quite different from what I had imagined."

Alice had emigrated to Philadelphia with her parents when she was just a child. Her hometown was situated in the northern region. Though she had returned to her homeland several times as an adult, she had never ventured into Mathias. Her curiosity about this place was palpable.

Keilani smiled in response. "Mathias is an amazing city. Tomorrow, I'll take you on a tour, and we'll pick up my brother in the afternoon."

"Sounds good," Alice replied, her eyes lighting up at the mention of Lance.

Two days ago, Keilani had called Alice and informed her about Lance's return to Mathias. There was a possibility that Lance might stay in the city for quite a while, and Keilani had asked if Alice would join her.

Alice had thought about it for a while. After discussing it with her parents, she decided to board a plane to Mathias.

However, a shadow crossed Alice's face as she dwelled on something. Lance had arrived in Mathias just one day after Sabrina's return. Could it be that he was pursuing her? Did he have feelings for Sabrina?

"Alice, is something bothering you? Aren't you happy that my brother is coming?" Keilani inquired.

Alice snapped out of her thoughts and managed a wry smile. With that, she confided in Keilani about her concerns. "I can't help but worry that I shouldn't have come here. When he sees me in Mathias, he might think I'm following him, and it could make him loathe me even more..."

"Don't be so hard on yourself," Keilani reassured Alice. "Remember, you're the future daughter-in-law of the Wilson family. As for Sabrina... I won't let her be with my brother!"

Keilani made a call and arranged for someone to obtain the airport surveillance footage. She edited the video to remove the part where Tyrone picked up Sabrina, leaving only an anonymous message for Lance.

On the other side, Sabrina rubbed her eyes and turned slightly, finding no one beside her. She stretched herself and took her phone from the bedside table to check the time. It was already eight o'clock.

"Are you up?" Tyrone pushed the door open and entered. He was dressed immaculately. He sat on the edge of the bed and fixed his gaze on Sabrina. "I'll drop Jennie off at kindergarten. Breakfast is ready."

"Alright," Sabrina replied.

Their eyes met, and somehow, Sabrina felt a little embarrassed. She quickly pulled the quilt up to cover herself.

Tyrone grinned. He leaned over and said in a low voice, "You can't escape tonight."

With a red face, Sabrina playfully pushed him and retorted, "Go take Jennie to school!"

After he left, Sabrina lay in bed for a while before finally getting up to have breakfast. She then headed to the garage to pick up a car and drove off in search of Bettie.

Summer in Mathias was scorching, but the morning air still retained a bit of chill. However, by nine in the morning, the heat became oppressive, dissuading people from venturing out onto the streets.

Sabrina and Bettie went to a shopping mall with the air conditioning offering a welcome respite.

"Look, isn't that Sabrina?" Alice pointed at Sabrina and added, "Is that her friend?"

Keilani observed Sabrina and Bettie closely with furrowed brows. Suddenly, she realized something. The woman beside Sabrina was with Sabrina in the Sandra Building the other day.

Keilani vividly remembered she had suffered humiliation at Sabrina's and that woman's hands that day. Worse, that woman was precisely whom she had met near the restroom a few days ago at the shopping mall. It turned out that woman was Sabrina's friend. No wonder when Tyrone saw that woman that day, he had declined her offer immediately.