Chapter 551 Shirley Has Become Skyler's Girlfriend

After doing a check-up in the hospital, the medical result showed that Shirley was suffering from a ruptured eardrum by an external force.

"You need to eat the pills for the time being and come back four weeks later for a review. You'll need surgery if you aren't recovered by that time." After picking up the prescription, Skyler reminded Shirley as he stood in front of her.

She nodded and took the medicine from him. "I understand." "I'll send you home." He was feeling guilty to cause her to be in such a condition. "There's no need for that."

"Don't reject me." Skyler snatched the prescriptions from her as he dragged her toward the exit by grabbing her wrist. Shirley followed behind him without fighting. All she could see was his warm hand around her slender wrist and his dependable silhouette.

Meanwhile, in the Twilight Condominium, Veronica was resting her head on Matthew's lap as they binge-watched a soap opera in the living room. At times, his slender fingers holding the fork would feed her a melon chunk.

Tasting the juicy melon, she felt quite relaxed in the peace and wonderful atmosphere, enjoying the sweetness brought by her relationship.

"It tastes good. You should try it." She picked up a fruit chunk with the fork and reached for his mouth. "Say 'aah'." She was talking to Matthew like a child. He stifled a laugh at her tone. "I'm not a child."

"You don't want it? Then I'll gladly have it." His contentment was showing from the smile on his face. Veronica had fun with his reaction as she ate the fruit chunk by herself.

Matthew stared at the woman lying on his lap.

"That's life." Matthew put a hand on Veronica's head and caressed her long hair as he consoled her. Tilting her head to the side, she exchanged a look with him and smiled knowingly.

After that, the pair took off to Sasha's apartment by car. Once they found a spot in the parking lot, he led Veronica straight into one of the apartment buildings and headed toward the elevator.

As they stepped into the elevator, she watched him press the button of the sixteenth floor. A complex expression plastered to her ivory face as she cocked an eyebrow at his familiarity with this place and alluded, "It seems like you know your way around here."

Turning to the side, Veronica allowed her meaningful gaze to rest on Matthew. He took only one look at her to know what she was implying. He reached out to her with one arm and held her in it as the other hand tilted her chin upward. He grinned from ear to ear as he murmured, "Am I sensing a hint of jealousy from my Little Roni?"

"Here?" Veronica stopped at the end of the corridor and turned to Matthew as she pointed at the door on her right side. After he nodded, she knocked on the door.

She didn't notice anything wrong before she knocked on the door, but was soon to realize something was wrong when her hand touched the door.

She turned to him involuntarily for assurance. As their gazes met, the pair pushed the door open and stepped inside the room without a word.

A small living room with a European style design came into their view. The decorations in the room were a combination of light luxury and minimalist as they bathed in the dim light of the glass chandelier.

At last, she turned on the bedside lamp, and the dark bedroom was instantly replaced by blinding light.

Sasha chuckled coldly as she growled, "Veronica, don't be a hypocrite. You disgust me."

She lowered her head, took a glance at the pajamas beside her, and pointed to her own chest. "Laugh as much as you want. Many people already regard me as a joke anyway. It makes no difference to include you."

"I can't help it if that's what you think." Veronica did not want to argue with Sasha any further. "I simply want to advise you that now that you're a woman, you must learn to respect yourself."

It was unusual for the strong-willed Veronica to reveal her anguish in front of Matthew. As a result, when he saw her trembling in pain, he couldn't help but feel his heart ache and his mind tumble into chaos.

Caleb, who was standing by the side, pragmatically agreed with Sasha's words after which he nodded as well. "She's right. Be careful because you might burn yourself."

"You taciturn prick! You should pay more attention to yourself rather than commenting about my life. Your parents will find out about you and Abby soon enough. By then, they'll surely break your legs!" Skyler was upset with Caleb, so he brought up Abby to take a shot at him.

Although Caleb was a police officer by profession, he originated from a wealthy family background and his family was well-to-do. A woman suitable to marry into the Shaw family would definitely have to be a wealthy debutante. Not only was the woman expected to be cultured and knowledgeable, but she also had to be able to hold herself well in front of people. Only someone from such a background would be a great match for the Shaws.

As for Abby, who had originated from the countryside like Veronica, she clearly was not a good match. Furthermore, she was a mute and still underaged.
