

Chaos Devourer System

#Chapter 111 Predator Watches The Prey - Read Chaos Devourer System Chapter 111 Predator Watches The Prey

111 Predator Watches The Prey

In the Lovers Garden area, there were different places for settlement and enjoyment, and one of those places is the favorite Midaz drink bar.

Hundreds of Humbarians who came to this place spent their time chatting while also drinking the favorite drink of the Humbarian race which was the Midaz Drink.

A certain type of booze that made the drinker feel extremely intoxicated with joy. If one takes too much of this intoxicating drink, then even the strongest Humbarian wouldn't be able to differentiate between day and night and unknowingly spill out all their darkest secrets before slumping on the ground and dozing off.

The Humbarians have always preferred this special booze, specifically the young adults due to its effects of making one forget their sorrows while also making them fall deeply into slumber.

In the bustling down floor of the bar, groups of Humbarians could be seen.

A Humbarian suddenly walked into the place and looked around the area with his dull eyes before moving towards one of the seats.

Zeras looked around the room as his gaze smartly scanned all the individuals in the room, looking for a particular individual among them.

"How many bottles would you like?..." The voice of a female Humbarian suddenly rang out beside him as Zeras diverted his attention away and raised his head to look at her.

Dressed in a small top that covered only her chest area with a tight-fitting skirt that made Zeras wonder just how long it took her to wriggle herself into those, a lustful smile could be seen on her face that would have turned any male on.

"A bottle is enough..." Zeras said with a smile as she flashed him a bright smile before moving back to the table.

"Here it is..." The lady said passing him a tray with a bottle of a red-colored drink in it.

"Thank you... And I won't mind at all if you want to drink a few cups with me..." Zeras said winking at her, causing a small giggle to escape her lips as she moved away.

Zeras looked at the bottle on the table before grabbing it as he filled the cup before taking a sip of the booze.

"Hmmm, kinda sweet, at least better than the EIA fruit juice..." Zeras said as he continuously took sips of the juice but he didn't divert his attention from his target.

Just about four tables from him. A group of four Humbans sat around a table as their loud laughter and argument rang loudly throughout the bar, while about 10 bottles of booze surrounded them.

While the others on the table had at most two bottles in front of them, a certain Humban had a total of 4 bottles in front of him, as the others fawned at him.

"Xero, with you finally getting accepted to become a guard at the Temple. I bet you must be feeling very proud?" One of the Humbans said fawning at him.

"Yes." "Of course. Out of the Over 100 Humbans that chose to become a guard, only at most 20 were chosen. That speaks more than enough about Senior Xero's ability..." Another of the youths said causing a small prideful smile to appear on Xero's face.

"I wouldn't say there's anything overly special about the tests, to be honest. You just need to work very hard and you'll get the position one day..." Xero said taking in another drink.

"Xero, now that you have become one of the Temple guards. Can you let us see your Guard Card..." One of the Humbans asked him with a fawning look on his face as Xero raised his eyebrows but he thought nothing of it and brought out the blue-colored card before placing it on the table.

One of the Humbans gently picked up the card and took hold of it as if they were holding onto the rarest of treasures.

"It's true... Your name and picture are even in it. With this, trying to steal the card from you would be meaningless as your picture has been clearly drawn..." The Humbans who asked for the card said "With this card, you'll be immediately allowed into the Temple..." The other Humban said looking at the card.

Zeras listened continuously to their conversation as a smile appeared on his face hearing the information and he even stole a few glances at the card.

"So all I need to access the tower is that card..." Zeras muttered to himself.

He was well aware he couldn't barge into the Humban Tower due to the amount of Humban guards positioned at the front and within the tower.

So his best choice was to secretly infiltrate the tower and to do that, he planned on accessing the Tower by impersonating a guard. That way he would be able to carefully explore the Tower very well.

As for the picture in the card, Zeras didn't care a bit about that as his Absolute Morph Gene can easily solve that. The only problem was how he would obtain the card from Xero.

'I pray he gives it to me in peace or he would only have himself to blame for being stubborn..' Zeras thought coldly to himself, a murderous glint flashing in his eyes.

-- -- --

Four hours rapidly passed as the four Humbans on the table drank and drank, causing about twenty empty bottles of booze to fill all the space on the table.

The loud voice and laughter have reduced a lot as the Humbans continuously spewed out nonsense from their mouth.

"Xero, you have an important job ahead of you tomorrow. I'll advise you to go... home quickly and get some much-needed rest. You'll need your energy for your work tomorrow..." One of the Humbans advised.

"You know what, Benji? You're completely right. It won't do good if I get to the tower late tomorrow. Then I'll be on my way then..." Xero said as he staggered up from his seat.

"See you tomorrow Xero..."

"Don't forget us too..." The Humbans screamed out to him from behind as Xero simply nodded his head and exited the bar.

Zeras sat in the bar for a minute as he watched how it continued as if nothing happened.

Noticing no one was watching Xero's move, he also stood up as he made his way outside the bar, his body sluggishly moving forward like that of a drunkard, making no one pay any attention to him.

A few minutes after Zeras left...

The Humban female who served him the booze moved towards the table Zeras left from as she tried packing the bottle away but her eyes immediately furrowed together as she noticed the bottle was still more than half-filled.

"Hmmm, strange he didn't even finish half of the bottle yet he's already drunk... Tch, a very weak one..." Murba said to herself as she packed the tray and headed towards the desk, continuing on her work.

-- -- --

The path towards the exit of the lovers's garden from the bar was a small forest with a narrow path in the middle.

Around the path were different tall trees, their branches blocking the full moonlight, causing the path to be dimly lit.

On this lonely path, a drunk Humban could be seen walking disorderly on the path as he whistled happily to himself.

Unknowing to anyone, on one of the trees, a humanoid-shaped object could be seen, its chilling dark eyes staring at the lonely Humban walking on the path like that of a predator watching over its prey...

Golden Tickets and Powerstones are greatly appreciated. Thanks guys. Let's move higher up the rankings too.

112 Attack!!!

Xero walked through the lonely path, whistling happily to himself. The surrounding area was quiet, almost completely silent except for the small chirping of the insects nearby.

He could feel his heart racing with joy strangely, the effect of the Midaz drink quickly showing its effect and he even felt a little sleepy but he was able to avoid simply falling to the ground as he withstood the effect of the booze but hurried his footsteps.

Tomorrow was going to be the day he'll finally get what he had always wanted even in his dream. One of the peaks of success in the settlement, becoming a Temple guard.

Once he was properly identified as a guard, his position would change and he would be treated with utmost respect by others, his status quickly growing higher.

If he then managed to enter the good eye of the Shaman, then his future would then be immeasurable, and perhaps he could finally be worthy of obtaining her...

Xero suddenly felt a mild rustling of the air behind him, as he felt the presence of something. Something he had only felt once and by the inner guards of the Tower.

Killing Intent.

Without even turning his head to look back, his hands immediately clenched into a fist as he swung it backward at full speed.

RIIIIIIIIIIIP.

The gentle sound of something being sliced apart echoed to the area, as Xero looked in front of him and there he was, a humanoid figure covered completely in dark robes that hid his figure.

"To dare attack me. Just who gave you the guts..." Xero asked anger rising within but he was shocked when he suddenly saw the robed figure extend his hands forward and he saw from the robes that it wasn't an arm but a blade.

The figure swiped the blade to the side as blue blood splashed away from it causing Xero's eyes to narrow, where did he get the blood from?

"DROP"

The sound of something falling on his legs as he felt a liquid splash on them caused him to lower his head to his feet and see a blue-colored scale arm dripping with blood on the ground while his brain sensory quickly sent the information of what just happened 2 seconds ago in his head.

One of his arms has been caught off!!!

Pain. Horrifying pain.

Xero felt a deep ringing in his head as veins appeared on his face while he held on tightly to his injured arm.

Looking straight at the robed figure, his disdainful face immediately faded away as he grew to become extremely wary. His arm was cut off without him even realizing it. It was a powerful warrior he came across this time.

But he didn't know. Why would such a person lay eyes on him...

"Your Guard Card..." The monotone voice of the robed figure echoed out to him as he stretched the strange white blade towards him.

Xero's eyes immediately narrowed on hearing that as his brows furrowed together.

His guard card? It was a pass he could use to access the Temple. But the card can only be used by him, and never be used by anyone. This every Humban knew too well. Besides, why would any Humban want his guard card?

Except...

"You... You're a human!!!" Xero screamed out shocked but his face changed when he suddenly felt the figure in front of him fade away and a whisper entered his ears...

"Wrong answer..."

Xero's face immediately contorted to fury as he slapped towards where the sound came from with so much physical strength, the air rippled with a bang sound, but a pain entered into his brain in the next second as he fell onto one knee before a blade light once again flashed and his second arm dropped to the side.

"SLASH, SLASH, SLASH..." The sound of blade light flashing through this part of the forest could be heard as blood splashed out of Xero's body with every cut causing his body to be soaked in blood as he felt himself losing control of every of his muscles.

"THUMP..."

His worn-out body landed on the ground with a thump as he lay face-flat on the ground.

The figure slowly walked towards him as he dragged him up by his head with his left hand.

Blood flowed out of a cut from Xero's right eye as he shut it to avoid the pain of his eyes getting blinded by the blood, but his second eyes could still see a little vision causing him to strain them as he tried his best to catch a glimpse of his assailant.

And he finally saw the face beneath the robe causing his eyes to widen to their absolute limit as there was just no way what he saw was true...

"The...Theo...??"

BANG

Xero's consciousness immediately fell into the dark as his head lay buried in the ground which had marks running outwards from the burial position.

"Deactivate Dash..."

"Deactivate Absolute Morph..."

Zeras muttered beneath his breath as his figure returned to his normal form and he walked towards the unconscious body of Xero, dipping his hands into his pockets.

Bringing his hands out of his pocket, a blue-colored card with the image and name of Xero could be seen.

"Finally..." Zeras carefully kept it in his pocket as he looked at Xero on the ground.

There weren't many injuries to him except for the bleeding of his two cut-off arms and some cuts on his body. Overall he seemed to still be in quite good shape...

"I guess your so-called Shaman should be able to patch you back up in one piece. And if he doesn't, then at least you won't be much worse off than me. You'll still have two hands..." Zeras said to himself as he picked up the body of Xero and placed him on his shoulder before moving inside the forest.

Arriving before a tree just before the forest, a shovel could be seen placed just behind the tree as Zeras picked it up in his other arm and continued deeper into the forest...

He already did a perfect job. It was now time to clean up.

-- -- --

The bright full moon in the sky illuminated the entire Humban settlement and on one of the rooftops sat an Humban who held a blue-coloured card in his hands.

Zeras already morphed himself into the figure of Xero after making sure he properly disposed of him deeply in the forest.

He was sure it would take at least three days for him to wake up from unconsciousness and even more impossible for someone to find him.

He only needed to borrow his body for a single day as he would be beginning the mission tomorrow, and there wasn't a second chance.

He would either succeed and leave with the princess or fail and die in the settlement or run away from it. Either way, his morphing into Xero was only useable for a single day after which there would be no more need.

"Tomorrow it is..." Zeras muttered as he looked up at the moon in the sky, tightly clutching the card in his eyes.

-- -- --

Far from the Humban settlement and closer to the tower...

Five shadows of figures spread into the distance each clad in a completely dark robe as one of them voiced out in the darkness "We have completely watched how the guards moved in and out of the tower and took good notice of the shifts for two days now. We should have a 70% chance of success if we begin now."

"Good. Then we strike tomorrow..." A masculine voice echoed out beneath the robe as the five figures merged into the shadows and disappeared.

113 A Chance of Using Chaos Devouring

The golden rays of light from the sun brightly illuminated the the entire Humban settlement as both old and young moved through the area going about their daily business.

Among this bustling group of people, a Humban could be seen, a serious expression on his face as he walked towards the direction where a square-shaped structure could be seen.

This Humban was Zeras in the form of Xero.

Zeras looked in the distance, the gargantuan Humban Tower presentable even though he was still pretty far away from the place.

His heart beating in expectation and also slight nervousness. Zeras headed towards the direction of the tower, in his hands a blue-coloured card.

The Humban Tower was the most sacred structure of the entire Humban race, which also made it the most guarded structure within the entire Humban settlement.

Zeras arrived before the structure's large blue-coloured door and he saw approximately 2 guards standing at the entrance pillar, while 6 guards spread into the distance all guarding the front of the Tower.

These were the Outer Guards of the Tower, all a powerhouse comparable to the Human race Meteor ranked Stage.

"Stop..." An order was given from one of the guards standing at the entrance as their two stern eyes looked at Zeras up and down.

"For what reason have you come to visit the Temple..." The second guard stated as he looked at Zeras questionly.

Zeras didn't say any word and just bowed a little, the way the other Humbans do when they come across a temple guard he brought out the blue card and passed it to the guard.

The 2-meter Humbans looked at the card as he confirmed the picture on it before looking scrutinizingly at Zeras without saying a word.

A face-down occurred between Zeras and the two guards going on for almost a minute but Zeras didn't make a single noise nor move an inch as he just looked at the two guards with his eyes full of respect and reverence that didn't escape the eyes of the guard.

An approving grunt rang out from the mouth of one of the guards as they threw the card back to him before nudging him forward.

"You're in charge of standing guard at the fifth door, the gate of Ruined Pride." The guards stated.

"Yes sir..."

22:55

"Any type of lottering around the temple is not allowed and would result in consequences. You're only allowed to leave the area if you have very important things to do like going to the toilet.

Any type of strange movement must be immediately reported. Chatting and gossiping with other guards is not allowed.

Any other given must be immediately obeyed and you're not allowed to enter into any of the other gates except for the gate you've been asked to guard. Besides, you can only enter the get you've been asked to guard if you notice something strange going on within...

"Is the message clear?..."

"Completely clear. I'll try my best to fulfill this noble mission to the best of my ability..." Zeras affirmed his voice dripping with determination.

"Good. Go in..." The guard said as they shifted sideways nudging Zeras to move forward.

Zeras gave a respectful bow as he slowly entered into the tower's large doors, his figure disappearing within as the door slowly shut back but unknown to the guards they couldn't help but notice the sweat that dripped down from the back of his neck.

-- -- --

The inside of the temple was a very long narrow hall with different doors two guards stayed at the front of these doors. Looking at the setting of the area, there were a total of 7 doors on the right-hand side with another 7 doors on the left-hand side, making a total of 14 rooms in the hall.

Zeras entered the Temple, passing through the different doors and guards before he finally arrived at the fifth door.

Zeras looked at the door in his right hand as he looked up seeing the words that were written atop.

Gate Of Ruined Pride

An Humban stood in front of the door around 2 metres tall depicting him to be at the age of either 20 or 21.

Zeras arrived before him giving him a small bow before standing at the left-hand side of the door.

The silence in the temple was stifling to behold as almost no one ever entered the place except during special occasions leaving only the Humban guards to be at the structure all day long they were pretty much used to the silence, but boredom was something that couldn't be helped.

"I've not seen your face around here before. Could you perhaps be a new guard around here..." The Humban beside him asked curiously as Zeras gave him a side glance.

"I just arrived here today, sir." Zera's said before turning back once again.

"Interesting. I've been here for almost two years now. I know almost everything in this place..." The Humban said proudly as Zeras looked at him and displayed an unbelieving expression on his face.

"What!!! You don't believe me..." The Humban asked shocked and feeling his pride hurt.

"It's not that I don't believe you... It's just that, the temple is a boundless area of our gods' home. How can one man say he knew everything about it? That kind of assertion is had to believe..." Zeras said.

"Tch. The extremist type. Ok, then I'll prove to you I know about everything..." The Humban said angrily.

"Oh, if you know about everything. Can you tell me all that is kept in each temple room..." Zeras asked with a mocking smirk on his face, something the stupid Humban took noticed off and the shatter box began rattling in and on.

Zeras yes displayed shock for two hours straight and Juro was more than happy to let the ignorant chap learn of just how ignorant he truly was and he told him about everything that took place in the temple and where it took place...

"And this gate that we are guiding is called the Gate of Ruined Pride. Do you know why?" Juro asked him curiously with a disdainful elderly face.

"I have no semblance as to why?" Zeras said faking himself to be downcast.

"Tch, ignorant chap. Then let this big brother lecture you. It is called the Gate of Ruined Pride because it is where the corpse most powerful of all calamities that ever attacked the settlement was hidden.

The Humban Settlement in different histories have been attacked by fearsome beasts and strange beings with very powerful strength but in the end, they were defeated by our power.

Their corpse is stored here to act as a remembrance to the future generations and to confirm the history that has been taught of the distant past.

The reason it's called the Gate of Ruined Pride was that usually every one of the creatures within has always thought they could wipe us Humans away from the face of this planet but in the end, they were defeated and their pride ruined.

So the name, The Gate of Ruined Pride." Juro lengthily explained with a prideful expression on his face watching Zera's gobsmacked expression but unknowing to him Zera's brain was working at full speed on hearing what he just said.

A place where the strongest beasts are kept. If what Juro told him was true. Then he could increase his energy by using Chaos Devouring on the corpse automatically sucking all of their life essence and turning it into his own.

This was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to greatly increase his energy points...

Golden Tickets and Powerstones are greatly appreciated.

114 Chaos!!!

This was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to greatly increase his energy points.

All he needed was a chance to enter the room.

"Do you know that although everyone says the Shaman always stays in the Temple, no one has ever actually seen him in the temple before not even the guards..." Juro suddenly said to him in a mysterious voice.

"Hmm. That's right. But if none ever sees him, does that mean he doesn't stay in the temple?" Zera asked genuinely surprised.

"No, he stays in the temple, but no one knows where exactly he stays apart from a select few, and I Juro I'm part of the few," Juro said the pride in his voice unconcealed.

"Only the most important guards should be aware of that. Probably the Core guards. There's no way you'll know such a piece of secretive information..."

"I do. Although I might look like a simple inner guard, I'm actually a very important guard in the temple..."

"Oh, then where does the Shaman stay?"

"Tch. As if I would let you know such a piece of important information for free..." Juro said puffing out his chest.

"You know it is not even up to four hours that we have known each other and yet I feel as if you were once my long-lost brother. How about I take you to the Midaz drink bar tonight? I'll be juicing you as many bottles as you want for free to celebrate our friendship..." Zeras said with an amiable smile.

"Tch. You truly have a silver tongue. Then to pay you back, I will let you on the information. Who cares about the place where an Old man hides in any way..." Juro said.

"Then you have to listen well, the Shaman resides in the last gate to the left in the tower. It's deeply within the core of the place and maybe even the most secretive area of the temple. No one has ever gotten that far, and two of the most powerful Humbans guard the entrance to the place..." Juro said as Zera's eyes narrowed.

The most secretive area of the place! That was probably where Princess Diana was being kept. But getting there was impossible as he already no one had ever been allowed in and it was even guarded by very powerful Humbans.

Zera's eyes suddenly narrowed as he looked at Juro beside him before steeling his mind.

"Um, Big Brother Juro. You said you know of every area in the temple don't you?" Zeras said clearly fawning on him.

Juro immediately scoffed as he raised his chest higher.

"Of course I do."

Then do you perhaps know of a wall with the inscription of a flower in it?" Zeras asked sinisterly although he kept a straight fawning smile on his face.

"Tch. Do you think I'll fall for such a simple thing? Is that not it over there..." Juro said pointing at the distance wall about ten steps from where he was where the image of a small flower could be seen.

Zera's eyes dilated in shock as he muttered to himself:

"So that is the secret door that led to the most secretive area of the temple according to Natasha. I guess she was telling the truth..." "Anyway, Xero. Can you hold for me? I want to go take a crap..." Juro said as Zeras let out a chuckle. It was strange but the Humbans don't say they want to defecate. Instead, they say they want to take a crap.

"Don't worry brother. You'll be surprised how much of a good job I'll do before you come back..." Zeras said with a smile as he watched Juro's back quickly disappear into the distance.

Waiting for a minute more, in case Juro decides to come back. Zeras looked around the hall as he noticed none was paying any attention or looking at his side, causing him to take a step back as he gently opened the door and slithered into it very quietly.

"Clink"

The door was carefully closed as Zeras wiped the sweat away from his head before focusing on the room and he couldn't help but drop his jaws to the ground and his hair rising on end.

Before him were the mummified skeletons of ten gigantic beasts, that though dead, radiated an aura that made his heart palpitate in horror.

Their natural body aura was unlike anything that Zeras had ever seen making him wonder just how powerful they were when alive.

Zeras calmed down his beating heart as he walked towards one of the beasts resembling a huge ape and touched its forehead.

[A dead beast at the Peak Cosmic rank stage has been found]

[Does the Host wish to absorb its life essence?]

"Yes..." Zeras said almost screaming out in glee.

White essence mist immediately rose from the forehead of the beast as it entered Zera's hand quickly moving through his entire body.

After 5 minutes of continuous absorption, something that has never happened before as the highest time Chaos Devourer ever took was two seconds. A notification finally appeared:

[Total Energy 165/165]

Zeras stood there numbed by the information as his eyes widened.

"100 points of energy?" The highest he ever gained was 10. Now he got 100?

A strange occurrence suddenly happened as Zeras watched the gigantic ape corpse suddenly become dust as it floated away in the air...

The corpse had been in the room for countless years so once the remaining life essence got absorbed, it immediately dispersed into dust.

Now left in the room were Nine gigantic beasts.

"Well, since I would be leaving here today. Might as well just absorb every last thing..." Zeras muttered as he headed towards the second beast and began absorbing the energy.

[Congratulations Host has absorbed the life essence of a Peak Cosmic rank stage beast]

[+100 Energy gained]

[Congratulations Host has absorbed the life essence of a Peak Cosmic rank stage beast]

[+100 Energy gained]

....

[+100 Energy gained]

[+100 Energy gained]

[+100 Energy gained]

[+100 Energy gained]

[Total Energy Points: 760/765]

A smile appeared on Zera's face as he headed towards the remaining three beasts present in the room when suddenly his heart almost leaped out of his chest.

"KABOOOOOOOOOOOOM"

A horrifying explosion that almost deafened his ear rang throughout the entire temple as Zeras felt the land beneath him shake crazily.

He looked at the three remaining corpses but he knew there wasn't more time.

"At least I got 700 points of energy. I won't die to greed..." Zeras said as he hurriedly moved out.

"All guards are to head to the Core area of the temple right now. Go. Go. Go."

A loud order rang out from the front as Zeras watched hundreds of guards rapidly running towards the direction where Juro mentioned the Shaman stays.

His eyes narrowed in realization as another apocalyptic collision of power rang out from the distance.

"Are they finally making their move?" Zeras muttered under his breath not following running guards as he looked at the wall which had the inscription of a flower instead.

Ze0ras took a deep breath in as he knew one thing was sure:

The Chaos Will be starting soon...

115 Half Galaxy Rank Stage!!!

Zeras immediately slithered towards the wall at the corner where the inscription of a flower could be seen as he carefully concealed himself beside the wall, successfully avoiding the gaze of the running guards.

According to Natasha, this wall was a passageway for her to quickly access the innermost area of the temple, but just how is this a door?

Zeras looked at the flower inscription, as he stretched out his hands and pushed with all his strength but it was like pushing against a wall. There wasn't even the smallest sign of budging.

He immediately ignored that as he pushed even harder using every ounce of strength he could garner but there was still no movement making his eyes narrow.

"Or am I doing it the wrong..."

He immediately stopped the frantic pushing as his hands trailed around the inscription of the flower before he exerted little strength in his fingers and pushed the flowers in.

As if in a chain reaction, the flower inscription suddenly sank into the wall as a deep rumbling sound of gears grinding together echoed from within the place before...

RUUUUUUUUUUUUMBLE

The door slowly opened up and in front of Zeras were steps and continued descending into the ground.

An aura of gloom and darkness surrounded the place, only lit by the faint light coming from the rocky material that was used in the making of the stones.

Calming his breath, his eyes steeled in determination as he placed a foot on the step. Seeing nothing happened, Zeras immediately continued downwards, his back rapidly fading in the gloomy darkness of underground while the door behind him rumbled to a close.

-- -- --

"Pirad what do you see..." The masculine voice of a man whom Zeras would have immediately recognized to be that of Officer Arroyo said as he looked at the robed figure beside him who had an eye mask in his hand and a glaring purple light emanating from his eyes beneath the dark robe.

"It's safe..." Officer Pirad said putting back on his eye mask.

"Then let's move..." The five-robed figure suddenly sank into the shadow around the place as they steadily advanced towards the tower, making sure they passed through the shadow that was present on the ground.

Of course, phasing through the shadow wasn't a particular genetic ability but was an effect of the Artifact they were putting on.

The Robe. An advanced Techno-Alpha stealth Shadow robe, that allows the wearer to remain undetected by passing through the surrounding shadows.

The group occasionally waited for the guards to form shadows in the ground and they used that as leverage to steadily advance towards the tower and in less than 2 minutes, they were already inside the temple and easily advancing.

Of course, they could have just let all hell let loose and entered the tower with brute strength, but the mission was a stealth mission until they successfully found the princess. Then they won't be afraid of repercussions of the Universal Planetary Organization Privacy laws.

With the Stealth Shadow robe I, they were able to quickly make advancement in the temple and soon arrived in front at the last end of the temple where two 3 meters tall Humban could be seen.

The group slowly came to a stop about 10 meters from the two Humbans as while the shadow robe can pass through the shadows, it would still be sensed by those with a particular amount of cultivation and those two Humbans who are no doubt comparable to Cosmic Rank stage expert like them would be able to easily sense them.

"I believe you can handle them Zurin..." Officer Arroyo instructed looking at one of the Officers who gave him a nod before closing his eyes.

A deep and extremely mysterious aura emanated from deep within the figure of Officer Zurin as he clasped both his hands together.

His eyes suddenly snapped open revealing an unending black hole of shadows that revolved deep within his eyes while strange tattoos appeared on his entire body, something Zeras would have immediately identified as the same tattoo that Mumba of the Joker race had present on his skin, revealing Officer Zurin to not be a human but a Joker race expert instead.

His two abyssal eyes stared at the two guards who both immediately snapped their heads over to the direction of Officer Zurin as they suddenly felt their muscles become paralyzed as if locked on by some force.

"Fourth Joke Of The Strange One, Shadow Realm..." Shadows emanated from within the figure of Officer Zurin rapidly extending towards the two Humban guards as a gigantic portal of swirling shadows appeared beneath their feet and sucked them both in as the duo disappeared into the portal and the shadow dispersed as if nothing ever happened.

Two Humbans at the Cosmic Rank stage have been easily dealt it within three seconds revealing the terror of the Joker race.

"They are very strong. They would break out of my Realm in less than two minutes..." Officer Zurin suddenly said as Officer Arroyo's eyes narrowed hearing that.

He was well aware of the Joker Race ability, Shadow Realm which was more of a prison formed from their shadow and can be used to trap enemies. Although he was shocked hearing they would be able to break out of Zurin's realm in two minutes.

"That's more than enough time to get the princess out," Officer Arroyo said as the group emerged from the shadows they were hiding and looked at the door in front of them where the princess was likely being kept.

Officer Arroyo slowly walked towards the door as his hands extended toward the doorknob and with a gentle force, the door knob broke the three immediately barged into the place but a weird expression couldn't help but sneak its way into their face.

The room they were in was an unremarkable room with a mattress, a table, and some chairs with different scrolls hanging on the walls.

What was most eye-catching was a figure sitting cross-legged on the mattress who had two hands folded on his chest while his two other arms rested on his waist.

"You've kept me waiting for a long time..." The rumbling voice of the figure rang out as he slowly stood up revealing him to be at a shocking height of five meters. It was an old Humban with completely white hair and a beard dressed in a blue-colored robe.

The Officers' eyes immediately narrowed as they all stood alert staring cautiously at the man.

Office Arroyo looked behind the old Humban as he saw a door that led into a different place.

"I'm guessing you're the so-called Shaman of the Humban Race and behind that door is where our princess is being hidden..." Officer Arroyo said causing a smile to appear on the Shaman's face.

"You just give us back our princess and we'll immediately leave..." Officer Arroyo said seeking a compromise.

"I'm afraid that's impossible..." The Shaman said his voice having no room for any discussion.

"Of that is your choice, then I hope you don't blame us for being disrespectful..." Officer Arroyo said as he fully unleashed his aura causing a tempest of storm to begin blowing around the room.

"You can all go all out and be very careful. He's at the Half Galaxy Rank stage..." Officer Arroyo said warningly to the others as their eyes widened in shock. Half Galaxy Rank stage!!!

This would be the toughest battle they would have ever fought in their lives.

Golden Tickets and Powerstones are greatly appreciated. Have an idea comment in the comments section.

116 Taken Away!!

Half Galaxy Rank stage!!!

This would be the toughest battle they would have ever fought in their lives.

"It has been almost 400 years since I've last exercised these bones of mine. Then I hope you guys can give me the massage I need..." The Shaman said as he grabbed the stick beside him before slamming the butt on the ground.

Lines brimming with profound auras quickly appeared on the ground forming a large rune that cuveted the entire space before a barrier surrounded all of them.

Their battle will most likely cause the entire Temple to be destroyed by their power, something the Shaman would like to avoid so he set up this sealing formation beforehand.

"Now let's go all out shall we?" A horrifying amount of battle lust and killing intent emanated from the Shaman as the ground radiated a deep rumbling as if an earthquake was happening while the air completely stopped moving as if under suppression by a mysterious force.

The Shaman slowly raised one of his hands as he delivered a simple punch...

R|||||P

KABOOOOOOOOOOOM

The steps seemed to be forever unending as Zeras continuously descended into deep underground.

The total darkness robbed him of the comprehension of time, but he could still say he had been walking for almost an hour.

The light around the place was dim but Zeras could feel it, he was slowly approaching the end of the steps.

4 minutes later...

Zeras finally arrived at the end of the area but what he saw was a completely dead end.

Zeras stood there in shock as he looked at the large stone wall.

"This...It doesn't make any sense..." Zeras muttered to himself looking at the dead end and turning to look at the steps he just came from.

He was sure there was supposed to be a pathway to the end of the steps and it didn't just make any sense for it to end without a door.

'Or should I have opened this stone wall long before beginning the steps or... Is there a road or wall I've missed...' Zeras thought confused as he pushed against the Stine wall but it didn't even budge.

10:46

"Shit..." The rumbling sound of battle was growing even louder making Zera's heart pound faster in his heart.

Taking a deep breath in, he calmed himself down as he thought of what could have wrong when suddenly his eyes dilated.

He could remember the secret wall only opened due to the image of the flower inscription. Perhaps there was another flower inscription that was around this place.

His hands immediately morphed into a blade as Zeras gathered all his mana around it causing it to flare with a white halo that illuminated the surrounding darkness.

His eyes narrowed as he rapidly looked for a flower inscription but it was nowhere to be found causing him to sit down on a nearby rock in exhaustion but he immediately raised his eyebrows when he saw the stone shift a little.

Zeras slowly stood up from the rock, as he raised it, and there beneath the rock was an unremarkable inscription of a flower.

"Found it..." Zeras immediately extended his hands towards it as he pressed down with force causing a blue light to flare from the inscriptions as he turned back only to see the stone slowly rolling away.

Zeras immediately released his hold as he walked to the slowly opening door and entered it.

It was a gigantic space with different flowers and strange husks of bones decorated around the wall.

Four Statue of a strange humanoid creature could be seen looking exactly like the Humbans but Zeras couldn't help but notice something weird.

All the Humbans only possess 4 hands but the figure he was looking at right now has six large arms instead of four causing his eyes to narrow.

"Do the Humbans really possess six arms instead of four in the past?" Zeras asked confused but it had nothing to do with him causing him to diverge his attention away from it.

Right at the center of the room and in the middle where the four statues were gathered around was a large high altar.

At the top of the altar, a figure could be seen with her both hands wrapped in chains and her figure completely naked while a blue-colored wave of aura emanated from the figure and moved through the chains quickly passing through the roofs where the end of the chains couldn't be seen.

Zeras immediately moved closer to the figure seeing it was the image of a golden-haired lady around 18 years of age.

Zeras couldn't help but feel his head ringing and heart spiraling out of control as he looked at her perfect figure that was fully on display causing to him feel his blood flowing faster and faster in him but he suppressed the feeling as he walked to the chains binding her figure.

His hands immediately morphed into a long white blade.

SLASH SLASH

Her figure immediately fell weakly but Zeras quickly caught her figure before she could land in the ground.

His eyes narrowed looking at her as he wondered if this was the princess.

'Activate System Scan...'

Zeras ordered in his mind as a notification panel appeared in front of him:

[Name: Diana Amazonia]

[Age:18]

[Cultivation Stage: Middle Meteor Rank stage]

[Bloodline: Amazonian bloodline {A-grade}]

Zera's mouth dropped to the ground on hearing the information as he looked at her age and her cultivation.

"She's at the Middle Meteor rank stage at the age of 18!! Just how did she cultivate..."

Zeras immediately took off the upper robe he was wearing and wrapped it to cover her figure before strapping her to his back.

He could see a door at the end of the place and a horrifying amount of collision rang continuously just outside the door causing him to immediately jump off the alter as he immediately ran towards the stone door exit quickly disappearing up the stairs...

-- -- --

The sound of collision rang out continuously as the entire group of officers were pushed to their limit trying to defend against the apocalyptic power of the Shaman.

Every simple punch and kick was greater than the power of lightning and rending the ground and air apart.

Officer Halo was radiating an extremely bright light that illuminated the entire space and fried the air as ridiculously large veins bulged and wriggled around his body as he engaged in close combat with the Shaman, being the only one who could last against him when compared to physical might without dying.

The two Humban guards that were trapped in Officer Zurin's Shadow Realm had already broken through the realm and engaged in a heated battle with Officer Emmaus and Officer Pirad.

Officer Arroyo's genetic ability focused more on the intelligence side and was not battle-oriented but he was also kept busy by the Flooding Guards that continuously flooded into the room.

A smile widened on the Shaman's face as he let out apocalyptic power with every strike of his that made Officer Halo feel his blood tumbling in his body as his light flared even more brightly from his body trying to quickly Regenerate his wounds.

The Shaman's face suddenly changed as he felt the connection to the alter chains suddenly severed.

His eyes widened in disbelief Ashe roared crazily before throwing out a full-powered punch at Officer Halo causing him to be immediately sent flying Officer Halo had one of his arms explode to blood and bones but as if conscious, the blood moved towards him and got absorbed into his body and a new arm was soon formed.

The Shaman ignored him as he ran towards the door and kicked it open revealing the inside to the others but they couldn't help but notice the cut-off chain.

"Damn it... Someone already took her away..." A roar boomed out of the Shaman's lips.

"WHATTTT!!!" The officers screamed out in shock as they all barged into the room in shock.

"She's gone?"

"Damn it, then what have we been fighting for..." Officer Halo roared angrily.

The Shaman's eyes narrowed as he couldn't make sense of what happened but he could faintly catch the closing of the door and the sound of hurried footsteps echoing far away on the steps.

"Every Humban is to immediately Chase after the figure of a Humban carrying a Human on his or her back... This is an order by the Shaman. Stop whoever it is at all cost..." The Shaman said the voice reverberating throughout the entire settlement as all the Humbans immediately began rushing towards the temple.

The Shaman quickly turned back but was shocked speechless when he saw the five officers already disappeared out of the room.

"Damn It...Damn it..."

Golden Tickets and Powerstones are greatly appreciated.

I wonder which kind-hearted reader will give me my last review so the novel can finally get rated.

117 Hot Pursuit

A delighted smile hung on Zera's lips as he rapidly climbed up the steps. He finally successfully rescued the princess. Now all he needed to do was return to the EIA Base and he would have completed the quest.

Apart from that, he saved the princess. He was the hero. The amount of rewards that would be bestowed upon him by the EIA made him lick his lips in expectation as a satisfied grin hung on his face.

In the end, those damn officers who thought he was too weak to participate in the mission can go eat their shit back.

"Hahaha, fools..." Zeras muttered to himself thinking about the Humbans when suddenly a notification appeared in front of him.

[Mana: 0]

Zeras Humban's body immediately returned to his normal figure as soon as he exited the stone wall.

"Shit... I completely forgot to regenerate my Mana..." Zeras said shocked. He had been using Absolute Morph Gene for almost three days now and never bothered to consider the Mana consumption.

"There he is..." The voice of a Humban rang out from behind him as Zeras watched an army of Humbans running full speed towards him.

"Well, time to hit the road..."

"Activate Dash..."

Zera's figure immediately disappeared like a mirage as he flashed forward with intense speed that made all the Humbans hang their jaw on the ground.

"Fast... He's damn fast..."

"See you later losers..." Zeras shouted back at them as he quickly approached the exit of the temple all while laughing satisfiedly to himself.

If one thing was sure about him, it was his speed. And with the crazy amount of energy he just obtained, he could keep this up for an entire day.

"Hahahahahhah....What the!!!???" Zeras choked on his breath as he saw hundreds of Humbans at the outside of the temple.

"There he is... Kill him!!! Break his skull!!! Dig out his huge eyeballs..." "What the? It is your grandfather's eyeballs that are huge. You all go suck your dicks..." Zeras screamed angrily back as he immediately speeded to the sides, the army of Humbans rapidly closing in from behind.

With a stump on the ground, he immediately jumped out of the surrounding wall of the temple and landed at the side of the Tower, and immediately sprinted towards the forest quickly chased by the armies of Humbans.

-- -- --

Five robed figures could be seen on the faraway roofs of one of the settlements as they watched the chase at the faraway distance, but it was so far away that they only saw a tiny group of ants chasing after an ant.

"What do you see, Pirad..." Officer Arroyo gravely asked Pirad whose eye mask was already taken off and he was staring intently at the distance chase.

They were the ones ordered to complete the mission but it seems something or someone beat them to it. They didn't understand why a Humban would try to save the princess and neither was there any Human apart from them here. If they failed the mission, then it would severely affect their rankings and the EIA's reputation.

"A total of 250 Humbans are on the chase. I see a robed lady who is no doubt the princess but the person carrying the princess... He's... He's a Human?"

"What!!!" The officers immediately screamed out in shock on hearing that.

"Wait, it's actually him. It's the young Chap. Zeras..." Officer Pirad said as he blinked his eyes multiple times to confirm the information.

"Tch. That Damn kid. I thought I told you both to keep watch over him..." Office Arroyo said looking at Halo and Zurin.

"Tch. My boy saved the day in the end... Didn't he?" Officer Halo said as he sat his tired butt on the roof.

"Then we've completed the mission?..." Officer Emmaus said wiping off the sweat on his forehead.

"We're not. While the boy is pretty fast and the Humbans won't be able to catch up to him, still, the direction he's heading..." Officer Pirad said gravely.

"What's wrong with that..." Officer Arroyo asked trying to push off the conclusion he made in his mind...

"He's heading towards the Malevolent Sea. He won't be able to enter it and would get caught by the Humbans in the end..."

"WHAT!!!"

-- -- --

Zeras blitzed forward with all the speed he could muster as objects flung towards him from the sides but he still avoided them in the last seconds as sweat poured down his head looking at an especially large tree that flew past him. If that had landed on his butt, then he had no doubt what it would have done to them.

Well, at least he had a shield he was carrying behind him...

"Where is this?..." The weak whisper of a lady echoed behind Zeras.

"Oh, princess you're awake..." Zeras asked surprised as he jumped to the sides avoiding a huge plank that was thrown towards him.

"You..." Princess Diana slowly opened her eyes fully as she stared at the person talking to him with groggy eyes but it immediately snapped open in shock seeing who it was...

"Is anything wrong princess..." Zeras asked curiously.

"You're a male!!!??" Princess Diana asked him her voice brimming with shock and Zeras even felt the smallest sign of disgust but he pushed it away as an illusion.

"Um, were you expecting to be saved by a female instead?..." Zeras asked raising an eyebrow. He was expecting 'Oh? You risked your life for me?' and not being questioned if he was a male.

"Um, the EIA?.." Princess Diana asked curiously.

"Yes... I'm a New Cadet of the EIA." Zeras affirmed as he dodged to the side avoiding another collision.

She finally looked back as she saw the hundreds of Humbans chasing after them.

"I wonder why they are still chasing after you... They will never be able to catch up to you like this. And um, you're pretty fast for a Peak Star rank champ..." Princess Diana said raising an eyebrow as she looked at the speed Zeras was moving at which could even almost rival half of her full speed.

"Thanks for the compliment princess..." Zeras said satisfiedly.

"But you've just committed a grave offense..." Princess Diana said as she looked behind Zeras with a mischievous grin.

"How have I offended you, princess?" Zeras asked as sweat droplets rolled down his temple.

Offending the Princess of the Amazonian Family. He might as well just kill himself.

"There's a certain rule of the Amazon that says: if any male makes even the slightest physical contact with an Amazonian Princess. The most benevolent punishment for that was to have his manhood cut off and then all his five senses robbed off him, and the worst punishment was to naked him and then strap him with a rope to the back of a full speeding horse.

He would then be dragged across the entire ground of the Amazon ground and finally when he arrived at the center of the Amazon ground. He would be nailed both and and legs and then burned at the stake." Princess Diana recited out as she stretched out her finger recounting all she read in the Amazon laws scroll.

Zeras swallowed hard hearing that as his eyes widened into saucers while his dick suddenly grew cold and shrank in.

"Well. Should I perhaps just stop and then wait to be killed by our pursuers instead? At least I'll have a quick and satisfying death..." Zera's asked her causing Princess Diana to feel a chill run down her spine as the thought of why the Humbans initially kidnapped her rang through her body making her grind her teeth in hatred at them.

"Well, your fate is in the hands of the Matriarch and the EIA higher-ups, but I believe they can let you off the hook, just this once..." Princess Diana said causing a mischievous grin to appear on Zeras's face but they immediately faded away as he exited the forest and saw what was right in front of him.

"What the!!!??"

118 Trapped?

"What!!!" Zeras stood in shock looking at the dark stretch of ink right outside the forest. Palpitating waves could be seen at its surface extremely threatening and making his hair rise on their head.

"The Malevolent Sea..." Zeras screamed out at the same as Princess Diana herself.

He immediately skidded to a stop causing him to kick a stone into the sea and Zeras stood there shocked looking as the stone made a sizzling sound and was immediately corroded to nothing before it could enter deeply into the sea.

One thing was sure, he would be immediately reduced to bones if he dared stay too deep into the sea.

The sound of thunderous footsteps echoed loudly from behind him as Zeras turned rapidly.

A surprised gasp escaped the lips of every Humban present as they looked at the palpitating waves just behind him and they all immediately stopped their forward movement and even took a step back.

If there was one person who had the most fear and knew well the terror of the Malevolent Sea, then it was the Humbans.

"I want to see where you would run to again this time, treacherous humans..."

"You shouldn't have stopped. Come on, keep running..."

Zeras ignored the group of barking Humbans as he asked the princess:

"How much of your cultivation have you regained back..."

"Only enough to be at the Early Star rank stage..." Princess Diana replied. This was the first time she had ever felt so weak and helpless before.

The chains binding her figure were used to stop her from escaping but most importantly were used to sap away all her Mana turning her into an ordinary mortal.

She had only been able to harness back a Mana at the Early Star rank level.

'Then fighting is out of the option...' Zeras thought to himself looking at the group of Humbans, each with cultivation greater than his. Only one thing would result from fighting them and that is death.

A 2.4-meter Humban suddenly exited the group as he walked to the front coming to stay ten metres away from Zeras.

"I believe you can see you're completely trapped here, human, and there's no way of you escaping sure death today. But I admire your courage and therefore willing to give you a way out..." The Humban said causing Zeras to raise an eyebrow.

"To be honest, we do not need you. The Shaman only asked for her and that is who we are after. So leave the princess to us and we will forgive your atrocity. Or you can both get captured and you'll surely be killed..." The Humban said his voice dripping with murderous intent with the last words making clear to Zeras knew he wasn't joking at all.

Heck, he knew they would have already killed him if not because of their fear of the Malevolent Sea.

"Zeras you've tried your best as an EIA official. You can let me go with them. Besides I'm the princess of the Amazonian Family. I'm sure that old Humban would dare not go too far. So... Concede to their request." Princess Diana said.

"Then it seems, I have no choice..." Zeras muttered before grabbing onto the hands of Princess Diana.

"I would never abandon you, princess..." Zeras said staring into her golden-colored eyes with a reassuring smile before turning to look at the gigantic Humban as he flashed a mocking smirk at him before suddenly turning back with speed as he blitzed towards the Malevolent Sea.

"Come back you suicidal fool..." The Humban screamed out to him in anger as he jumped forward trying to grab Zera's figure but he was unsuccessful and Zeras immediately slipped into the Malevolent Sea and quickly disappeared within.

The Humban was shocked and speechless as he looked at the wave of the Malevolent Sea that was formed when Zeras entered into the Sea that was quickly settling.

He immediately turned back as he dusted his hands, dragged his trousers upwards, and walked back toward the direction of the settlement while whistling a happy tune.

All the other Humbans followed after him and they all cleared away from the scene.

Why?

Because they were pretty sure about the fate of anyone entering into the Malevolent Sea and that was sure demise.

-- -- --

50 minutes later...

The five officers finally arrived in front of the Malevolent Sea as they looked at the dark stretch of blank ink even though they didn't dare to enter it.

"Damn it..." Officer Halo roared angrily as he threw a punch at the ground causing cracks to emerge as the floor immediately sank in by a meter.

"Now everything is gone..."

"Not yet... Zeras EIA watch has been linked to my sensory device and it's still shining a green light which could only mean one thing..." Officer Arroyo said as he stretched out a triangular device and the others could clearly see the green light indicating Zeras.

"That means he's still alive..." Officer Emmaus said.

"But how..." Officer Zurin said looking at the Malevolent Sea.

"I don't know either, but that doesn't matter... The tracker of Zeras EIA watch is in the hands of the EIA base. I'm giving a call back to the base to immediately send a spaceship to wherever Zera's tracker indicated. We'll be getting back both of them at all costs..." Officer Arroyo said with determination as he gave a call to the EIA base and five spaceships were immediately sent out in the direction where Zeras was indicated by the tracker.

-- -- --

The water of the Malevolent Sea was extremely corroding as Zera's body flared with energy causing a circular dome of energy to surround both his figure and Princess Diana's protecting them from the water but Zeras could still see even the barrier he formed was being corroded.

"It wouldn't last long. At most a 30 seconds and we'll be reduced to bones..." Princess Diana said her voice completely hopeless.

Zera's eyes also narrowed as he realized that truly was the truth and looked at Princess Diana.

"Um princess, can I ask you for a favor?" Zeras said as his eyes steeled in determination.

"If it is about the Punishment, then you can forget it. It is useless if we'll be reduced to bones soon anyway..." Princess Diana said.

"Well, that's a promise... But that's not what I wanted to ask" Zeras said as he watched the water slowly seeping in.

"Oh, what's it?" Princess Diana asked curiously looking at him.

"It's simple really. Just help me keep my secret..." Zeras said with a smile as Princess Diana looked at him strangely.

"Ok, then. Although it'll still be useless in the end..." She said looking at the black water that was spilling over.

"Good. I hope you keep your promise in the end princess..." Zeras said out loud before he slowly closed his eyes as he dropped the princess on the ground.

'Activate Absolute Morph...' Zeras muttered to himself as he closed his eyes and focused, using the remaining points of energy within him to forcefully activate the genetic ability instead of his Mana.

The technique immediately activated as Zeras closed his eyes and focused on an image, the image of a creature he had seen belonging to the Malevolent Sea.

Princess Diana moved closer to the barrier as she looked at the cracks that started enveloping the barrier before suddenly the dark inky water started pouring in and quickly reached her.

"Zeras..." She screamed out in fear as she felt a slight pain on the part of her leg where the water touched causing a sizzling steam to rise from it but as she turned back to Zeras, she was shocked and her eyes shone in horror as a gigantic maw of a creature covered the entirety of her vision and she was swallowed in a single gulp.

Golden Tickets and Power Stones are greatly appreciated.

119 Moving Through The Malevolent Sea

Ever since Zeras had laid eyes on the Malevolent Sea, he knew it was a forbidden place no creature should ever go into.

The terror of almost dying to the Abyssal creature was clearly fresh in his memories and him kicking a rock and seeing it quickly corroding into nothing widened his eyes even more.

If that wasn't enough proof, he could see the terror of the Humans when they got close to the water and they were all crazily afraid of it but a thought had always echoed in Zera's head when he thought of the Abyssal creatures.

They were the only thing that could dwell in the water. The reason they were able to do that was mostly unknown to him but Zeras couldn't help but wonder. What if one could become an abyssal creature, then doesn't that mean one would be able to access the sea too?

It was mostly an impossible and non-sensical thought but it wasn't to Zeras who had the power of Absolute Morph.

When he was eating that roasted abyssal fish, he had carefully studied every structure and part of the fish and he knew he could morph into it and perhaps even use it to avoid getting reduced to bones on entering into the Sea but all that was just hypothesis and he would never consider risking being reduced to bones just for the sake of curiosity but now there was no choice and he finally gambled in using the form.

Immediately morphing into the almost 4-meter-long Abyssal creature, he immediately swallowed Princess Diana as the water immediately broke through the barrier and crashed into him sending streaking across the sea but he soon kept himself in balance as he closed his eyes in fear and anticipation.

On opening his eyes, Zeras looked at his bestial body and noticed the corroding effect of the water that would immediately reduce bones to dust simply passed him by with absolutely no effect at all.

A triumphant expression appeared on Zera's face in noticing that as he rolled around in the water a bit to confirm things and it was true, the corroding sea water was now just like water to him.

Zeras breathed out a sigh of relief as he balanced himself before quickly arraigning his thoughts.

"You do not need to worry, princess. You're safe now..." The voice of a human rang throughout the entire space Princess Diana sat- at the mouth of the creature.

Her heart almost leaped out of her chest when she saw the gigantic maw of the creature that swallowed her and the thought of them having gotten swallowed by an Abyssal creature rang through her head and made her give up all existing hope but seeing as nothing happened and she was just in the mouth of the creature made her raise an eyebrow but there was still the thought of the creature not being ready to eat them yet.

But the voice she heard now was the same voice of the boy who had decided to commit suicide with her just seconds ago.

And it seemed he truly did find a way out of this mess but she couldn't help but wonder where he was. She looked deeper into the dark distance wall but noticed nothing.

'Could he perhaps be one of those rare beast tamers?' Princess Diana thought in confusion but she knew even if he was a tamer, he still wouldn't be able to resist the effect of the corroding water and would have to be inside the stomach to avoid it but here he was nowhere to be found.

"You have nothing to worry about princess. You just sit quietly and you'll soon be back in the base in an hour..." The soothing voice once again rang out as Princess Diana ignored her thoughts and quickly focused on regaining her Mana in case of any mishap.

Zeras looked at the dark abyssal waters in front of him as he tried mapping out the area in his head.

He knew he just needed to be moving straight onward and there was a possibility of arriving at that narrow path close to Humban Chasm but he wasn't sure as he didn't even know his exact position in the sea.

'Guess I have to just keep moving forward and stay close to the surface in case I sight any spaceship...' Zeras thought as he began swimming forward which was at first very difficult but he soon got used to it.

As Zeras swam farther and farther into the sea, he finally started coming across them, other Abyssal creatures.

He noticed the smaller ones move together in groups and the larger like his size moved alone. There was completely no attack or anything like that between the creatures or towards him meaning even the Abyssal creatures couldn't see any difference to them in him.

Zeras looked beneath the Sea and he noticed it was so incredibly deep and dark that he had completely no idea just how deep it was. Besides, he could see faintly extremely huge body parts just beneath the Sea that he couldn't even make up just how gigantic their full body is.

His curiosity was piqued as he wondered just how did they grow so big. What do they feed on? It had to be noted that these types of beasts no longer grow by eating and the only way for beasts to grow in cultivation was the same as humans which was to cultivate.

And Zeras could sense there wasn't even the smallest figment of Mana in the Sea at all. But he knew there was an energy, a somehow dark energy totally and completely different from Mana. The energy he had never witnessed before but knew it could perhaps be the one that was responsible for changing the water into its inky black color.

'System what do you think of this?' Zeras suddenly asked curiously.

[Of What?]

'Of the Malevolent Sea. What do you think of it?'

[According to the system's calculation. The Malevolent Sea was a normal sea that got infiltrated by an external source of energy changing all the creatures in the sea and depriving of them all semblance of intelligence.]

'Oh, could that energy be perhaps Mana then?' Zeras asked curiously.

[No it's not Mana. It's the energy of Dark Matter.]

'Energy of Dark Matter?' Zeras mumbled to himself as he couldn't help but raise an eyebrow on hearing that.

'Is that why the beast also grew so big and powerful?' Zeras asked looking into the deep sea and a sprawling piece of land below but he was well aware it was just the part of an Abyssal creature.

[Yes. According to the System's Calculation. The source of the dark matter is just below where the creatures are gathered at the land bottom of the Sea.

The source of the Energy is a very rare treasure that once completely harnessed by The Host could increase your power to even reach the so-called Galaxy Rank Stage of Human Cultivation]

"What!!!!" Zeras screamed out in shock as his eyes widened to saucers on hearing that. A source of power that could increase his power to reach the Galaxy Rank Stage!!!

"Then what are waiting for... Let's go!!" Zeras screamed out as he immediately took a dive going beneath the ocean.

I'M EXTREMELY GRATEFUL FOR THE DONATED GOLDEN TICKETS. I'VE NEVER SEEN SO MUCH SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THIS NOVEL. WORDS CANNOT DESCRIBE HOW HAPPY I WAS SEEING THAT. THANK YOU.

-- -- --

Golden Tickets and Power stones are greatly appreciated. Let's rise up the rankings too guys.

Chapter 120 Mission Complete

"Then what are we waiting for... Let's go!!" Zeras screamed out as he immediately took a dive down heading towards the bottom of the sea but a notification appeared leaving him speeches.

[According to the System's Estimation, The Host will immediately die if he descends ten more meters.]

"What the???" Zeras immediately took a turn as he rapidly swam back up sweat dripping down his scaly fish head.

[As I formerly told Host. The birth of the source of Dark Matter completely changed the sea's structure turning the sea into the Malovelent Sea and depriving the sea creatures of all of their intelligence.

The Host had to know this was a gradual process and the Sea slowly turning, but now the Sea had been completely infiltrated. If The Host was to descend towards the Dark Matter source, his body would immediately explode due to the infiltration of the Dark Matter particles and if The Host magically escaped exploding, then his intelligence would be immediately robed off him and he would become like the abyssal creature, mindless and attacking everything on sight that doesn't radiate Dark Matter energy.]

The system explained as Zeras stood there numbed. He was just seconds away from losing himself.

"Damn System, why don't you tell me this earlier?"

[Well the system thought with the Host's increase in Intelligence as of lately, he would be able to quickly deduce that himself. But who would have thought he would still be a stupid inpatient and senseless bummer...]

'Tch, damn system...' Zetas thought ignoring the system's cuss and looking at the sea bottom instead.

"So I'll just let this opportunity go like that?" Zeras thought extremely regretful. If he was able to suddenly increase his Cultivation to the Galaxy Rank Stage today. Heck, he would immediately head down to the Celestria family and wipe everything out then go to Earth's major forces and request information about his origin.

[Of course not. According to the System's Estimate, the Host would be able to absorb the Dark Matter source once his fusion with the Chaos Devourer Gene reaches 100% fusion and that would probably be when the Host is at the Cosmic Rank stage.]

"Hmm, then I'll immediately come back to this place once I reach the Cosmic Rank stage..." Zeras swore to himself as he turned away and continued swimming.

-- -- --

2 hours later...

[Energy: 100/765]

Zeras looked at the system's notification noticing his energy which had almost finished. He had been swimming for almost a total of three hours and yet he didn't even notice the sign of close by land.

"Would I truly be dying here today?" Zeras asked himself as he moved even quicker when suddenly the familiar sound echoed to him from above causing him to raise his head as the most beautiful smile he had ever shone widened on his fish face.

"This is why I love the EIA. They show up just at the right time..." Zeras muttered to himself as he saw three spaceships flying around in a circular format just above him.

"We're now safe, princess. I hope you keep your promise..." Zeras said to Princess Diana as he spat her out of his mouth with full force causing her to be immediately sent flying out of the water while the figure of Zeras also followed.

They both landed back on the water's surface with Princess Diana landing on his back while Zera's face and body got pushed into the corrosive water as a sizzling sound of his face being corroded making him immediately lose consciousness.

"There they are... We've found them..." An EIA officer immediately jumped down with a rope behind him as he picked up Princess Diana and Zeras before the rope quickly pulled the three of them back up and Zeras was immediately sent to the Infirmary his face and upper part of his body completely corroded and sizzling.

"We've finally completed the mission. Head back to base..." The excited voice of an EIA officer rang out as the three spaceships immediately headed back toward the EIA base.

-- -- --

A boisterous sound of joy echoed throughout the entire EIA base as all the soldiers who had been sent to the war were told to retreat and that could only be due to one thing.

The news of an EIA cadet being the one to complete the mission already rang throughout the entire EIA base and to all EIA Officers even though the higher-ups of the mission tried all they could to suppress the information.

It was just impossible. It was mind-blowing news that one of the New cadets whose initial purpose was to act as support for the EIA officers was in the end the one who ensured the completion of the mission.

-- -- --

"So the EIA finally completed the mission. The princess was truly in the Humban settlement..." The powerful voice of a woman rang throughout the entire Amazonian Palace, shaking the palace walls from the amount of strength contained within those worlds.

"The Amazon Relation Stone never lies, Matriarch..." The voice of an old woman with shriveled golden hair and completely white eyes said, a small white mat placed in front of her where a golden-colored rock could be seen infused with strange inscriptions.

"I have always thought the old art of the Amazon was obsolete. You've changed my view about the Old ways of Amazons, Shanian. You've earned my favor..." The Matriarch said causing the Old woman to bow in response.

"Now it's time we show them just how horrifying the wrath of us Amazons are." The Matriarch said as the entire air around her was suddenly enveloped in cracks and a space of chaotic space appeared around her figure showing even space was directly succumbed and was crumbled just from her aura alone.

"Kidnapping my daughter and telling me they knew nothing of her whereabouts. Tch, I guess we Amazons have been a little quiet for too long and the world now takes us as soft permission. It's time we show the world just how we manage to rank fourth on the Nine Families ranking..."

"Nirama and Virama..."

Space immediately crumbled on her call as two vortex appeared and two female figures completely covered in armor and holding gigantic golden spears immediately appeared in the room.

"Yes, Matriarch..." Their voice which would have made any man immediately pee on his knees echoed out from them brimming with an impossible amount of killing intent.

"Yes, Matriarch..." Their voice which would have made any man immediately pee on his knees echoed out from them brimming with an impossible amount of killing intent.

"Travel to the Humban Planet. Reduce every living Humban in it to history and then bring me the head of that kid they called Shaman..."

"Consider your orders done, my queen." The dark vortex was once again opened up and both female warriors entered into the vortex and disappeared.

Nirama and Virama. One of the names of the Amazon Death Knights that can reduce an entire world to ruins in bare minutes. A name that strikes fear into the heart of even the most powerful powerhouses.

-- -- --

A stinging pain rang out in Zera's head as he slowly opened his eyes looking at the white ceiling above him.

He slowly regained his consciousness as he sat up looking at the different medical instruments around the room and the different plasters surrounding his body.

"Your regeneration is pretty impressive, boy..." The feminine voice of a woman rang out as Zeras looked at the end of a woman where a golden-haired lady dressed in a golden-coloured royal gown could be seen.

"Princess Diana?"

