

Chaos Devourer System

#Chapter 481: Trouble Comes In With A Bang!!! - Read Chaos Devourer System Chapter 481: Trouble Comes In With A Bang!!!

Chapter 481: Trouble Comes In With A Bang!!!

“Death...” Zeras completed in his mind as he kept looking into the distance. If the Colossal Devourers were banned due to their ability to absorb others and turn them to their strength, then what about him, who gains EXP based on the number of people he killed and gained energy from causing war and strife through the land? Once his identity as a Chaos Devourer is leaked, then he would no doubt be screwed, and the entire Upper Realm will instantly order for his death.

That said, not using his Chaos Devourer form would really limit his strength a lot. Sure, he could fight in any state, but to Zeras, the Chaos devourer form was the most natural to him.

It was the perfect state of combat where he would truly feel absolutely unhindered. And now he couldn't use that. It would no doubt hinder him a little.

“[Then Host can make use for now the Divine Origin wrath lightning. There are many races who use lightning in the upper realms.

Host won't direct too much attention using the lightning, and also the lightning is just as strong as Host being in his Chaos devourer form. Right now it is the perfect substitute...]” The system advised as Zeras gave a nod.

Suddenly, he felt the figure on his shoulder scratching hard on his cheek with those small claws as Zeras turned his attention towards Fluffy lying on his shoulder...

“Meow...” The cat said, pointing to a distant spaceship as Zeras raised an eyebrow looking at the spaceship.

It was thrice bigger than the G1 spaceship that he was currently sitting on, and on top of the spaceship, Zeras could see a small girly with blue skin, who currently had an oversized cat on her hands.

What Fluffy was probably telling him was the cat, and Zeras could see the cat truly looked all the same like Fluffy, but unlike Fluffy's four colors, the cat had two stripes instead: a maroon and grey color. Still it was no doubt a Void cat.

“MEEEEOOOOWWW...” Fluffy suddenly gave an extremely loud meow from Zeras’ shoulders immediately causing the attention of the surrounding spaceships to be directed towards Zeras.

But the cat which Fluffy signaled to quickly picked up the information as it opened its eyes looking lazily at the place, but its eyes widened to their absolute limit.

Immediately, it sighted Fluffy and instantly, it jumped upwards from the hands of the small girl as it carried its overweight body and ran with its fastest speed towards Fluffy.

“Come back here, Jack!” The shrill scream of the girl could be heard but the cat, as if deaf, ignored her and jumped onto the G1 spaceship.

With an interesting expression on his face, Zeras watched as Fluffy jumped off his shoulder, and immediately the light on both cats suddenly lit up brightly, and what followed was a moment of stillness for both cats.

“Hmmm, telepathy?” Zeras wondered in shock as he observed the thin line that was between both cats and could immediately determine it was used for communicating.

“He stole Jack, he stole Jack from me... Arrest him...” The shrill scream of the girl resounded as a total of five aliens immediately jumped down landing in front of the G1 spaceship.

Looking at their form, they were all about 1.8 meters tall, blue-skinned, mixed in with stripes of white and all dressed in quite luxurious materials.

They were all humanoid in shape, the only difference being their skin and also the strange crystals present on their foreheads, each of them radiating with different lights.

Suddenly, an older-looking person appeared in front of the group, his landing shaking the entire spaceship almost tilting downwards, and in his hand was the small girl that called Khan a thief as her fiery red eyes stared at Khan in fury.

Unfortunately, Khan didn’t pay any attention to her or the group, only giving them a side-glance before turning their attention towards the two cats who remained in the same state.

He had tried using his sense to try and decipher those tiny lines in hope of picking up their conversation, but it was all for naught. He couldn’t pick them up at all. They were just too complex.

“We the Giarans pay respect to the majestic Tryiomo Race...” The words were from a total of three people, which were none other than the three Giarans who all bowed to the elderly man at the front of the group.

“He...He stole my cat!” The girl roared out, ignoring the three Giarans as the eyes of the three Girans furrowed.

And as they turned to the aliens, they could see the same helpless expression on their face. Even a goat would know that couldn't be called stealing.

“This here is Princess Senna of our Tryiomo race...” The elderly man introduced as the faces of the Giarans changed massively. The princess of the Tryiomo race. One of the top three second-grade races of the common realm.

“We pay our respect to...”

“Get me my cat!!!!” She screamed, not even paying attention to the Giarans in front of her...

“Calm down, kiddo, can't you see they are in the middle of an important conversation...” Zeras barked back at her as he closed his eyes, trying to focus on those lines. The girl just kept screaming like a banshee and kept confusing him.

“What!?” Princess Senna laid frozen in shock as she looked at the back of the strange alien, her face unable to hide her shock.

This was the first time somebody had ever talked to her in such a way. And for a thief nonetheless. Even the face of D'arvey, Sylvia, Roaryie, and the remaining aliens massively changed as they looked at Zeras in shock.

“KILLLL HIMMM!!!!” The shrill scream was like that of a pig getting slaughtered as D'arvey's face changed massively, the same thing for all the people present on the ship.

“Are you all deaf, I said kill him!!!!” She screamed out once more as Zeras' eyes opened in anger, thick red veins squirming in his eyes. He was so damn close. So damn close to deciphering those lines, and that stupid noise just had to wake him up.

“How do you wish to die, kiddo...”

Chaos Devourer System #Chapter 482: Zeras Finally Getting Married!!!? - Read Chaos Devourer System Chapter 482: Zeras Finally Getting Married!!!?

Chapter 482: Zeras Finally Getting Married!!!?

“WHAT THE!!!?” Everyone in the room screamed out in shock as Zeras finally stood up straight from the ground. Standing at a height of 1.9 meters tall, he towered over almost everyone present on the ship.

“GASPS...” The gasp came from none other than Princess Senna, while the eyes of the aliens widened in shock as they stared at Zeras. They had never seen such an alien before in their lives, but what was even more shocking was how devastatingly handsome he was. He was the most handsome male they had ever seen in their lives.

Princess Senna simply stood rooted to where she was, her face growing pink with every passing second, but at the same time, her heart almost burst out of her chest as she looked at those red veins present in the alien’s eyes. From it, she could sense the purest killing intent she had ever seen, even worse than the beasts that her father used to force her to fight in the training ground.

“I...I... BUHHAAA..” Suddenly she sat on the ground, as she burst into massive tears that quickly covered the entire spaceship, and immediately, the two cats broke off their communication as Fluffy hurriedly jumped onto Zeras’ shoulder, trying to avoid the tears, while the fat cat scrambled for help, trying to run to its owner. But unfortunately, she was the one responsible for opening up the dam, and in the next second, it ran with its fastest speed, as it jumped on Zeras’ cloth and watched the tears wetting Zeras’ shoes with peace of mind.

“Hmm, it seems they also hate the water huh?” Zeras mused to himself as he picked up the cat clinging to his clothes and into his arms, although his clothes now had three claw marks present on its surface.

“Korama, he...he...he hates me. BUHAHAHAHA....” Princess Senna cried out as she jumped onto the elderly figure’s legs, a helpless expression appearing on the man’s face.

“Here... Here is your cat...” The gentle voice echoed out to her, as Princess Senna’s cries halted, and she turned to look at the man. But this time, the most beautiful smile she had ever seen lay on his face, as she held out her cat to her, and she stretched out her hand and took Jack in her arms.

“I’m not trying to take him away from you. Your cat just needs someone to talk to, someone that looks like me, and he found one...” Zeras explained as Princess Fluffy waved its tiny claws at Princess Senna, sticking its tongue out playfully at her.

“Does that mean, you... you’re not mad at me?” Princess Senna asked, looking at her feet, a couple of tears still flowing down as a smile appeared on Zeras’ face as he crouched to one knee, wiping her tears away with a finger.

“I’m not any longer. You have been very good to Jack. That makes you a good leader...” He said as Princess Senna’s eyes dried completely and immediately, a big smile bloomed on her face.

“Uncle Korama...” She suddenly called out as she dropped Jack onto the ground with a bang, causing the cat to roll its eyes at Zeras.

“What is it, my lady?” The man asked respectfully, still unable to believe how her princess changed so quickly.

“Can I bring him home?” She asked, pointing to Zeras as everybody’s expression, including Zeras’, turned strange.

“Um, of course, my lady, we can give him an invitation. But may I ask why, my princess?” Korama asked her.

“Because I want to marry him!” COUGH COUGH COUGH The sound of intense coughing could be heard from Korama who felt his blood flow in reverse for a second, and struggled with all he could to make it flow back to normal.

Everyone on the spaceship currently had their mouths wide open in shock as they looked at the small princess in shock, and even Zeras had a dazed expression on his face.

“Hey system, is it really that bad...” Zeras couldn’t help but ask the system.

[I think, the host might have truly outdid the charm stat a bit!] The system replied as Zeras’ heart dropped in his chest.

“What do you say, Uncle Korama, can I not marry him...” Princess Senna asked as Korama looked at the princess and then turned to Zeras before turning to look around, and he could see right now that all the spaceships around the place had already stopped and were currently staring at them.

“The mighty Princess Senna of the Godly Tyromio clan proposing to a man in public. What a beautiful and rare sight...” The words echoed out from a blue-haired young alien present on another spaceship which was just as big as the one the Tyriomo used. Daring to talk to the princess in such a way, one could immediately tell the young man too was in an equal position.

Giggles could be heard from those of equal status as Korama’s expression grew wary, but he dared not answer to his princess or he’ll be screwed by her hot-blooded father who could order for Zeras’ entire race to be slaughtered and he himself be brought here as a servant of the palace.

“Um, well, my lady. You must know marriage is a big thing and must be properly settled and well thought of. You don’t want to make the young man sad, do you? What about we give him an invitation. To give him the time to think about it. He would come home once he agrees. What do you think, my lady?” Uncle Korama asked, he himself wanting to find a hole to dig in, as the sound of giggles could be heard from the crowd.

“Hmm, ok. But I can only wait for three days...” Princess Senna said as a helpless smile appeared on her face, and he walked towards Zeras and with his head almost turning flaming red from embarrassment.

He passed a golden-colored card to him. “Your presence is very much awaited, Mister...” He said, and immediately he grabbed the princess, wanting to zoom off back into their spaceship.

“Wait Uncle Korama, you didn’t even ask for his name!”

Chapter 483: Arriving At The Giaran's Planet

Chapter 483: Arriving At The Giaran's Planet

“Zeras. His name is Zeras, my lady...” This time, it was D’arvey who responded, as a grateful smile appeared on Korama’s face. Before the spoiled princess could say any more words, he quickly disappeared into the spaceship, which immediately traveled away with all of its speed, becoming a shooting star.

“Zoom...” D’arvey sent the order through his communication device, and instantly, they also disappeared away from the crowd and into the distance. It was only a matter of time before the crowds completely dispersed from the scene, yet with so many higher families getting involved, it would no doubt spread through the realm: the 10-year-old Princess Senna proposed to an alien called Zeras!

“Huuu. It seems we were able to get out of that one pretty safely,” D’arvey said as Zeras looked at Fluffy, who was currently licking its small paws. Zeras turned to look at him, its lips widening a bit as it petted Zeras’s cheek. Of course, it understood what Zeras meant. This whole disaster might have truly been because it called its other family, or they would have encountered no scene.

“At least, you understand that you are at fault...” Zeras mused out loudly as he finally placed his attention on the three Giarnns before him and noticed that they were currently wiping off their eyebrows.

“It seems those Tromo clan are truly strong, huh? Or they wouldn’t have gotten you all so riled up,” Zeras said as D’arvey chuckled.

“Do you know that Korama that we saw? He is at the True Universe Origin Rank,” D’arvey said as Zeras’s eyebrows narrowed, his eyes flashing in shock.

“Then how come he radiated a very simple wave of aura?” Zeras asked in confusion. He had truly sensed the man’s cultivation and had discovered that it was just around the peak galaxy or Pseudo-universe origin rank at best. So how was it possible for such a person to be at the True Universe Origin Rank?

“That’s because they all hide their aura and lock their cultivation base. The True Universe Origin Ranks are akin to gods compared to mortals. In their true states, they can’t walk among us. So there is a law in the upper realms where they are forced to lock their cultivation base and hide their aura. Only for very important reasons can they unleash it...”

“That’s funny. Even a person at the True Universe Origin Rank must obey the rules,” Zeras said, rolling his eyes.

“Idiot. No one is at the peak here. If you think you’re strong, you will find a person who can kill you with a finger just at the end of the street. Even True Universe Origin ranks are no different from Cosmic rank experts from Earth. Just a little stronger but definitely not close to matching the world leaders who are at the Galaxy rank stage,” Roaryie said, snorting coldly, as Zeras’s eyes twitched continuously.

“Ahhh, we have faced two troubles already just bringing you here, Zeras. Firstly, you have fought with those pirates and crashed their ship. They definitely will get back at us one day, just as they said. Secondly, we almost crossed paths with the Tyromo clan. I still don’t understand how that changed so quickly. If the princess had truly been angered and not quickly calmed, I’m afraid you’d be on your way to the Tyromo clan right now, or dead,” D’arvey said with a heavy voice.

“Is it that bad? I thought that was just some simple skirmish,” Zeras said. He had found out that they were taking the matter too seriously. Wasn’t it just some childish girl who got the situation wrong, and is just displaying the sweet dumbness of childhood?

“We are born here, Zeras, and you just came here less than three hours ago. I’m pretty sure you’re the one taking it too simply. In the upper realm, you have to play it safe. If you had been taken by the Tyromo clan, then I’m afraid that would have been it. We’re just one of the thousands of low races. We have to play it well to survive among those thousands. As for crossing paths with those who are higher, that is one way to ensure our extinction, never the rise of it,” D’arvey said as Zeras’s eyebrows raised up in irritation, and he was about to open his lips when suddenly he felt the scratching on his lips, which was from none other than Fluffy.

“Huh?” Zeras mused as he saw Fluffy pointing to his neck. When Zeras touched it, he could see his scales were strangely out.

“Huuuuu...” Zeras exhaled loudly, as the scales once more disappeared. He then proceeded to scratch Fluffy’s jaw before turning to look at the three Giarns.

“I’m not the one to watch out for every move ever since I have been born. I have always taken the big path. Anything I do will surely cause a big ripple,” Zeras explained to them. Ever since he had joined the EIA, all the missions that he had undergone, he had never played a watch-your-move game. He was the one who would completely go out of the plan, and even the EIA viewed his existence as an anomaly.

"But just as you said, this truly is not the lower realm. I will try my best to tune down my frequency a bit," Zeras agreed as a disbelieving smile appeared on the Giaran's face before they gave a nod.

It was strange that Zeras had agreed so easily. All what he had done wasn't his fault at all. So how could he easily take the blame for everything?

"We're here. We're finally home," Sylvia Suddenly said as they turned their attention towards the palace. Right in front of their eyes was a gigantic green planet oozing with beautiful green aura, thrice the size of the dragon's planet which was around twice the size of Earth.

"Welcome, Zeras. To the home of the Giarans!" D'arvey said as the five spaceships slowly descended onto the planet...

Chapter 484: Meeting With The Giaran's Higher-ups

Chapter 484: Meeting With The Giaran's Higher-ups

Five large spaceships descended onto the planet. Of course, the Giarans were at first alarmed, but when the spaceship didn't trigger the alarm which happens when an object not of their creation enters, they relaxed themselves as their hearts began beating in anticipation.

And it seems they weren't wrong, as they saw the fourth Elder of the clan waving to them from the deck of the spaceship.

"Wait, isn't that the fourth Elder D'arvey..."

"They're back, they're back!!!" Those screams of joy could be heard throughout the entire Giaran's planet as everyone rushed out of their homes, a gigantic crowd gathering where the five spaceships slowly descended.

Immediately, all the Giarans began exiting the spaceships, and what occurred was just like when Zeras released all those humans back to Earth. It was truly a beautiful moment.

"You all can spend some time reuniting with your families for now. I'm sure the higher-ups will make a big announcement once it is time to reward you all, so enjoy this moment," D'arvey said through the communicator, ringing in the ears of the Giaran's soldiers who all gave a nod and walked off with their families or immediately ran to their homes to see their families that they hadn't seen for years.

"Let's go meet with the higher-ups, Zeras..." D'arvey said as they all immediately took to the sky and disappeared up into the clouds, becoming a beam of green and reddish light.

The palace of the Giarans.

It was a gigantic structure whose top reached even up to the clouds of the Giaran's planet, painted in some strange glossy material, with runic lines flaring with a powerful green inscribed on every surface.

Arriving before its steps, they all descended downwards as Zeras noticed the aura of the three Giarans instantly changed to utmost seriousness and focus. They began walking on those white steps, one step at a time, making their way forward to the top of the palace.

Arriving at the last steps, the palace's ginormous green-colored door was in full view. Stretching out their hands, D'arvey, Sylvia, and Roaryie placed their palms on the door and immediately it gave away, revealing the inside of the structure.

A very large hall just like its outside. The floors and walls were made of the same glossy white material, while the green inscriptions formed the shape of a lotus at the center of the hall.

Around the hall, Zeras could see a total of 12 seats, with just three empty ones, while there was a dais at the top of the hall, where currently three people sat.

"We pay our respect to the Supreme Elders..." The three Giarans around him greeted all on their knees with their heads downwards, leaving just a single person or probably two standing in the hall, Zeras who didn't move an inch, and Fluffy, who gave the room one glance before turning to keep licking its paws.

"D'arvey, Sylvia, and Roaryie. You three have all done a job worthy of respect. A noble mission for the progress of the clan. You can all rise and take over your rightful positions..." One of those Giarans at the top of the dais said as the three of them gave a nod before standing up and moving to their respective seats.

"I'm guessing you're the one they said Child of Life. But I very well expected it to be a female, no?" One of the three Giarans, a female with extremely long green hair that dragged down beneath her feet mixed in with her completely green flowing dress.

Her eyes were strangely only two unlike the Giarans', but Zeras could still see the remaining four slits on her face. She possessed six eyes, but she was currently using only two of them, just like a regular human. In such a state, she seemed more human than what Zeras had been seeing for the past 3 years.

Her eyes held no emotion at all, making it incredibly difficult to understand how she viewed him, but Zeras himself didn't even care for that. No matter how people looked at him, it didn't really affect him much in the end. Against the question, he uttered no words at all, and that wasn't a sign of arrogance. It is just that the question just wasn't best answered by him.

“That is true, Supreme Elder. The Child of Life that we know of was meant to be a human girl called Gaia Shiron, who possessed a 70% bloodline and also with a bloodline that originates from the same source as ours.

But due to a mix of events, we abandoned her and chose to go for him. If you might be willing to hear of my reason, then I will explain the reason for my atrocities...” D’arvey said, standing up from his seat and giving her a bow.

“Hmmm, then explain to me, D’arvey...” This time, it was a masculine voice that echoed out instead. And the source was from none other than a lanky man sitting at the top of the dais also. Dressed in a loose flowing shirt and trousers, his hair was a strange white, just like Zeras but very different from the Giarans who all possessed green hair.

It made him a stark contrast, although his eyes and skin were green in color and he looked no different to the Giarans.

“Thank you, my lord. When we arrived...”

And for the next, what followed was the narration of the occurrence that went on through the journey of the Giarans with Earth.

Everything, some that even Zeras himself was oblivious to, and D’arvey even made mention of what happened on their way back. The scene with the Tyromo race and the pirates. He explained everything completely, not even leaving a single thing out.

“What an interesting tale. So this is a deal between him and you. And also, he is one that holds an 80% bloodline purity...” The man said as he stood up from his seat and turned to look at Zeras.

“I want to see the truth for myself...”

Chapter 485: Fear Of The Unknown

The man said as he began stepping forward mid-air, as if there was an invisible platform under his seat.

“I want to witness for myself, the capability of one holding an 80% bloodline purity...” The man said as he arrived right above Zera’s head, causing him to turn his listless eyes above him and suddenly the man dropped down, his leg rapidly magnifying in front of Zera’s entire range of vision, surprising Audrey.

The young man made no move at all as Audrey stopped his feet just an inch from touching Zera’s face.

They could all see that the young man, though visibly about to be stepped on the face, made no move at all to avoid it.

Not even his eyebrows twitched nor did his eyes close and open for a second; not a single change in horror, and the same could be said for the cat on his shoulder, which also never stopped licking its paw.

“Hahahahaha...” A boisterous laughter echoed out from Audrey’s mouth as he descended right in front of Zera. Only now did Zera notice the man was just as tall as he was, a full 1.9 meters in height.

“Absolute Unflinching. I can sense that you weren’t afraid of getting stepped on by me at all. Almost as if you fully believe I wouldn’t step on your face. Tell me why? What gives you that confidence...” Audrey asked, curiosity flashing in his puzzled eyes.

“Because....” Zera said, his tone echoing out through the hall for the first time since he had arrived on the Giaran’s planet.

“You’re afraid...” Zera replied as everyone in the room had their expressions instantly changed to shock, not leaving the Giaran’s present at the top of the dais.

“You deserve death for that!” The roar of rage blasted out from the mouth of one of the 12 elder Giarans as the masculine figure rose from his seat, but he was stopped when suddenly Audrey himself raised up his head, stopping his motion.

“Tell me, why do you think I, a True Universe Origin Rank, am afraid of you, a person only at the Pseudo universe origin rank...” Audrey asked as Zera shook his head with a tired expression.

“When I came into this hall, you all looked at me. Every single one of you had your eyes and attention on me. You have never seen a being like me before, talking of physiological level.

I had created a sense of intrigue in you all and also a sense of caution. That was when your cultivation was valid. You all weren’t afraid, only cautious of me, because of your firm faith in the disparity between our cultivation bases.

But then you heard of my tale. Me being at the 80% bloodline purity. I am sure you all have only heard of someone being at the 80% bloodline purity, you all haven’t seen them eye to eye nor be so close to them as you are right now.

That sense of caution only grew more, and then you fell into the trap of your mind, faster than anyone in this hall did...” Zera explained as Audrey’s eyes narrowed.

“The trap of my mind...” “Yes. The trap of your mind. Your mind desperately needed to eliminate that feeling of cautiousness. After all, you’re so stronger than me, in your mind. Then you made a move, trying to break that mysterious aura of intrigue that surrounds me. You tried to step on my face, to see what I will do. To see if that aura of intrigue can crack open like an egg. But then, what your mind wanted never happened. I remained unflinching.

You were just an inch from stepping on my face, but then you didn't.

Was there anything stopping you?

No!

Were you stronger than me and could defeat me? Yes!

Then why, why didn't you do it, or to better say, why couldn't you do it?

Fear! Your cautiousness turned to fear! The Fear of the Unknown!" Zera whispered out with a wide grin, his voice reverberating through the hall and into the ears of Audrey.

"No matter how strong you are, you will still be subjected to the fear of something you don't know. Something that refused to fall into your trap and failed to go the way you predicted.

I knew that, and that is why I can remain unflinching in the first place. I know you wouldn't do it because you're afraid. It's as simple as that..." Zera replied, silence enveloping the entire hall as each stared at him with furrowed eyebrows.

"Hahahahaha..." Suddenly another boisterous laughter, even more louder than the first, boomed through the hall as Audrey laughed.

"For how many years have I lived now, 3000, 5000, 10,000? I don't really know. I'm tired of counting.

And how many years have I shown fear, I am sure it has never been more than 10. To be able to capitalize on such a brief moment of fear? I'm starting to like you already..." Audrey said with a smile as he stretched out his hands and clasped him on his shoulder.

"Still you have to show us you're truly an 80% bloodline purity holder before any decision can be made..." He said as the same candle mysteriously appeared in his hands.

And he stretched it to Zera...

"Show me what I have only seen before thrice in a thousand years..." Audrey declared as Zera grabbed hold of the candle.

And immediately, a bright Halo illuminated the entire hall, as shock appeared all over their faces. 8 beams of powerful red light. It was unmistakable, and the shocks before the Giarans couldn't be concealed.

People like this could cause entire clans to go into a world-ending war for. And now he stood before their eyes.

But among them, a total of three people in the hall sat with narrowed eyes. And those three were none other than D'arvey, Sylvia, and Roaryie, and currently a thought was running in their head.

The Lights. They weren't demonic like the first time that Zera had shown them. It is like their demonic aura has been tuned down to the lowest level. Something that should be technically impossible. 'Is he hiding his aura?'

Chapter 486: Fluffy, Not A Pet!

"It is true. It is really true..."

"An 80% bloodline purity holder. It is almost unbelievable..." they all murmured in shock as they stared at Zeras, who passed the candle back to Audrey.

"Hmm, it seems you're right. That said, let us go over the deal that you said was made. It was supposed to be a negotiation and mutual deal, right?" Audrey said as Zeras gave a nod.

"That's true..."

"Then if you understand well, your part of the deal was to allow us to give you one of our victims, something that we have done. And in return, you would help us win the prodigies event under our name," Audrey said as Zeras gave a nod.

"So you're essentially here to fulfill your oath of the negotiation..."

"That's true," Zeras said as Audrey smiled brilliantly.

"Then this meeting is over. I'm sure Novelia would know how to release the news to the public, wouldn't she?" Audrey said, directing her attention to the last of the three people sitting on top of the dais.

She was a girans who also only had two eyes opened, but unlike the first lady, she was younger. Her green hair reached only up to her shoulders and behind her back, and she simply sat down silently watching the proceedings without making any sign of interfering at all.

"I understand, Audrey..." She replied for the first time, her melodious voice like a piece of music being played.

And suddenly a strange scene occurred as Zeras watched Fluffy jump down from his shoulder and surged its tiny but up the dais. It struggled a little on those steps, directing the attention of everyone present in the room who all looked at the cat, wondering just what it was doing.

And after much struggle, Fluffy managed to climb up the steps, sitting down on the god like a tired dog as it breathed in and out to catch its breath. After 10 seconds, it finally stood up before moving towards the two ladies who were seated on the throne, and then she looked at both of them with a cursory glance before suddenly jumping on the laps of Novelia.

GASP

There were gasps of shock from the elders present in the hall, as Zeras swallowed hard a little. It seemed he was about to get into another trouble due to Fluffy, but strangely, all Fluffy did was rile its back on her laps before immediately falling asleep, his four colors lighting up and down as if he was breathing.

“Hmmmmm, wait. Isn’t that a void cat!?” Audrey asked with a raised eyebrow, finally understanding the reason behind the cat’s strange four-colored fur.

“Yes, my lord. I forgot to mention, on our way back, a void cat chose to fuse with him...” D’arvey said, forgetting to mention the encounter between Fluffy and Zeras.

“Hmmm, that is very rare. And a four-colored striped void cat nonetheless, really less. No wonder it clung to Novelia so tightly...” Audrey said as Zeras raised an eyebrow.

“Any creature with a special bloodline stays close to Novelia; they would experience quick growth in all aspects. That is why your cat is clinging to her. It must have just been able to know instinctively that clinging to her would benefit it and it simply went for it...” Audrey said as Zeras’s eyebrows furrowed.

“Can I trust her with him?” Zeras asked, his eyes focused this time, all sorts of playfulness disappearing instantly. A change that greatly surprised Audrey.

“Hmm, I think it’s just a pet?” Audrey asked as Zeras turned to look at her.

“Fluffy is not a pet. It’s a companion...” Zeras answered, drawing a raised eyebrow from Audrey, but his eyebrows soon relaxed.

“You have nothing to worry about. Not a single bit of his fur would be hurt. You can rest assured...” Audrey said, calming Zeras as she took his shoulder and brought him deeper into the hall.

“Come, you have much to learn about us and also about the prodigies event...” Audrey said, their footsteps echoing through the hall as they disappeared from the scene.

"Huuuu..." D'arevy heaved a sigh of relief seeing that one of the higher-ups found no problem with Zeras. If they had hated him, then he would have been in very big trouble. He had tweaked the order and left the supposed target, acting on his own orders when ignoring the higher-ups' orders. He might have found himself demoted if that occurred... Fortunately, everything went just as he planned.

"Summon the entire Giarns settlement to the Ancestral grounds; I wish to have a word with them..." Natoria, the long-haired female, ordered, causing the twelve elders to give a nod. Immediately, they all bowed once more before exiting the place.

Less than 30 seconds later, the hall was once again placed in silence, save for the sound of the purring cat present on Novelia's lap, whose hand enveloped in a green color gently rubbed the cat's chin, a small smile on her face as her green eyes flared with an even brighter light.

"What do you think about him, Novelia?" Natoria asked Novelia, finally directing their attention towards her.

"We both are disappointed that he is a male. What we were expecting was a female, while Audrey thinks a female is softhearted and unreliable. He is the most happy right now because the young man finally ended up being a male that he wanted so badly..." Novelia explained, chuckling as Natoria rolled her eyes at her.

"You sure are very good at weaving through questions. I don't need to remind me of it, you dummy. I asked what you think about him..." Natoria asked as Novelia chuckled before her eyes suddenly regained focus, a sign that Natoria knew through the years to mean her finally getting serious.

"I think... his cat is cute..." Novelia said as Natoria's eyes twitched repeatedly as she watched Novelia playing around with Fluffy.

"Tch, you both can't be helped," she said as she disappeared from where she stood, causing Natoria to also rise up from her seat and move out of the hall with Fluffy in her bosom.

Chapter 487 Strange Benevolence[Bonus Chapter]

"Takamahagara..."

"That is the name of our cosmos at its full. Takamahagara..." The words echoed through the cavernous hall where two figures stood.

One holding a flaming stick lighted with green flames, while the other stood behind him, eyes looking at the various inscriptions and various images drawn on the cave wall illuminated by Audrey.

They had descended continuously through a pit in the farthest area of the palace, then walked for three hours underground, passing through various hidden locks before finally arriving at the cave.

"Takamahagara..." Zeras mused out loud. Now that he mentioned it, only now did he find the word more than familiar.

"When Takamahagara was formed, it was a cosmos that gave birth to its own. The number of its first creation was limited, and those which were created by Takamahagara were known as gods.

Every bloodline you see, every power, every race you see, they all originated from this very people. They were the source of all other lives and possessed powers beyond our imagination..." Audrey said, illuminating the various runic symbols present on the wall that Zeras couldn't decipher.

"You can call them the origin. They could be said that once they come together, they would possess the power of Takamahagara itself."

"Or like Takamahagara divided itself amongst them..." Zeras whispered as Audrey gave a nod.

"These gods went ahead to create their own offspring, ones the same as them, both in bloodline and form. These people also go on to produce another offspring, and they too go on to produce offspring. It's an unending stream that would permeate till eternity..." Audrey explained as Zeras gave a nod.

That is how the creatures truly multiply without end...

"Takamahagara was whole, it was a world equal, a world of pride, until one day, it shattered! A war that raged through the world forcefully tearing apart Takamahagara into three parts. The lower realms where you were from suffered the most devastating damages.

A battle that resulted in the cosmic laws present in it getting forcefully erased, and forcefully tearing the balance of that part. It became abandoned by the majority of the race, yet there still leaves people living in it. That is where you come from, that is who you are. An offspring of the barbarians who refused to leave the place..." Audrey said as Zeras's eyebrows furrowed.

'No wonder there is no close to no law aura in the lower realms. So it was because it got destroyed in a war. A war that could result in the original law getting completely erased from existence. Just what level of power is that?' Zeras thought in his head.

"The upper realm is a place which suffered less from the war. Unlike the lower realms, its laws are still intact and its energy and life have not been drained. But still, the laws are only intact, they're not complete! There are some laws that have been erased too..." Audrey said as Zeras's eyes narrowed.

"And that is where the Prodigies War Event comes in. There are places where even though not complete laws, but still their laws are almost close to complete.

That is the God's children area of the upper realms, and that is where there are three most powerful sects. The Divine Battle Sect, the Thousand transformation sect, and the Divine Aether sect.

Those three sects are located at the highest echelon of the upper realms, and there, the law is more complete and the Mana at a level that we cannot imagine. It is believed that anyone with a 70% bloodline or more will reach the Undying realm rank if they were groomed by any of those three sects, and the only way for that to be accomplished is to sign up for the prodigies war event organized by those three sects for the lower areas of the upper realm.

"Hmmm, but why will they do that? What do those three sects have to gain from stretching a helping hand to you?" Zeras asked with a raised eyebrow. According to what he heard from Audrey, it was said that the God children's area of the upper realms had complete laws and mana.

Why would they ever want to make those who are in the lower ranking come share that rare resources?

It's just like the lower realms compared to the upper realms. Those in the upper realm do not fancy the lower realms at all. They call them lowlifes and just ignore them, saying that they are barbarians that couldn't be helped.

The same scenario could be said for the God's children area to the common area as well, so why would they offer help at all? The world wasn't a good and nice place.

They were thousands of races and each of them wanted to be better than the other, helping in this place is an incredibly funny and childish world.

"That's a reasonable question that none of us in the lower realm have an answer for."

"Huh?"

"We don't need an answer. When we have a genius with 70% bloodline purity and we allowed him to take the test.

Less than 200 years later, we would have an undying expert in our clan, which will lead to an automatic promotion and make us join the ranks of second-grade clans. No matter how you think of it, it is a win-win for us, and it requires no job from our side.

Almost like a free meal. Why would we bother asking why they're helping us? Perhaps it is simply because they wanted fairness and want to help us grow too. Who knows, who cares, so far we are winning?" Audrey asked as Zeras's eyebrows furrowed.

"And that doesn't sound wrong to someone like you?" Zeras asked as Audrey's smile receded and he sighed.

"Ahhhh, I know it sounds stupid and suspicious. They really do not have any reason to help us yet they do. It truly is suspicious. Why many clans don't pay attention, having been blinded by the prospects. Our Giarn's clan is not, and after years of searching for the reason for their strange benevolence. I have finally found it..."

Here's the 5th Chapter for the day. Thanks a lot for the support guys. Greatly appreciated. Thank you. Untill tomorrow then.

Supreme_IQ

Chapter 488: The War That Almost Tore Takamahagara Apart

"What is it?" Zeras asked, his eyes furrowed as he looked at Audrey, whose eyes lashed with a thousand emotions.

"I found out that it has something to do with the war. The war that tore apart the whole of Takamahagara in the first place..."

"The war..." Zeras mused as his eyes narrowed, bits and pieces of the puzzle flashing in his head.

"If Takamahagara had spread its power among those beings that it had created, then those beings, in all ways, should have a single purpose which would rhyme. Even if they had their skirmishes, it shouldn't reach a level that would cause them to shatter Takamahagara. And by comprehending the source of the damage that had been done, we can easily conclude that such a power level could have been from them. And that birthed the question, was there a war among them?"

"My answer is that, No! There was no war among them. It was an invasion!" Audrey's eyes flashed as Zeras felt his mind shake.

"An invasion? Like a cosmic invasion?" Zeras asked as Audrey gave a nod.

"In an ancient cultivation ruin, I learned that eons of years ago, Takamahagara was invaded by an abyssal cosmos. A cosmos said to be more hellish than hell itself! A war had broken out between the gods formed of Takamahagara and the devils from that world. It was what had torn Takamahara apart!"

“That’s unbelievable. I have never heard that before...” Zeras mused out loudly. To believe there was another cosmos out there, which invaded theirs and their battle was enough to almost tear an entire cosmos apart.

“I believe that the war up to now is still ongoing, and the three sects stretch out a helping hand to us because they need more talent in the war. Perhaps there is still a portal that must be regularly cleansed and they need our talent to do that. In return, they promise us an undying realm expert while they gain another helper in the ongoing war. That is my hypothesis...” Audrey said as he looked at Zeras, who remained dazed completely.

‘Another Cosmos. An abyssal cosmos. Why does it sound so familiar!?’ Zeras thought to himself as he looked dazedly at the wall at those ancient words and images. But he was soon brought out of his shock when a hand tapped him on the shoulder.

“There’s no need to pay too much attention to it; it’s just a hypothesis of mine. Just so you know a bit of what the Prodigies War event is all about, and what to expect if you get accepted into one of the three sects...” Audrey said as the light in Zeras’ eyes dimmed and he cleared away his troubling thoughts.

“Now follow me, let us analyze the Prodigies war event itself...” Audrey said as he walked back towards where they came from and Zeras rapidly followed after the man.

Now he was beginning to respect him. He could tell Audrey knew more about the world, maybe, just maybe, he could know the secret to his origins too. And if he doesn’t, then there’s no doubt he would be at least able to give some clues. He was a man worth listening to.

“The Prodigies War event not only tests talent, Zeras. It tests everything about a cultivator. Five major things to be exact. Firstly is the talent. Actually, the talent is not a base for disqualification. A person with a bloodline purity of 60% could also partake in the Prodigies War events.

Unfortunately, no one with such a low bloodline purity has ever been able to pass the Prodigies events. Only 70% or above even has a chance at all...” Audrey said as Zeras’ eyes narrowed.

“After the talent is tested, three most important things to a cultivator are tested. The quality of the body, mind, and soul! How pure those three things are. They would be tested by Prodigies war event, and believe me, the three sects know well how to test that...” Audrey said, his voice carrying a tinge of devilish energy within.

“Once you pass those four tests, then you will be eligible to choose which sects you want to join, and you’ll once again take each of their sect.

The Divine Battle Sect, just as their name indicated, test a cultivator’s battle power! In all of the upper realm, their students excel in pure brute combat that remained completely unmatched through all the three sects. The Divine Battle Sect can't be defeated in a battle of brawns by any cultivator!" Audrey said as a grin curved directly to Khan's ear.

"Oh really?" He asked, and Audrey also didn't fail to sense that mocking tone present in the voice.

"Yes. Do you know that to pass their test. You would have to fight a random student of their own and last for five minutes. Then you will pass the test..."

"Really, just last for five minutes? Not necessarily defeat him?" Zeras asked with a raised eyebrow as Audrey gave a nod and Zeras chuckled.

"A good way to reign down the pride of the geniuses. Imagine telling me to last five minutes against a person who is at the same cultivation base as I am? Just how sickening is that?" Zeras asked with a chuckle as Audrey also chuckled.

"Hehe. It won't actually even be a person at your cultivation base. The Divine Battle Sect will make sure it's a person who is even at a lower level..."

"Oh? So they want me to last five minutes against a person who is even lower than me in cultivation. Tch, is this some type of joke?" Zeras asked as Audrey grinned.

"You have no idea, Zeras. No idea of the terror of Upper realms true geniuses. You have to know that, one with a 70% bloodline purity is just barely qualified to even enter the sect.

Some of the students have been born and raised in the sect, taught by Undying realms experts. They possess bloodline purity of 90% and above, and some even tear through that threshold, reaching past 100%.

There are monsters in this world, Zeras. You better adjust your mind..."

Chapter 489: Raising A Man Into A god!

"Monstrous geniuses, huh?" Zeras mused before shrugging.

"You look overconfident in yourself. Like you have never lost a battle before..." Audrey said as Zeras chuckled.

"Never lost a battle? I have lost many battles, battles where I had no choice but to run with my tail between my legs and beg for my legs to move five times faster so I can escape!" Zeras said as Audrey burst into boisterous laughter.

"Then what gives you so much confidence? You exude an aura of not caring at all about anything. Almost like you just remain indifferent to the entire world. I am a True Universe Origin rank and judging from D'arvey's description of your strength. It is safe to say that you're at the Pseudo-universe origin rank. Yet, I don't feel that at all. It feels like I'm talking to my equal. There's no pressure of the weak and the strong at all..." Audrey said as Zeras chuckled.

"I really have lost many battles, but all those battles, they are to people who are just too above me in cultivation. Just so far away from my league..." Zeras said as his eyes flashed and he remembered his battles with Adrian, with Shima, with the shadow walker devil, with Demorgogon. They were all devastatingly strong and just too far above him.

"That said, I have never lost a battle with a person that is present within my own cultivation base. That's probably what gives me confidence..." Zeras said with an unbothered expression. But in truth, that was a lie.

His confidence came stemmed just how many life and death situations he had scraped past. How many times he had fallen and risen and fallen once more. Abandoned, left to die, beaten to a pulp, underestimated, crippled, abandoned once more.

It was an endless circle that just kept repeating, each one enough to make some cultivators never rise up again. Yet, he had gone through the majority of them more than once.

It was a devastating experience, almost like someone or something was purposefully testing him. But still, he was standing right now, and that was what gave him confidence.

"Hmmm, that's commendable. Hopefully you're able to keep that record once you partake in the competition..." Audrey said as Zeras smiled and didn't respond.

"You said the Divine Battle Sect tests your combat ability, right? Then what about the other two sects, what does the Divine Aether Sect test?" Zeras asked, already deciding which sect he would probably choose among those three.

"The Divine Aether Sects are a sect that cultivates Divine Power. Like elements, attributes, energies. They are the absolute opposite of the Divine Battle sect that cultivates the body. If the Divine Battle sect can be said to be a school of warriors, then the Divine Aether sects can be said to be a school of mages..." Audrey said as Zeras gave a nod of understanding. That was pretty much what he expected judging by their names.

"And it might be more surprising, but the students of the Divine Aether sects are just as powerful as the students of the Divine Battle Sect. They are not in any way weaker..." Audrey said to him as Zeras gave a nod.

The only reason why he might want to join such a sect was if he wanted to focus on his origin wrath lightning. Apart from that, he didn't have much affinity with the Divine Battle sect.

“And what about the Thousand Transformation sect?” Zeras asked as Audrey’s eyes flashed.

“The Thousand Transformation sect is a mystery sect. They only accept people possessing special physiques, irrespective of what they excel in. Battle warriors, Mages? You’ll find them all mashed together in the Thousand Transformation sect. The Thousand Transformation, unlike the other two sects, focuses mainly on cultivating the laws of this world.

“Do you know what a law is?” Audrey asked as he shifted his hand to the side and pointed at the bare rocky ground. Immediately, a green aura coated his hands, and right in front of Zeras’ eyes, he watched a single flower begin growing from the bare ground.

“We Giarans excel mostly at the law of life. That is one of the applications of it, and that is what the Thousand Transformation focuses on.

Comprehending those laws that make up our world. I hear that their mission for creating the sect is a very strange one and they get mocked by the other sects for it...” Audrey said, piquing Zeras’ curiosity.

“Oh, and what is that?” He asked with a curious smile.

“To raise a man into a god!” Audrey said, chuckling mockingly at himself, yet he watched as Zeras stood rooted to where he was...

“Raising a man into a god! Raising a man into a god! Raising a man into a god! Raising a man into a god!...” Those words played continuously in Zeras’ head with no end. And with every repetition, his heart violently pumped in his chest.

BADUMP

BAADUUMP

BAADDDUUUMP

“Zeras, are you okay?” Audrey asked as he looked at Zeras and his eyes contained shock.

From Zeras’ eyes and nose were currently dripping with dark blood, and suddenly he watched as Zeras began moving erratically backwards.

“What the hell is wrong with you, are you okay?” The voice rang out to Zeras but it was so far away.

“Raising a man to be a god! Raising a man to be a god! Raising a man to be a god!”
The words were like a ten thousand warriors roaring into his head as his hands clasped tightly against his head and Zeras fell onto his knees.

[ERROR! ERROR! ERROR!]

[Host has been triggered by a forbidden word!]

[Host is too weak for the triggering!]

[Host body is starting to collapse!]

[Activating all forms of regeneration to the highest level.]

[Using all Host’s ability upgrade cards for regeneration.]

[Regeneration has been upgraded.]

[ERROR!]

[Regeneration is still not enough!]

[A Supreme power is trying to lock on the Host!]

[System’s Security Protocol Has Been Triggered]

[Forcefully Shutting down Host in 3...2..1.]

And immediately, Zeras’ body dropped down to the ground as if dead, as dark blood kept oozing out from his senses.

Yet as Audrey carried him and ran into the distance with his fastest speed, he failed to notice that golden flicker.

That flicker from the necklace on Zeras’ neck!

Chapter 490: Returning Back To Where It All Started!

The roar in his head, the helpless call from Audrey, everything slowly disappeared into pitch black darkness, and the entire world quieted down.

What followed was a deep moment of peace, a peace that could only be replicated by an infant's presence in her mother's womb.

Yet, it didn't last at all, as the forceful dragging began and immediately, his eyes snapped open.

A rift appeared in the dark space as Zeras opened his eyes brightly, his piercing blue eyes flashing with a piercing beam of blue.

Immediately, he focused his attention around him, and his jaws dropped onto the ground.

This place was where it all began, this was the place that had started it all. It was a dark space illuminated by multi-colored lights, and those multicolored lights were emanating from gigantic crystals which all let out a deep and phantasmal aura!

"This... This is where I found the Chaos devourer gene!" Zeras whispered to himself as he looked around the place and discovered that he was surrounded by the same crystals, some even larger than the Chaos devourer gene, and the aura oozing out from them almost made his heart stop beating in his chest.

"So, you're the one? How disappointing!!!" The roar of rage boomed through the space as Zeras' face changed, and immediately, he snapped his eyes upwards, the place where he could hear the voice coming from.

But the thousands of crystals covered his face, and immediately Zeras ordered,

“Activate the Eyes of Chaos...”

Instantly, his gaze pierced through the thousands of crystals, quickly reaching the strange dome and piercing through...

“Do not use that God-forsaken eye to look at me...” The roar boomed out once more, and immediately...

CRACK! CRACK! CRACK!

Cracks began spreading all over Zera’s left pupil as the Eyes of Chaos began shattering into pieces, but before it could completely implode, Zera shut it tightly.

“Found you...” He mused to himself, and ignoring the crystals, Zeras burst upwards with all his speed, tearing apart the space before forcefully smashing both fists on the golden-colored dome, and immediately he ripped it apart completely.

Arriving outside, he finally saw the figure. And that day, Zeras laid eyes on a being infinitely close to being a true god! It was a dragon that looked like a snake, its tail spreading over into the distant stars overlaying on thousands of planets, till its end eventually disappeared from sight. It was big, so big that the various stars and planets surrounding its body looked like small stones.

And right now, Zeras was standing right before one of its eyes, whose mere size alone almost covered his entire field of vision.

But Zera's eyebrows suddenly furrowed tightly when he noticed ginormous chains wrapped tightly around its body, each of them brimming with various mystical auras.

A power level that made Zera's heart shake. There was still something that can restrict the being before him!!!?

"Who... who are you?" Zeras struggled to ask. And immediately, he noticed the red veiny streaks that appeared all over the dragon's eyes...

"I swear by Takamahagara, if not because of these chains that your mum wrapped around me, I would have immediately eradicated you from all planes of existence and stopped the road of Samsara from allowing you to place a foot on it for 10,000 years..." The dragon roared out loud and its words shook Zeras with so much power that his white soul body rapidly dimmed of its white color, and immediately Zeras' knees smashed onto the ground.

"WEAK! HELPLESS! USELESS! YOU'RE NOT WORTHY OF BEING THE SON OF HER! BE GONE!!!" The roar of rage reached a deafening level, and immediately, Zeras was sent smashing backward with so much horrifying speed, he had only moved five thousand miles before a gigantic cataclysm explosion rocked from the distance and immediately, he was drowned by the power, which eliminated all sorts of resistance in his mind, and the space once again shattered into pieces just like last time.

Opening his eyes, what appeared before him was the white glassy material inscribed with green runic lines.

Beside him stood a Giaran female, whose hands were currently placed on his bare chest, a green aura coating her hands giving Zeras a refreshing feeling as he felt an incredibly peaceful aura wash over his entire body.

"I cannot thank you enough for your help, but you can take your hands off me now..." That was the first thing that rang out from Zera's mouth as the Novelia took away her hands from Zera's chest.

Looking at her face, it had turned completely pink, and one could see the sweat dripping down her face, a sign of her doing all she could to reign in the control of herself, and immediately, Zeras grabbed his shirt from the other side of the bed as he moved out of the room.

Clenching open the knob, he suddenly stopped himself as he turned to look at Novelia...

"Where is Fluffy?" He asked, noticing that the cat was no longer with her.

"It is fishing in the river of life currently..." Novelia said as Zeras raised an eyebrow, but he paid not much mind as he moved out of the room, the door coming to a close a moment later...

And immediately, Zeras exited, Novelia sat cross-legged on the ground as a green aura coated her body, her eyes closed in deep meditation...

An hour quickly passed, and finally the pink on her face all cleared away as her initial smart-looking expression returned as she turned to look at the door and a smile appeared on her face...

"Thank you, Zeras," She whispered as she looked down at the ground, her face still lit in embarrassment at what just occurred a few hours ago.

She had been unable to control herself from lust! Just staring at the young man's naked body had triggered her so much, she was just seconds away from pouncing on him.

But it was like the young man understood, as he immediately left the room, the second she was about to give in to her bodily urge...

That, she was grateful for...