Chapter 517

Chapter 517 Successor

Martin knew that Paige was concerned about her boys, so he took the initiative to tell her about their situation.

He sat by the sofa and never took his gaze away from the girl for a moment. He asked, "Feel better?"

"Well, much better"

Martin picked up something to feed her again and said, "After I handle, business here, I will take you back to our country to visit other doctors."

"They are not severe. I'm okay."

It was obvious that Paige didn't take her wounds seriously, but Martin felt distressed and said, "You hurt so bad. Don't say that you are okay."

"I agree with Martin. After returning, you should find several doctors and have a good examination."

"See, Lamont has said that."

Seeing that they are very serious and that they would not make a concession, Paige could only compromise and say, "Okay."

Hearing that, Lamont and Martin looked relaxed.

"Lamont, have you found anything new with those two data packets?"

Paige asked.

"No," Lamont answered gently, "Take a good rest. Today Martin has already taken your little boys to avenge your hurt. Let us call it an end.

Next, you just need to recover, study well, and cherish your relationship with Martin. I agree that you two have a romance."

Martin's look softened. He finally gained the recognition of Lamont.

"It seems that you have some new discoveries," Paige curled up her lips and said, "Don't you plan to tell us? It is very dangerous?"

"No. You are overthinking."

"Lamont," Paige said with interest, "I had already backed up the data package before handing it over to you. If you don't tell me, I'll check it myself later."

"Paige!"

Perhaps Lamont didn't expect Paige to act like this, Lamont said anxiously, "This matter involves so many people. I don't want you two to be involved."

"Lamont, do you think we are unable to cope with it?"

"It's not a matter of ability. It involves too many people and is more complex than we imagined. I want you and Martin to live well and not get hurt like this again."

God knew how heartbroken he felt when he saw Paige hurt like this...

"Are you afraid of implicating us?" Paige seemed to guess something and asked, "Are they very powerful?"

Paige wondered in her heart, "Even more powerful than Martin?"

"Paige, be good. Don't care about that anymore."

Lamont's words made Paige and Martin glance at each other. Martin seemed to agree with her and said gently, "Check it out."

He also wanted to know who could make Lamont so afraid.

"Martin?" Lamont didn't expect Martin to allow Paige to mess around, and he immediately said, "Can you two be good?"

"No," the two of them spoke in unison. Paige took out her phone and was going to open those two data packets.

"Paige," Hearing that, Lamont couldn't help but say, "This matter involves many countries and politicians. I am not scaring you.

Whether you agree or not, I will not allow you to interfere in this matter anymore."

This was no longer something that one or two of them can solve...

It was not something that a gang could handle...

Today, to avenge Paige, Martin had already mobilized nearly half of the forces of the Ghost Alliance. After he returned to his homeland, there would be many traps waiting for him.

If they investigated further, they would pull out a majority of the international forces.

Paige knew it and said, "So, Ghost Alliance is like the left and right arms of these people. These two data packets not only are evidence of Ghost Alliance's wrongdoing but also threaten their status? That is why Ghost Alliance is in a hurry to retrieve these evidences? Because they are in the hands of Yana, she becomes their target?"

"Anyway, you promise me that neither of you will interfere in this matter anymore." Lamont didn't plan to elaborate.

He knew Paige was smart, but this matter involved so many people that it went beyond their ability. If they intervened again, it would not be as simple as being tripped up by someone in the future.

At best, their family may perish. At the very worst, they may implicate everyone around them in going to hell together.

"One of the reasons why they followed Yana was that she had this evidence. What other reasons?" Paige asked again.

Lamont didn't expect his younger sister to be so smart that he couldn't hide anything from her. After a pause, he could only say, "She was born with a unique talent and personality. The leader of the organization really liked her and trained her as a successor..."

As a successor, she had no need to do everything personally like other grassroots subordinates.

Put simply, Yana had never done anything outrageous.

The leader often brought her with him to participate in various internal activities. In addition, she only needed to regularly participate in special training courses tailored for her by the organization, that was all.

Because she always performed outstandingly, she was highly valued and liked by the elders.

Although young, Yana possessed the highest level access card, which was the silver key. After the leader's death, only she was qualified to enter the private realm of Ghost Alliance Mountain.

The symbol necklace she placed in Lamont's amulet was a token of her identity as the successor.

With that necklace, she was like the leader of that organization. And everyone belonging to that organization must obey her orders after seeing the necklace.

The reason why Yana placed such a precious necklace on Lamont was that she was afraid that people of the Ghost Alliance would trouble him. This necklace could save his life. Paige understood and said, "So they searched everywhere for Yana.

They didn't want her to change her mind and continue to be her successor. They wanted to take her token and replace her? By the way, they want to destroy everything she has about the organization..."

Lamont nodded and said, "That's right."

So, Yana had to hide. Once they found her and the token was taken back, she and Lamont may die.

"What about the poison on her body?" Paige asked again.

"I looked at the previous part of the data package and it said that Yana wanted to leave the organization. The elders were very angry and opposed. But after countless arguments, the elders finally made a concession and punished her like a traitor."

That was drinking the most toxic chronic poison inside the organization. And after she left the organization, she could only resign to her fate.

"Did Yana drink it?"

Lamont nodded heavily. She had finished drinking all of it, but what she didn't expect was that the poison worked so quickly.

And, it brought her more and more pain...

"Since the seventh month of our relationship, the poison worked, and she has been in great pain for six months. It's really hard to cover it up, so she chose to leave..."

Lamont didn't expect that Paige guessed that all right. Yana did love him and didn't fall in love with others. She was tormented by this poison and had to leave...

Besides, at that time, the people in the organization broke their promises that they let Yana go and would never get involved in her life. as long as she took the poison...

They chased after her again and again. At first, they persuaded her to go back and become the successor. Later, they discovered that she was stubborn, so they wanted to take away her successor's token to replace her...

Not only some people within the Ghost Alliance, but even many external forces only recognize tokens rather than the successors.
