Paige's body had recovered a bit, and she heard that Nate and Lamont were about to fight. She came to Yana's room door, knocked on the door, saw Nate irritated, and said softly, "Be kind to my brother."

"Paige, you don't know him...." Nate just wanted to tell Paige that she didn't know how far her brother had gone, but when he met Paige's warning eyes, he suddenly felt oppressed.

To be honest, in the past few years of knowing Paige, he was a little afraid of her eyes, which inexplicably made him a little apprehensive.

Nate's momentum weakened, and he explained, "It's because he did something wrong."

Paige looked at Lamont, and Lamont admitted under pressure. "It's my fault."

"Calm down." Paige didn't want to meddle in their affairs. She leaned against the door and said casually, "Don't disturb my sleep."

Nate's rage faded inexplicably. Yana saw the clue from it: her brother seemed to listen to Paige's words?

It couldn't be. It was impossible??

"You, keep an eye on them," Paige talked to the servants at the door, and left gracefully.

The servants couldn't believe it. Ms. Paige just came to say a few words, and the atmosphere of the scene toned down....

"Brother. A year ago, I didn't tell my family about my relationship with Yana. It was my fault," Lamont admitted voluntarily, "I wanted to wait for my relationship to stabilize and propose to Yana before telling my family. I didn't want my family to disturb the life of Yana's family in advance."

Lamont knew very well how enthusiastic his mother was and she might peek at Yana at any time or even pay a visit.

"My love for Yana is evident to heaven and earth," Lamont said earnestly, "I had been in pain and suffering since she left over a year ago. Now that she is back, I will definitely treat her even better. I'll take care of her, be with her, and let her get well soon."

Yana was moved, and looked at him softly.

"As for Callia, I have always regarded her as a friend, and I have never crossed the line. I can swear to God," Lamont explained, "My mother just loves to be a matchmaker, and my eldest brother and second brother both have girlfriends, so she naturally focuses on me."

He was thinking that after he and Yana recovered from their injuries, he would bring Yana home...

The timing was wrong.

"But you also heard it just now. Your mother cares about being well-matched. Yana doesn't have a prominent family background, and she's not a daughter of a rich family. She's not vivacious enough and can't flatter anyone. She's also the accessor of the organization..."

She didn't look like someone Danica would like at all.

"My mother cares more about her son's happiness. As long as this person is her son's favorite, she will definitely agree."

Lamont was sure of this.

"What's more, I don't think there's anything bad about Yana's personality. At least I like it very much. She doesn't have to please anyone when she's with me. Whether her family is rich and whether she has a prominent family background don't matter to me at all..."

The important thing was that Yana could be by his side.

The other side.

Callia just walked to the garden with the clothes that Danica gave her, and before she really left the Lusk family's villa, she saw Patricia and Amily whispering in the garden.

Callia knew that Amily had served Patricia for eighteen years, and the relationship between them. had already been that of a mother and daughter.

She took the initiative to smile, "Patricia."

"Callia?" Patricia stopped talking with Amily, looking at Callia with a sweet smile in her eyes. "Are you looking for Lamont? He won't be coming home soon..."

"I know, your mother said he was busy with work..."

"He live in his own house recently. I guess it should be Moon Bay. Let's visit him together someday?" Patricia offered to show her kindness.

If Callia visited Lamont with his younger sister, Callia's motives would not be so obvious.

Feeling Patricia's enthusiasm, Calia smiled and said, "Okay, thank you."

"You are too polite."

They exchanged pleasantries for a while before Callia came home. As soon as she entered the room, she couldn't wait to try on the clothes, and she didn't forget to put on all kinds of pretty and naughty faces in front of the mirror, and took videos for Danica to watch.

There were nine skirts. She took nine videos and still did not forget to say, "Thank you, Auntie. You have such a good eye. The skirts you choose are either beautiful and generous, or naughty and cute. Each one is my favorite style. Thank you so much for your kindness..."

After sending these clips, she thought she looked good in these clips, so she forwarded them to Lamont.

Lamont heard the phone ring nine times, took it out, and saw videos from Callia.

He was a little puzzled, and when he clicked on one of them, he saw Callia wearing a cute tutu skirt, making various cute expressions in front of the mirror...

Since the sound of the video was played externally, everyone heard Callia saying, "Oh my god, this dress is so cute. It looks so good and so energetic. I like it very much. Thank you. This dress must be very expensive..."

Lamont didn't understand why Callia made such a weird video and said some nonsense in the video. Feeling Nate's gaze, Lamont hurriedly sent a few question marks to Callia.

Soon, Callia replied, "Lamont, don't I look good in these clothes?"

The voice was sweet, and there was a smile on it, which made Nate even more furious...

Yana on the side didn't have much expression...

Lamont was in a hurry, and couldn't help asking. "Tell me about these clothes first. Others might think I bought them for you... Why did you send these to me?"

Callia smiled again, "Auntie bought me so many beautiful clothes. I'm happy, so I sent them to you.

Auntie is so caring, and she treats me like a daughter..."

When Nate heard this, his anger could hardly be suppressed.

"My mother bought you clothes?? Then you send them to my mother. Why send them to me..."

Lamont was a little depressed.

Callia didn't know what made him unhappy, so she hurriedly made a voice call.

Lamont didn't want to answer the phone at first, but after thinking about it, he felt that there were some things that he needed to tell her clearly, so he pressed the answer button and turned on the speakerphone.

"Lamont..." Callia's sweet voice came from the other end, "I'm just sharing my aunt's kindness with you. Why are you unhappy? Am I disturbing your work? Or are these clothes not what you like??"

Callia seemed to be a very considerate, gentle person who cared about Lamont's feelings.

Yana's eyes deepened a bit. Thinking about the year she had been with Lamont, she seemed never to talk to him in such a gentle tone. Every time Lamont took the initiative to care...

"Callia, I have something to tell you," Lamont said seriously, glancing at Nate and Yana, "We can only be friends, sorry."

Callia's smile froze.
