Chapter 539 To Be His Disciple

"The melody of the song is passionate and majestic, and you have a very good sense of rhythm and power. It's amazing that you've interpreted everything that this song is supposed to interpret. I dare say that after you, there will be no one able to interpret it better than you, unless it is the violin master – Micaela Galbraith, come back to the music world."

What an evaluation!

That made a new level of excitement in the audience!

Micaela, Larry Frey, and Clarissa Bertha were the three legends in the international violin circle, and they could be called the three greats, representing the pinnacle of the 21st century violin scene.

Among them, Micaela was the most mysterious. No one had ever seen her in real life, but the six pieces of music she created were like the sounds of nature, and they were popular all over the world.

Many violinists, who could easily master all kinds of violin pieces, did not dare to touch Micaela's work, for her pieces were a test of the true ability and internal strength of the player, and most violinists did not dare to attempt them lightly.

The World performed by Micaela and violin master Larry before had been surpassed by no one so far.

Although she did not show her face in The World, the performance of the two had become a legend.

Now, this professor of music at University of Chicago actually compared Paige to Micaela...

Kailyn on the side subconsciously clenched her fists, furious.

Another well–known musician, Andres Robert, picked up the microphone and said appreciatively, "Micaela has created six violin pieces. The seemingly simple scales and arpeggios contain rich and ever–changing emotions. Any piece demands highly on the self–cultivation, layout, intonation, skills, etc. of the player."

He looked at Paige and said softly, "Few violinists at home and abroad dare to try her pieces easily in public, because they are afraid that the level they can play will not even reach half the level of Micaela, but now, tour improvisation gives me hope. I believe you are about to break this exception and become the next legend. I am very optimistic about. you, come on."

Another director of the Violin Association nicked up the microphone

Paige smiled lightly and thanked the musician for his comment.

Another director of the Violin Association picked up the microphone and said kindly, "I dare say that in America, there is currently no violinist who can perform interpretations more heartily than you. You have brought a luxurious feast to the ears of all. I attended this feast for the first time in thirty—six years, and was deeply shocked and intoxicated by it. I hope you win glory for the country in the next international violin competition."

The applause of the audience was like the thunder that exploded in the sky, violent and hot.

They didn't expect Paige to get unanimous praise from so many judges....

"Thank you for bringing such a beautiful song to everyone. I can only say that today's trip is worthwhile. I wonder if you are interested in becoming my disciple?" The last judge on the judging panel picked up the microphone and asked warmly.

Everyone was stunned because the speaker was Malachi Eve, the chairman of the America Violin Association.

When he was young, he was instructed by Master Larry for two months. Although Master Larry did not accept him as a disciple publicly, after those two months of instruction, his violin skills improved by leaps and bounds, and he became a shining star in the international violin circle.

Because of his relationship with Larry and his status in the violin world, many wealthy families want to send their children to study with him.

He never accepted disciples. He only taught violin to one person, and this person was said to be Kailyn.

Everyone thought that Kailyn would become Malachi's only true disciple, and Kailyn had always been proud of it, but unexpectedly, in front of so many people, Malachi should make an offer to Paige, which made Kailyn embarrassed!

Kailyn was already angry, too embarrassed to say a word.

How would she show up in the outside world?

Faced with such a big temptation, Paige not only did not agree, nor was she moved to tears, but smiled and said, "Mr. Eve, thank you for your kindness. At present, I just want to learn medicine to save people. I'm sorry, but I have to let you down."

Everyone was too shocked to speak.

Was she stupid?!

To be a disciple of Malachi meant to take a short cut, and henceforth her life would run smoothly!

With Malachi's guidance, and her own qualifications, she could become another rising star in the violin world!

Then she would gain both fame and fortune, and live by what she loved. What a life lay before her, if she would only nod her

But she refused!!

Malachi was a little surprised, for he had not fancied any of the many people who had begged him to accept them as disciples, head....

and this girl refused?!

"You can give full play to your violin expertise while studying medicine. The two do not affect each other. With your qualifications, Malachi's words shocked everyone again.

He was actually trying to persuade her! To persuade an ordinary freshman!

Malachi to consent to accept her as a disciple.

The point was that this freshman was from University of Illinois at Chicago!

you will definitely be able to make a name for yourself in the violin world in the future."

Not University of Chicago, not Stanford University, but University of Illinois at Chicago!

It actually made Malachi lower his status, and tried to persuade her to think about it again!

Everyone was really shocked, especially Kailyn, she couldn't believe that Paige's talent could make Malachi do this!

Usually, Malachi only treated her as a student, and didn't teach her everything!

Her parents had visited him several times in person before, and had even turned to friends abroad, yet they could not get

And Paige...

He actually thought she was capable of being his disciple!

"Thank you, Mr. Eve, but I think it's better to focus on only one thing."

Besides, she had enough to deal with already, and she had Larry's mood to worry about...

After all, Larry had been talking about letting her inherit his mantle for several years...

"I want to devote all my energy to medicine. I'm sorry to disappoint you, Mr. Eve." Paige still politely refused.

If she accepted to become Malachi's disciple, she could even imagine Larry's irritable appearance...

God...

But Malachi still didn't want to let go of such a talent. He smiled and said, "If you change your mind one day, you can find me at the Violin Association at any time, or I'll add you on Line after a while."

Not only Malachi, but even the others did not expect that Paige refused again!!

Everyone was shocked again...

Now, Kailyn felt that she was not only sick, but also mad...

And Kailyn was already so jealous. Why Paige?

While it was true that the level of violin playing she had just now performed was a little higher than hers, it was not enough to make Malachi so affectionate. Was it because of her face...
