Chapter 76

Chapter 76

It's From Him

Soon, the door of the warehouse was opened. That group of people broke in again.

Roderick turned on the lights, and his eyes glittered. He hoped he could find the people hiding in the warehouse at a glance.

Several workers searched the warehouse but found nothing at all.

"Mr. Collins, we have even checked the boxes in the corners. There is no one."

"You can rest assured."

"You said there was the sound of a phone vibrating. You must have misheard."

Roderick glanced about the warehouse. He felt that something was wrong but couldn't tell exactly.

He looked somewhat gloomy.

"If there is someone, he will show up as soon as we leave..."

"We waited outside for so long. If there is someone, he can't be so quiet."

"Mr. Collins, you are over-worried."

Roderick kept searching the warehouse, but there was no change in it. He could only give up. "I hope so."

Finally, Roderick turned off the lights and closed the door. Before he left, he changed the password.

He thought the new password would trap the guy if he were in the warehouse.

Meanwhile, if someone got the old password and wanted to enter the warehouse, he would fail.

When Paige heard the reminder of changing the password, she smiled coldly. She did not expect Roderick to be so alert.

However, the door was useless to Paige.

It was all the same, no matter what the password was.

There was no system Paige could not cck. How could a door lock her up?

Paige quietly came down from the beam and walked around the warehouse. She found a lot of poor-quality cloth in an inconspicuous place. It should be used for poor-quality products.

Paige narrowed her eyes and invaded the company's monitoring system. When she found no one outside, she opened the door and left.

Martin waited outside for forty minutes. When he saw the familiar figure, he stepped forward and pulled Paige into his arms. "Are you done?"

"Yes."

"I'll send you home."

It was late, so Martin dr*ve Paige to the L*rsen Villa.

Bonnie was watering flowers in the garden. When she saw Martin driving Paige home, she invited him to come in.

Martin did not refuse and went in with Paige's hand in his.

Patricia was playing the piano to please Donald and Danica. When Donald and Danica knew Martin was there, they went downstairs to greet him.

Patricia resisted her impulse to see Martin and ran to her room to dress up. Then, she said something to Dalia before going downstairs.

"Martin, did Paige cause any trouble for you last night?" Donald asked.

At the same time, he smiled.

"No."

Martin gently looked at Paige. "It's us who always ask her for help."

Danica couldn't help but smile when she saw Martin and Paige talking that way. "Has Mr. Stowe been better?"

"Grandpa said he almost recovered after seeing Paige," replied Martin politely.

Donald did not expect Killian to be so satisfied with Paige and was extremely happy.

"Paige has been busy in the company recently. We can't see her as much as you do. We are afraid she might work too hard and have no time to eat well."

"Mr. and Mrs. Lusk, don't worry. I will take good care of her," Martin promised as soon as Danica finished her words.

His eyes were full of love.

Donald and Danica looked at each other. They knew Martin liked Paige very much.

At that moment, Patricia went downstairs with perfect makeup. She revealed a smile and said warmly, "Paige, Martin, nice to see you."

Every movement of Patricia was elegant and perfectly standard as if she had been trained.

Danica was satisfied with Patricia's behavior. At least, Danica's efforts in teaching Patricia were not in vain. When Patricia greeted Martin, she had a sense of propriety. She didn't show that she wanted to replace Paige and be a member of the Stowe family just because she had been engaged to Martin.

Paige noticed Patricia's makeup and replied indifferently.

Martin kept looking at Paige with love. "Shall we go out to have breakfast tomorrow morning?"

"I want to have breakfast at home."

"I want to be with you."

When Donald heard that, he smiled.

"I will have them make more breakfast tomorrow morning. Martin, come over and have breakfast with Paige. You can go to work after that."

"Thank you, Mr. Lusk." Martin was happy with Donald's arrangement.

"Don't stand on ceremony. We are family."

"What do you like to have?" Donald asked.

"I'm fine with anything."

Martin looked at Paige. "I will have the same as Paige."

Ignored by everyone, Patricia was jealous and angry.

Dalia took the chance and came over with a glass of lemon water. "Ms. Patricia, this is for you."

Dalia had served water to Martin and Paige, so no one found anything wrong when she served water to Patricia, who had just arrived.

However, Dalia deliberately tripped over a chair leg and spilled the water on Patricia.

Coincidentally, the water fell on Patricia's chest.

Patricia was in a silk nightdress. At that moment, its front was wet, revealing her attractive curves.

"I'm sorry, Ms. Patricia. I am not on purpose."

Dalia was upset and wiped Patricia's night dress with a tissue.

"It's okay. Don't worry. I can do it myself."

Patricia showed her kindness.

However, Martin did not take a glance at her.

"Ms. Patricia, it's all my fault. Your night dress is wet."

Dalia emphasized the last two words.

Martin kept fixing his eyes on Paige. He whispered something in Paige's ear, and Paige looked at him gloomily. However, Martin smiled evilly. The two of them seemed to be flirting.

"Patricia, go upstairs to change your clothes."

Danica said softly.

"Excuse me, Paige, Martin. I'll go upstairs to change my clothes first. And I'll come down later."

No matter how polite Patricia was, Martin's eyes did not linger on her for a second.

Just as Patricia was going upstairs, Danica asked, "Paige, is your bracelet new? I haven't seen it before."

"It's from him."

Paige's words made Patricia stop suddenly.

"Is it from Martin?"

Danica looked at the bracelet. "It is so beautiful. I have never seen the style."

"It is designed by him."
