

Can Not Win Me Back Chapter 2365

Can Not Win Me Back Chapter 2365-Liana's name was one that Sean hadn't heard in a really long time. At first, he was caught by surprise, stunned into silence.

After a while, his eyes widened, and a surge of resentment welled up in his chest. He had to take a few deep breaths before he could calm himself down enough to say, "Ms. Alyssa, don't mention her name. It feels like a curse! When I think about all the pain she caused you, I-" "Those are stories of old. Forget it. Let's just focus on the now. Sheryl always reminds me of Liana."

It sounded almost absurd to say that aloud.

Liana had been Jasper's childhood friend, growing up alongside him. But, of all people in the world, Alyssa was the one who knew Liana best.

When Newton matched her with Jasper, Alyssa secretly tried to emulate Liana in subtle ways, hoping to please him. She mimicked Liana's style, soft voice, and mannerisms.

Over those three years, Alyssa had humbled herself, compromising and living in misery. She lost herself in her feelings for Jasper, becoming someone she wasn't.

But that was over now. She had found herself again and vowed never to lose sight of who she truly was again. Sean was shocked. "Unless... Are you suspecting that Sheryl and Liana are connected?"

"Even though I hate to think so, their behavior and speech are extremely similar. The only differences are their voices and their looks.

"The easiest thing to change is one's appearance. It is their habits, on the other hand, that are difficult to change once they are embedded deep into their core."

Sean nodded in full agreement.

Alyssa's imagination was always vivid. Once she began suspecting something, her mind would race with possibilities. If there was even a hint of the truth, she would relentlessly dig until she uncovered it.

It was only a matter of time.

Alyssa's suspicions started to take root at that very moment. Thoughts and possibilities rushed to her mind, but they were disjointed fragments she couldn't yet assemble into a coherent whole.

"The Gardners went bankrupt back then, and Liana's reputation was completely tarnished during her engagement ceremony. She had subsequently fled to Mosgravia, and interestingly, Sheryl had returned from Mosgravia.

Sean knitted his brows together as he pondered over Alyssa's words. "But Ms. Alyssa, there are countless people who share similar traits. Otherwise, there wouldn't be doppelgängers in this world, would there?"

Alyssa smiled faintly, her eyes cold. "That's true, but two people with such uncanny similarities have appeared in my life. And, what's more, they've both been my adversaries. Now that's suspicious, don't you think?"

Sean fell silent, realizing she had a point.

'Ever heard of those TV shows where a woman returns for revenge after undergoing plastic surgery? Sometimes real life is even more dramatic than the stories we see on screen.

Alyssa's own life had often felt like a thrilling drama, full of unexpected twists and dangers.

Sean gulped. 'Ms. Alyssa, if... And, this is a big if... If Sheryl is Liana, how did such a dumb woman become a doctor? And how did she end up with Justin? How are they connected?"

The look in Alyssa's eyes went dull. "Is this not the case?"

The car fell into a heavy silence.

They were connected. Both Justin and Liana were connected to Jasper. Other than that, Liana harbored a deep-seated hatred toward Alyssa.

Even Jameson ended up working for Justin. So, why couldn't Justin have found Liana while she was lost in the world?

*Sean, these are just our speculations. We need to have convincing evidence to support our theories. So, we must not do anything that alerts them until then.' Alyssa's gaze hardened. "But it doesn't matter whether she is Sheryl or Liana. If she causes harm to Jasper or anyone close to me, I won't hesitate to make her pay."

Sean nodded seriously. “Ms. Alyssa, wait in the car. I’ll go inside and take a look.”

“Wait. Stay here for now.”
