

CAN'T WIN ME BACK

Chapter 2446

Jasper's eyes blazed with fury as he locked his gaze on Justin, a sharp, determined gleam in his dark eyes.

"I will clear my name and restore my reputation, no matter the cost!" he declared, his voice ringing with resolve.

The tension between Justin, standing on stage, and Jasper, positioned below, was palpable-like a killer whale facing off with a great white shark. The outcome was still uncertain.

"I, Landon Harper, swear on my name and the entirety of Harper Group that Jasper never did drugs. The whole situation was a setup!"

Landon's voice resounded throughout the entire hall.

The reporters buzzed with questions. "Who would do such a thing?"

Landon refrained from directly naming Justin, aware that exposing the wolf in sheep's clothing would not be easy. Accusing him too hastily might provide Justin with an opportunity to counterattack, exploiting any gaps in their case.

Landon had no fear of tarnishing his own reputation, but he was deeply concerned about the damage it might cause to Jasper. Every move they made was crucial. They couldn't afford any more mistakes.

Another reporter stood up. "Mr. Jasper, if this drug scandal was truly a setup, as Mr. Harper claims, do you have any evidence to support that?"

"He does."

The answer came not from Jasper but from someone emerging from behind.

Jonah and a visibly injured Xavier led Sebastian into the room, drawing everyone's attention.

While Justin remained unfazed, Sheryl's face drained of color. Her anxiety was evident as beads of sweat appeared on her forehead.

The crowd was taken aback once again.

"I can't believe Mr. Jonah is here to show his support for Jasper. His methods are bold!"

"Have you forgotten that Mr. Jasper is Mr. Winston's soon-to-be son-in-law? Isn't it only right for Jasper's brother-in-law to help him out?"

The harsh white lights illuminated Sebastian's face, casting a stark glow on him.

Sebastian gulped, his gaze shifting toward Justin, who stood a few steps away. Justin's expression was elegant yet menacing, and a chill ran down Sebastian's spine.

He remembered the many close calls he'd faced in making it this far. Despite his past offenses, Jasper and Xavier had done everything to protect him. How could he hesitate now?

It was this very hesitation that had ruined his son, Zayne.

With newfound resolve, Sebastian straightened his back and spoke with unwavering seriousness. "My name is Sebastian Bender. I was Mr. Jasper's primary physician when he was hospitalized for acute headaches."

He paused, then added with a deep, regretful sigh, "I owe Mr. Jasper a sincere apology."

Sebastian's eyes softened as he turned toward Jasper. "I was the one who handed over Mr. Jasper's hospital records and blood test results to the police... I violated my professional ethics, and in doing so, I severely damaged Mr. Jasper's reputation. Not only did I harm him, but I also contributed to his losing his position as president." Sebastian stood at attention with a heavy heart, bowing deeply to Jasper. "I am truly sorry. I am willing to accept all consequences and relinquish my medical career. Someone like me has no right to continue practicing medicine." The room erupted in shock and disbelief.

So, Jasper had been arrested because this doctor had secretly provided the so-called evidence to the authorities?

A reporter couldn't hold back. "Dr. Bender, why did you do it?"

Sebastian's eyes narrowed in fury as he glared at Sheryl's twisted face. "One day, while Mr. Jasper was hospitalized, Ms. Sheryl Gillis, Mr. Justin's private physician, approached me.

"She threatened me, using my wife's illness and my son's debts against me. She demanded I hand over the blood test results to the police, framing Mr. Jasper. I had no choice but to comply, given Mr. Justin's influence."
