Chapter 1061

Skadi felt guilty when she remembered what had happened before. If Hera had really divorced Nash, she would have spent an eternity in guilt. 30 minutes later, Nash parked the car outside the Zells' residence.

"Thank you, Nash!" Skadi said. She then carried Yoyo toward the villa.

Nash turned the car around and headed back to Royal Bay.

“We must also get the Hublots’ toy factory within seven days!” Hera

The middle-aged man nodded in agreement.

Hera turned her cold gaze toward the Procurement Department manager and asked, “When can we get the equipment back?”

The Procurement Department manager gulped nervously and replied,

On the 15th of next month...”

Hera let out a cold laugh. Leaning back in her chair, her slender and fair fingers began tapping on the tabletop.

The Procurement Department manager hurriedly explained, “Ms.

Cal forced a smile, and Nash nodded expressionlessly. He had listened to every word Hera said earlier. It was evident that Cal had made a significant mistake that led to the equipment not being purchased on time.

Baroque was in their golden development age, having taken on a heap of orders. If production could not keep up and supply could not be met, it would have a huge impact on the company.

Although Sagen, Olivia, and Universal Group might overlook it for the sake of keeping up Baroque's reputation, Hera would not allow such mistakes under her leadership.

Cal had thought of getting Nash to persuade Hera. However, seeing Nash's indifferent demeanor, he swallowed his words. Nash turned and headed toward Hera's office.

It had been a long time since he last visited Baroque. He remembered when he first came to the company, Hera was just a timid and president. Helena had even forced Hera to kneel in the president's office.

"Mr. Calcraft, are you suggesting that someone else planted these things?" Robin's immediate concern was not about being promoted to manager but rather the shock of finding so many bugs and cameras in the president's office.

"Yes, and it happened in the last ten days."

Nash had not noticed the cameras during the last intimate moment he shared with Hera in the office, so it was obvious they were planted afterward.

When Robin reached the office door, he suddenly stopped in his tracks. “Mr. Calcraft, did you just say you’d promote me to manager?

“I’m rarely at the company, and I’m planning to vacate the manager position.”

"Alright, Ms. Lewis. I'll definitely live up to your expectations!" The assistant manager knew that this was his opportunity for a promotion. Learning from the mistakes of the previous manager, he immediately started contacting suppliers in Munford.

Just as the assistant manager left the office, the assistant manager from the HR Department entered.

"Ms. Lewis. Mr. Calcraft." The assistant manager of the HR

Department was a woman nearing her 40s. She was slightly plump, wore glasses, and had shoulder-length curly hair. She was dressed in a loose-fitting professional suit.

“Here are the recruitment plans for next week.” She placed two reports on Hera’s desk. Hera picked up the reports and examined them carefully.

After about three minutes, Hera sighed helplessly. “Recruiting technical personnel is a challenge. Headquarters can no longer transfer employees, so see if you can poach some from Star Innovate Collective.”

The woman shook her head with a wry smile. “It’s really difficult. They’re both well-established companies with sufficient capital provide excellent employee benefits. Technical personnel sign multiple agreements and are usually not willing to switch jobs easily.

A hint of worry appeared on Hera’s face, but she quickly suppressed it. “Increase the salary and benefits for technical personnel on our job postings online. We can’t afford to lose out on them.”

In that case, the salaries of the senior employees will also need to be increased. I went to the Finance Department yesterday, and-her demeanor.

"That won't do. Mr. Watson, please wait for me for a moment. I'll be

However, business was business while personal matters were separate.

Since Walter was here at the company, it had to be for business. After hanging up the phone, Hera hurriedly walked outside.

Nash glanced at the time and realized it had only been two hours since he left Innovate Collective. Walter was reliable when it came to doing things. Nash took out his phone and dialed Theo's number.

"Oh, my dear Nash, I've missed you so much!"

"I've missed you too. Shall we meet up?" Nash replied with a smile.

"Oh my goodness, Nash, are you changing your preferences?" Theo was somewhat surprised but quickly softened his tone. "Lmake it clear, I'm a top!"

"Get lost!" Nash jokingly scolded and then continued, "Have of any recent large-scale auctions open to martial artists?"

After opening the sealed envelope, Hera found a stack of documents inside. She carefully took out the documents, and on top of them was written 'Transfer Agreement for Innovate Collective'.

Hera's mind blanked as her eyes stared fixedly at the words 'Innovate Collective'. Her heart pounded heavily, and she even forgot to breathe.

Walter and his group exchanged smiles. Raymond covered his mouth and coughed twice. "Ms. Lewis, please take a look at the agreement. If there are no issues, just sign it. Although Mr. Calcraft is buying it, your side still needs to go through the paperwork."

Hera finally regained her senses. She held her chest and gasped for air. After three full minutes of ignoring the presence of some of the wealthiest people around, she rushed to her office with the agreement in hand.

The secretary at the door turned pale. Why was Hera behaving erratically? Did something bad happen? She hurriedly followed the red-eyed Hera.

Just after Nash finished the call with Theo, the manager from the Testing Department brought him a cup of tea. Her shirt had two buttons undone, revealing her cleavage. Even her purple bra was peeking out. Although she was in her 30s, her figure was definitely attractive.

Nash then used his connections to gift her a 7nm lithography machine on her birthday. Baroque later aimed to secure cooperation with Universal Group, and it was Nash who intervened in Universal Group's collaboration with Innovate Collective.

That was why Baroque was able to obtain the collaboration rights without a hitch. Baroque had been on the brink of bankruptcy but had now grown into a small enterprise with tens of billions in chip orders in just two months. All of this was because of Nash.

Hera was also working hard. She had undergone a transformation at work and was no longer the weak woman she used to be. She thought she could handle everything on her own, but the company's rapid development cost them nearly two billion in funds in terms of equipment.

The company's account was running low on cash, and the constant pressure made it hard for her and her parents to breathe. They did not say anything to Nash because he had already done so much for them.

Yet today, Nash acquired Innovate Collective. With that, all of Baroque's problems would be solved. Nash was not at the company often and rarely involved himself in company affairs, but he had always quietly contributed behind the scenes.

At Baroque's headquarters, Lauren and Harrison were having tea with the general managers of various departments in the chairman's office. Everyone present had been with the company for over 20 years, making them veteran figures.

"We received another order worth 3.5 billion dollars from Sagen. I suggest allocating some of it to the branch offices!" The first to speak was Seamus Chezk, the general manager of the Business Department.

Despite being 55 years old, he exuded vitality. He had a pair of sharp eyes that held more authority than even the chairman, Harrison.

Jalen, the general manager of the Production Department, frowned and glanced at Seamus coldly. "The branch offices only have a little over 400 employees and are lacking in technical personnel. They're facing even more terrifying backlogs of orders than we are here.

"Hera, that girl, is still young. Her workload is no lighter than ours!"

He lifted the teacup from the table, took a sip to wet his throat, and casually added, "Mr. Chezk, are you not familiar with the saying that greed leads to the swallowing of the snake by the elephant?"

It was obvious he was blaming Seamus for taking on too many orders.
