Chapter 1303

Eric looked at Nash weakly. Still with a proud expression, he said, "What? Did I embarrass you?"

Nash felt a strange energy fluctuation from Eric and frowned. "Does any part of you feel sick?"

Eric grinned. "Other than feeling a little weak, I'm fine!"

Nash approached Eric. He then bit his finger and drew a symbol in the palm of his left hand.

"Heaven's gate open, grace us o' mighty divine!" When Nash was done with the talisman, golden light shimmered in the palm of his left hand. His body trembled, and his aura underwent a tremendous change. He began to exude a hazy golden light, resembling that of a celestial being.

"Hmm?"

"The Mount Tame Demon left a mark on you. It'll come looking for you after the seal breaks," Nash said with a frown, his voice even and somewhat deep.

Eric's pupils constricted. "Can you remove this thing? I don't want that thing to dog me all the time."

Mount Tame was a mountain range near Carrion Mountain. It was said that the place suppressed many evil spirits. Among them, the most famous was the Mount Tame Demon, also the ruler of Mount Tame.

Nash stood, clasped his hands behind his back, and said mysteriously. "The demon's mark is ingrained deep in your soul and can't be forcibly erased. But you don't need to worry. With those people on Carrion Mountain guarding Mount Tame, that beast won't stir up any trouble."
