Chapter 186

The governor's nephew, a soldier of the Southern Region territory.

These two identities were indeed somewhat difficult to handle.

Nash led the two of them into the villa.

"Maria, please help me make a pot of coffee!" Maria had temporarily lost her job after the Lewis family's estate was no more. Since Adam was the senior legal advisor of Baroque and Rococo, Hera decided to hire her as their maid at Royal Bay in an effort to take care of his family.

"Ah, alright!" Maria responded and went to make tea.

"Captain Holt, please take a seat wherever you like," Nash said to them as he took his own seat.

The two of them had never seen such a luxurious villa before and felt uncomfortable just sitting on the sofa.

"Do you have any detailed information about Wesley?" Nash asked.

"Wesley, 35 years old. He joined the army at the age of 18 and was assigned to the Southern Region at the age of 23. At 28, more than ten of his teammates were killed in a bombing battle due to his misjudgment. He was then arrested and then dismissed from the army...

Jupiter nodded. "That's right. The most vivid memory I have is that Wesley has a small piece of either his left or right ear missing. And the suspicious person we found in the surveillance footage indeed has a missing corner on one of his ears!"

Nash smiled and asked, "What if it's a coincidence?"

Jupiter immediately said, "It can't be a coincidence. Wesley is left-handed, and the person in the surveillance was eating at a restaurant. He used his left hand. Wesley's right leg was seriously injured during the blast training. It then became infected and turned lame. The right leg of the person in the surveillance is also lame. It can't all be a coincidence, can it?"

Having said that, Jupiter paused before he narrowed his eyes and said, "We'll know who he is when we ask him."

Jupiter and Angelica brought Nash to a narrow alley not far from Rex District.

They were driving a white Volkswagen and stopped outside the popular restaurant where Nash had invited Queenie for lamb stew.

They both turned to look at the restaurant.

A faint twitch appeared at the corner of Nash's mouth.

Could Wesley be the son of the owner of this restaurant? The restaurant was bustling as always.
