

CEO Bride 369

Chapter 369

After speaking, Derek quickly took Yasmin and left the conference room.

“Mr. Nash, how do you plan to accommodate them both?”

“Let Derek join your crew, and as for Yasmin...”

Nash began, but he was interrupted by Sydney’s voice from outside.

“Why keep those machines after the boss ran off? We don’t have resources in the pharmaceutical field... Keeping those devices will just take up space!”

“Ms. Zell, you make a good point. Handle it as you see fit!”

Mr. Jamerson chimed in, nodding obsequiously.

The industrial zone belonged to her now. It was her call on how to manage the vacant factories.

Pharmaceuticals?

A grin formed on Nash’s lips.

His master had taught him unparalleled medical techniques, including the art of alchemy.

Although he was not skilled enough to create elixirs, he could dilute them into consumable liquids.

the drug formulas!" Nash grinned.

The success of a pharmaceutical company largely depended on the efficacy of its products.

Nash believed he could produce some potent medicines.

Sydney, realizing Nash would provide unique formulas, began to regret her initial skepticism.

Nash had great medical skills. He must have some folk remedies in hand.

Many pharmaceutical companies thrived solely based on a single formula.

With his vision, capabilities, and drive, Nash's venture was bound to be profitable.

Sydney pressed her lips together. "I want a stake too!"

The four quickly came to an agreement.

They decided on an initial investment of ten million. Nash contributed 5.5 million for Yasmin, while Sydney, Queenie, and Xeno each pitched in 1.5 million.

Although the company had not launched or even started operations, shares were already divided according to their investments.

At noon, Sydney took Nash and the others to Cloud Peak Palace Hotel for a meal, where they discussed the pharmaceutical company.

Learning that Nash invested over five million to help her start a company, Yasmin felt deeply touched.

Her grandfather's prophecy was coming true. The Youngs were indeed their family's key to prosperity.

After their meal, Derek and Yasmin took Nash to their home to retrieve the fragment of the map.
