Chapter 397

"Weather forecasts can sometimes be inaccurate!"

Bradley remarked, puffing on his pipe.

Madam Lunarismiled faintly. "Thirty thousand for two nights' stay and six meals."

Nico looked at his grandfather. "We didn't bring that much cash."

The old lady quickly took out a QR code. "I also accept mobile payments!"

Bradley quickly scanned the code and paid 300,000.

Nico's eyes widened. "Grandpa... you added an extra zero!"

Bradley chuckled. "That covers the hush money, equipment fee, and information fee."

Nico wisely shut his mouth.

Madam Lunarismaid with a soft smile, "I like dealing with straightforward people. There are six rooms on the third floor. You all can decide who stays where. Come down for lunch at noon!"

Hence, Bradley led the group to the third floor.

Nash and Xeno shared a room, Heidi and Melody stayed together, Derek, Nico, and Bradley bunked in one room, while Finn roomed with Ken.

Bradley nodded. "Yes, Madam Lunar is from the Gold Touch faction. They had a tomb raider officer in their ancestry."

Nash pondered aloud, "No wonder she holds a grudge against the Youngs!"

"The enmity between the nine major raider families and the Tomb Whisperer Lineage dates back to ancient times. The unique techniques of the nine families all evolved from the Tomb Whisperer Manual.

"My grandfather told me that the nine families back then had killed many people from the Tomb Whisperer Lineage for the Tomb Whisperer Manual, which includes the Youngs!"

Bradley elaborated, stroking his beard. "But those old grudges have long been settled. I hope you won't hold any lingering resentment, sir."

Nash nodded. "As long as they aren't the sworn enemies of the Youngs, I bear no grudges."

Even if he did, he would need the power to act on them.

After all, Madam Lunar was a Mystique Loyalty Realm powerhouse.

Heidi curiously inquired, "So, does that mean our lineage, the Tomb-Opener faction, also has a feud with the Youngs?"

"As I said, those are ancient grudges. Five hundred years ago, the Tomb Whisperer Lineage and the members of the nine major raider families were partners. My late nephew was also a descendant of the Gold Touch faction."

Bradley responded with a hint of amusement. Then, he paused, his expression turning serious as he said, "Madam Lunar's grandfather once helped the royal court in tomb raiding. He and his son ventured into the Miliard Flora Valley in the Nine Absolute Mountain Range and never returned.

"Later, Madam Lunar gathered the nine major raider families to explore the valley, and almost all of them were wiped out. That was when she lost her eyes and face. That tomb was the Tomb Whisperer Lineage's first Immortal Tomb.

"That incident laid the foundation for the Youngs' downfall. The Kleins weren't just eyeing the Youngs' wealth; their main goal was the Immortal Secret Scriptures."
