Chapter 410

The others also had somewhat skeptical expressions on their faces. Killing zombies at the age of 16? Even novels would not include such exaggerated claims.

“Drink the stew quickly. This is 50-year-old ginseng. It nourishes the body, replenishes the spleen, and works wonders for the lungs. Don’t waste it.”.

Nash could not be bothered to offer further explanations and went back to enjoying his stew.

After having their fill, the group gathered around the campfire for a chat before preparing for bed. They had five tents, all placed close together. Each tent could accommodate two people. Nash slept alone in one tent. To ensure that everyone had enough sleep, they all took turns for watch duty with each pair taking a two-hour shift.

Ken and Finn were the first to take the watch and sat by the campfire, chatting. At some point, the moon had disappeared behind dark clouds.

In Melody and Heidi’s tent, Heidi whispered, “Melody, I need to Melody mumbled sleepily in response to Heidi’s request to go to the bathroom. “But I’m scared,” Heidi replied nervously.

Melody opened her eyes and accompanied Heidi to a nearby grassy area for her to relieve herself.

don't blame you," Nash interrupted with a shameless smile.

It had been round and lustrous. It was a pity he did not get to see the front.

"No, it's not that. I saw a pair of green eyes on the other side," Melody clarified anxiously.

Nash glanced at the other side but did not see anything. He chuckled and replied, "Some animals are active at night, and their eyes reflect green light under the moon, just like wolves." Melody shook her head. "It looked human, definitely an undead corpse."

Nash smiled wryly. "You're too sensitive. Go back to the tent and rest."

Undead corpses thrived by feeding on dark energy. If they were nearby, Nash would surely have sensed it.

It was normal for women to get scared easily.

Melody thought her eyes had been playing tricks on her too and slowly breathed a sigh of relief. She turned around and went back to her tent.

Nash went back to the campfire and closed his eyes to cultivate. Suddenly, there was a surge of heat from the ring on Nash's hand. He opened his eyes and looked at the ring, only to see a red light emanating from it.

The ring used to shine gold previously when it emitted spiritual energy. A red glow could mean several things.

Nash raised his head and looked across.
