

CEO Bride 418

Chapter 418

If they took another step farther, they would end up in a pool of 50-feet-deep sludge.

Bradley retracted his foot, which he had already extended, before cautiously extending it outward again.

This way, he could nudge the stone step as it moved toward him.

The deep pool of sludge was about a hundred feet wide.

The stone steps moved through the sludge extremely slowly.

“How are those steps just suspended in mid-air?”

Melody had a confused look on her face.

“Well, if you want an explanation from a scientific perspective, you could say it’s because of magnetic fields!

“If you prefer an explanation from a philosophical perspective, you could say it’s because of magical formations!”

Bradley did not answer her question straight on.

Even he was not completely sure how the steps managed to suspend themselves in mid-air.

A stone step lodged itself in the ground right beneath Bradley’s foot with a bang, and he immediately said, “Quick, get onto the stone steps...”

Everyone pushed their way through the forces holding them back and hurried forth.

The stone step was over eight feet long, and all nine of them could fit on it comfortably.

before the stone step finally the top halves of their bodies remained afloat, and they looked like

then, the raiders were at work drilling a hole in the rocky mountains located somewhere northwest to drill a hole in a place that’s so rocky? How learned the tomb was structure.

labyrinth, and they could enter from anywhere

Anders said to heart and insisted

Whisperers knew since over 30 years ago that the tomb of the King of Medicine is in Seven Pinnacle Peaks... Do you

“So, you’re saying... he’s been in the tomb of the

the past?"

Suddenly...

explosion reverberated through the air.

flew through the air.

expecting that, and

Couldn't you have let us know what was going to happen?"

split

the detonation was over and peered down the inside, and they could string around a rat and chucked it into minutes later, they pulled the rat out from the hole.

was alive and well, showing no signs of

"Let's go!"

Old Herera gave the order.

Everyone filed into the tomb orderly, leaving five men behind to watch their baggage and gear.

After entering the tomb, they were stunned.

An endless darkness stretched ahead of them. It felt like they had been transported into another world.

Professor Law was the last to enter, and after he did, he shone his torch and lit up their surroundings as he said, "This labyrinth is essentially a massive eight-angle trigram.

"Since we entered from the northwest, we're in the mountainous portion of the trigram right now... It's one of the more accessible pathways!"

Old Herera asked, "Wouldn't it have been easier for us to enter through the earthen portion?"

Professor Law narrowed his eyes. "Indeed... I entered the tomb through the earthen entryway two months ago... But there were corpses littered everywhere!"

Then, he smiled sadly as he said, "It's why I wanted you to wait until they'd brought over Madam Lunar's specialty tamarind wine before entering the tomb...

"The wine has properties that can keep the deathworms under control, but since you were in a rush to enter the tomb, I had no choice but to lead you in through another entryway!"

Old Herera sighed. "I'm sorry, Professor Law, but I hope you can understand why I'm acting this way. We're in such a hurry to enter the tomb because we don't even know if those kids are dead or alive!"

Five families were taking part in this grave robbery.

Only Daniel, who he was on good terms with, would put in a good word for him. If relations with the other three families turned sour, their grave-robbing mission would, without a doubt, go awry!

Additionally, the whereabouts of his grandson, Zain Herera, were currently unknown. He was hoping the tomb would let him know where Zain was.

Professor Law smiled. "No point in further conversation. Let's go!"