

CEO Bride 419

Chapter 419

Professor Law began leading the team farther into the tomb.

Meanwhile, Nash and the others had made their way out of the swamp.

They removed their mud-covered raincoats and left them by the road before continuing their journey.

About a hundred yards in front of them was a long wall with a half-opaque crystal door on it.

Nash tried opening the door, but it did not budge even the slightest inch. It seemed to have taken root in the ground.

He summoned his true energy into his fist and punched the door, but it still did not move. "What is this material? It's so tough..."

He had packed at least 250 pounds worth of force into that blow, but the door did not even budge an inch.

"This is a juggernaut stone door... There's one in the Museum of Exotic Stones in Capiton as well!

"The juggernaut stone door currently located at Capiton was excavated from the ruins of Usun Kingdom!"

Bradley lit himself a cigarette as he talked.

Nico gulped. "So, does that make this a massive diamond rock?"

Bradley smiled. "Yes, you can think of it that way... But this juggernaut stone door is much more valuable than any diamonds... You can even go so far as to say it's a priceless treasure!"

We're going to be rich! We're going to be he stone door is six feet long, four feet wide, and weighs 25 tonnes. Even if we ignore the fact that most of it is wedged inside the wall now, we still wouldn't be able to take this with us even if they even manage to move it in the earth do you have so many questions to ask? Hurry up he began placed a hand against the juggernaut stone door. Countless waves of emotion washed over him as well.

eyes wide open and searched far and wide for the switch, the of mounds of soil in the location they were of soil were squirming. It looked like something was trying to force its way out from the

be fearful look appeared on Old Herera's face.

"I think that's highly possible... Get Herera yelled at his men, "Get the

on the ground, and then they lit

deathworms clawed their way clawed their way upward, and there were so many of them. They were clumped together in groups, which made it difficult to discern one from the so quickly that it seemed like these deathworms turned deathly pale. They nearly lost the fire stopped the deathworms

before the Professor Law yelled loudly.

Everyone immediately took off in the opposite direction.

The gasoline soon ran out, and the deathworms claimed every inch of available land.

One of the younger men turned around to take a look, and he got so scared that he pissed his pants.

They were experienced grave robbers, but they had never seen deathworms like these, which were usually only found in massive tombs like this one.

Meanwhile...

Nash and the others could not find the switch to operate the juggernaut stone door, no matter how hard they tried.

"That's weird... Where on earth is the switch?"

Bradley could not stop himself from frowning.

Nash said calmly, "The stone wall might very well be the trigram's ley line of light... The switch might be in the swamp!"

He dashed back toward the swamp after finishing his sentence.

When he reached the swamp, he activated his Third Eye and looked into the sludge.

A group of eel-tailed catfish were lying atop a one-foot-long stone pillar.

The corner of Nash's lips curved upward slightly as he delivered a blow that formed a path within the sludge. He then jumped toward the stone pillar.

