

CEO Bride 439

Chapter 439

Nash spent nearly an hour treating his injuries. His right hand was no longer swollen and was regaining sensation, but it was still immobile. The effects of the miraculous medicine were truly remarkable, as it had healed him significantly.

Nash stood up and said, "Let's go check outside."

He bent his legs slightly and jumped out of the coffin. Derek was squatting on the ground, examining the totem on the King of Medicine's coffin when he heard the sound behind. He fell on his butt, startled.

He turned around, and when he saw Nash, he let out a sigh of relief. "Mr. Nash, you scared me! I almost had a heart attack."

Derek got up, dusted off his clothes, and walked over to Nash. He looked at Nash's right arm and asked, "Mr. Nash, is your injury... all better?"

Nodding, Nash smiled faintly. "I'm fine now."

The others also jumped down and then stared at the King of Medicine's coffin beneath the heavy bronze coffin, still in a daze.

off the Undead Corpse King's invulnerable hand meant it was incredibly heavy.

then went to each side of the bronze coffin. Gripping the coffin, they unleashed their true energy and exerted their

However, despite their best efforts, they could not even lift the seemingly determined

once more, but the result was the perfectly designed. Even if someone enters it, they won't be able to open there's would never be able to rest in peace after going through such hardships to enter the main tomb and failing to open the owner's coffin.

that if the mechanism is activated and be the tomb's side chambers that were used to store accompanying items. Nash led the way, and the others there was a rotary disc. Nash was about to turn it when Bradley warned, there might be looked at Heidi and Heidi smiled and said, "Of course. My sensory abilities are as good as Nico's nose."

With that, she extended two long, slender fingers and pointed them at the wall. Nash now noticed that her right-hand index and middle fingers were unusually long.

Heidi closed her eyes, and in her mind, she visualized the inner structure of the wall. Just as she suspected, there was indeed a mechanism inside. She slowly moved her fingers beneath the rotary disc. Then, with a sudden forceful motion, she pierced her fingers through the wall. This resulted in a series of clicking sounds as the wall's outer layer peeled away, revealing the concealed mechanism beneath. It was designed to be indistinguishable to the naked eye.

Having disabled the mechanism, Heidi looked at Nash and said, "You can open the door now." Nash turned the rotary disc, and the stone door slowly descended into the ground with a resounding rumble.

When the stone door was halfway down, the lamps on the walls of the side chamber suddenly lit up. When the door was completely down, a large number of antique calligraphy, paintings, and blue and white porcelain vases entered their view.

Anders and Old Herera were calm while Bradley had a smile on his lips. He also had a cigarette in his fingers. The gazes of the others burned.

Derek rubbed his hands excitedly and said, "I'm rich, I'm rich! There are so many antique calligraphy and paintings from the Saer Dynasty. They can definitely be sold for a pretty penny!"