

CEO Bride 440

Chapter 440

Nash looked at the items with furrowed brows. He had come to the King of Medicine's tomb not for wealth but for the lost medicine and the Divine Cauldron.

The others began collecting the antiques from the antechamber. Nash, on the other hand, dragged Heidi into another antechamber.

With Heidi's help, Nash entered the adjacent chamber easily. Inside, there were only about ten wooden boxes. Nash used his Third Eye to scan them.

Upon discovering that these boxes contained rare medicinal herbs, a smile finally appeared on his face. Heidi opened one of the boxes, revealing several dried roots.

"These medicinal herbs are probably quite rare, right?" Heidi asked, looking at Nash.

"The King of Medicine certainly wouldn't use common herbs for his burial," Nash said. He picked up a piece of the root and sniffed it, his face filling with excitement. "This is Red Phoenix Root. And there's so much of it!"

"Is it highly effective?" Heidi asked when she noticed his happiness. There was also a cheerful smile on her face.

"It's excellent for dispelling internal dampness, cold poison, and curing diseases," Nash explained.

ailments, and Red Phoenix Root was known for its remarkable curative

Phoenix Root, it would evaporate the moisture in the body within half an hour, taking the cold toxins with it. Where else could one find such a magical a dilemma. He could not carry all these precious herbs with him, and the knowledge contained in these books was also of great importance.

asked him why he was sighing.

all of

select the most valuable ones and began selecting some of the herbs with the highest value and most potent effects, carefully storing them in his bag. These herbs had the potential to treat various serious medical conditions, including renal failure, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, and late-stage cancer.

process: Should he need to step in, all that would be needed was

two. One contained books related to several books, which contained records of the diseases that Leopole had encountered and successfully treated-along with the corresponding prescriptions. Any page from these books could become valuable folk remedies for books but could not understand the content at all. Parting her lips gently, she said, "These books would be highly valuable for modern holistic medicine. If we take them out of here and share them, they might change the position of changing the current state of holistic medicine. Thomas and his master and senior's Heidi sweetly smiled and said, "I believe you to be the best!"

Nash raised an eyebrow and said, "That's too perfunctory!" If she did believe it, she would not have had to have said it.

Heidi pouted. "Where did that come from? I really do believe in you!"

Nash smiled and said, "Alright, alright, I believe that you believe in me. Now, let's go to the last antechamber and hope what I'm looking for is inside.

Curious, Heidi asked, "What are you looking for?"

Nash smiled but said nothing.

Heidi kept quiet knowingly and did not ask any more questions.

They arrived at the last chamber. Inside were some of Leopole's clothes that he had worn during his lifetime. There were also several bones on the ground.

"A sacrificial burial?"