

CEO Bride 441

Chapter 441

Heidi timidly hid behind Nash.

Nash shook his head. "I'm not sure..."

He had scanned the surroundings with his Third Eye but did not find the Divine Cauldron here.

Before he arrived at the tomb, he had already mentally prepared for this outcome.

Something as important as the Divine Cauldron must have been placed in the coffin with Leopole's body.

Earlier, he tried using his Third Eye to look at Leopole's coffin, but he could not see through it.

"Seems like we need to find another way to open the King of Medicine's coffin!" Nash mumbled to himself.

The Divine Farmer's Cauldron was a vessel used by divine farmers to refine medicine. It could also be used as an alchemy cauldron. Masters found them fascinating.

Heidi bit her finger and asked, "What if I go looking for a mechanism?" Nash nodded. "Yes, let's go!"

The two of them went to the tomb's main chamber.

The rest of the group emerged with their pockets full.

The near-death experiences they had before were now a distant memory.

The three elderly men remained composed.

already earned enough money and no longer held the same initial with riches, it

conquering ancient tombs that had been empty all the food from the bag, what's the plan for the journey back be outside. They should have enough food for everyone to leave the Nine Absolute Mountain Range said, "Don't worry about that. There's a lot of wildlife on the mountains... What I'm worried about is how would have to deal with mechanism..." Heidi suddenly shouted from behind the

them to rush over the ground, and with a little coffin sank into

of the coffin was the only thing left on the ground and could not exert much strength with his right

controls

her

Finn and Ken to help..."

the two over.

them stood at

were ready to lift the lid, Old Herera suddenly walked over with

asked, "What are you said in a low voice, "When a person lights a candle, a ghost blows it out. Sometimes, things may happen complicated rules like that... Besides, we've already encountered the Undead Corpse King. What else is there to were passed down from my

Nash looked at Melody, Finn, and Ken and said, "Let's get started!"

The four of them exerted as much strength as they could, and the coffin's lid slowly moved.

The sound of metal rubbing against metal was harsh on the ears.

They used as much strength as they had, and the lid moved about three inches.

"The King of Medicine's coffin is half the size of the Undead Corpse King's bronze coffin... but it weighs like a dozen tons! Imagine how terrifying the weight of the bronze coffin is!" Melody said between breaths.

"These two coffins are not ordinary coffins... They have the effect of preventing the bodies from decaying for thousands of years!"

Nash peeked through the gap between the coffin and the lid and saw the body inside.

It was a kind-looking old man.

His face was rosy as if he had just fallen asleep.

Finn smiled and said, the coffin No matter how good the things are, we can't take them right now... We should open the coffin first!"

They used their last bit of strength to move the lid away.

After three minutes, the King of Medicine's coffin was finally opened.

