

CEO Bride 463

Chapter 463

"I've already checked on her. She's mostly fine," Nash said.

Hearing that, both of them were relieved. After more than two hours, the massive fire was finally under control. The accident resulted in five cases of injuries, three of which were minor, while two security guards were seriously injured and sent to the hospital.

After regaining consciousness, Hera arranged for the finance manager and the security manager to cover the medical expenses at the hospital. She also instructed the maintenance team to dismantle the remaining useful components in the control room.

"Ms. Lynch, please inform all departments to take two days off as we won't be able to get back the power so soon," Hera said.

"Would two days of rest be enough?" Lori looked at the ruined control room and sighed. Based on the extent of the damage, it's likely that we won't be able to resume normal production even within seven days."

Hera pondered before replying, "Start with two days. We'll extend later on if necessary."

11

an urgent message to the management group right away." Lori then dutifully took out her phone and sent an emergency message to the chat group.

then whisked away by work.

spent the entire night investigating the incident but could not find any leads.

at the factory gate, Jupiter was smoking a cigarette. The lines of his face expressed his worry. "As I suspected, surveillance footage from the control room room two days ago. We checked with the security exhausted, Nash leaned back in his seat and said, "Money makes the world turn. Even long-time suspected Hubert's involvement at the beginning. However, his mother-in-law claimed that Hubert had locked himself in and seemed to be on the verge of a breakdown after Helena and Kai who were behind this were even more unlikely. He saved them from the Green Bamboo Association at the time.

phone for the time. It was already eight in the morning, yet

Sherman was standing outside with his hands in his pockets. His once neat suit was wrinkled. There was soot smeared in his face as well. Feeling Nash's gaze on him, he looked over and walked toward him.

"Nash, do you have any orders?"

Nash smiled wryly. "No need to be so polite. I heard your master is still alive. I wonder if that Mystique Loyalty Realm expert from that night was your master."

“No, it’s not.” Sherman shook his head without hesitation. He also thought the person to be was his master at first, but the powerful aura was unfamiliar to him. His master might have been missing for years, but he could still recognize him.

“Strange. Could that person just have been passing by?”

Nash was puzzled. It was rare for two Profound Reality Realm experts to engage in battle, especially among the younger generation. It was hard to tell if they had Mystique Loyalty Realm masters backing them.

Interfering in a conflict between two young Profound Reality Realm experts would certainly provoke conflicts among the Mystique Loyalty Realm experts. If they had just been passing by, they would not have so easily helped Sherman.

“Could...someone else be protecting Hera?”