

CEO Bride 586

Chapter 586

Duncan immediately restrained his smile at those words. He shifted closer to his godfather and sneered. "If you have the guts, go ahead and try to kill me right now!"

Given the circumstances, he saw no need to continue pretending

With two powerful godfathers backing him, why bother acting so nice?

Nash narrowed his eyes as he asked, 'I ask you again, where is Mireille?' He was not going to give up until he found her.

Duncan sensed the killing intent from Nash and felt a bit nervous After all, Nash had left an indelible shadow in his heart.

While Duncan had his godfathers' support, Nash had The Bladesman backing him and hesitated at that. The Bladesman seemed much stronger than The Swordsman.

"Kid, you're asking to die!" The Swordsman's figure blurred before appearing in front of Duncan. How could he allow his newly adopted godson to be bullied by an outsider?

Boris also took a step forward then. In a one-on-one fight, neither he nor The Swordsman would be a match for The Bladesman. However, if they teamed up, things might just work in their favor.

Nash lifted his head to look at The Swordsman. "I saw you at the Gardens of Heavenly Delights last night. How shameless of you, an old man, to prey on young girls.”

The Swordsman looked surprised. “When did you go to Gardens of Heavenly Delights? I didn’t see you.

He had been at Gardens of Heavenly Delights since yesterday afternoon, and the three girls were only brought over in the evening. He left at 4:00 am after that, so how did this guy know?

Duncan shook his head in resignation. Nash had intentionally set a trap, and The Swordsman had unwittingly exposed himself. Nash got the answer he wanted, and a slight smirk played on his lips. He then turned to Duncan and asked, “Did you send someone to kill Kai?”

Duncan had the tendency to tear off the mask but might not admit all his deeds now...

“Why don’t you guess?” Duncan sneered while looking back at Nash. This trick would not work on him. Kai was already dead, and Nash would never find out.

Just then, Nash’s phone rang. Seeing that it was Brian calling, he answered, “Grandmaster, are you still at the Duersons’ mansion? I’ve already picked up Wendy!”

“Got it.”

Nash hung up the phone, turned back to Duncan, and smiled. "If your want to keep something a secret, don't do it. The truth will come out sooner or later."

With that remark made, he turned to Divus and said, "Let's go." He walked ahead without waiting for him to respond.

This scene looked off to Boris and The Swordsman. It looked like Divus, who was The Bladesman, was obedient to Nash?

Boris sighed and said with some concern, "It seems that this Nash person is indeed not easy to deal with."

Surprised, Duncan asked, "Are you saying that the spiritual power fluctuations you sensed in Royal Bay that day came from The Bladesman?"

With his hands behind his back, Boris sighed slightly and replied, "It's highly probable that it was him."

"Boris, why do you think The Bladesman refuses to fight me?" The Swordsman asked casually.

Boris smiled and replied, "He just disdains fighting with you."

Being someone at the peak of the Mystique Loyalty Realm squaring off someone at the intermediate stage of the same realm was like being an adult in their prime facing a teenager who has just learned to fight.

Winning would not bring praise while losing invited ridicule. This was the kind of thankless task that no one wanted to undertake.

The Swordsman leaned on the handle of his weapon and said with his gaze narrowed, "I heard The Bladesman's attempt to break through to the Profound Oriental Realm failed, causing him to be unable to achieve the unity of man and sword.

"If The Bladesman can't achieve that, how can he compete with me?"

There was joy in Boris' eyes. "Is the information reliable?" If it was true, they would certainly be able to slay The Bladesman and Nash if he and The Swordsman were to work together.
