

CEO Bride 604

Chapter 604

Nash was not going to wait for Dylan to come here. Instead, he gave the man he beat up his name and address. Realizing that Nash was not an easy person to deal with, Susie began to feel nervous. "Who... Who is this Lori you're talking about?"

As Nash expected, Susie did not know Lori at all. He continued, "You took something from two men yesterday. Who did you give those things to?"

Susie was terrified, and her whole body was trembling. How did he know what she did yesterday? If her boyfriend found out, their relationship would surely be over. Trembling, she asked, "How do you know about this?"

Seeing Susie's concerns, Nash turned to the man who had just ended the call with his uncle. "Done with your call?"

"Y-Yes." The man shivered in fear. His uncle had told him that this person was a partial Mystique Loyalty Realm expert and that he had suffered a loss at his hands before.

A partial Mystique Loyalty Realm expert... Even a hundred of him would not be enough to fight against Nash.

"Head on out first. I have some questions for your girlfriend," Nash calmly directed.

“Okay, I’ll go out right away!” The man quickly crawled out of the room, and the property manager sensibly closed the door.

Susie clutched the bedding even tighter, afraid that Nash might have ulterior motives.

“Now can we talk?” Nash asked.

Nash intentionally kept things vague just now, likely considering that the woman’s boyfriend was present.

“Horace gave me 30,000 dollars. He told me to take good care of Geordi and Sorn, and... and to hand over their semen to another person!”

“To whom?” Nash hurriedly asked.

“I don’t know his name!” Susie shrank her neck.

“Where did you pass it over? What are his physical characteristics?” Nash asked again.

“He wore a mask, so I couldn’t see his face.” Susie shook her head. We went to Mythos Internet Cafe for the rendezvous.”

“Anything else?”

“No...” Susie added nervously, “Please... Please don’t tell my boyfriend about this!”

Nash smiled faintly. “You, an unfaithful woman, are worried about being discovered by your boyfriend?”

He was implying that he intended to tell the man about this matter.

“No, I beg you!”

Susie was frightened, almost crawling out from under the blanket.

“Well, it’s not impossible, but you have to provide me with some useful information,” Nash said with a half-smile.

“I noticed the man wore a peculiar cologne. I smelled this cologne on a photographer before, and that photographer was a high school classmate of Horace’s!”

“Looks like you’ve been involved with quite a few men!” Nash exclaimed before asking again, “Can you get in touch with that photographer?”

“He has a photography studio in the city center called Neon Photography Studio!” Susie revealed

“If you lie to me, the consequences will be yours to bear.”

Nash spoke indifferently before leaving the room.

After opening the door, Susie's boyfriend immediately peeked into the room. Reassured that his girlfriend was fine, he breathed a sigh of relief.

Nash wasted no time in hailing a taxi outside the residential area before making his way toward the city center.

At Outstanding Culture's company building, Horace was pacing anxiously in his office. He had his phone in his hand but hesitated make the call since the Inspection Office had the technology to monitor mobile communications.

Moreover, his company's network had just been invaded this morning.

It was clear that people from the Inspection Office were watching his every move.

Geordi and Sorn should have been discovered by now, and with the Inspection Office pressuring them, they were likely to expose him and Susie.

Next, the Inspection Office would find Susie and his high school classmate, Rowan. He had to find a way to eliminate the evidence before the Inspection Office caught up to Rowan. The problem was how was he supposed to communicate this information to the outside?

“How did I forget about this?!”
