

CEO is Chasing Ex-Wife Back Chapter 10

Chapter 10 Do Something

At eight o'clock in the evening, in a Michelin restaurant, Wenny was cutting the steak and said casually, "Zac, I met Aurora and her boyfriend."

"Boyfriend?" Zac put down his knife and fork and looked up coldly.

Wenny was not frightened by his sudden coldness. She continued in a soft voice, "Yes, I checked. His name is Terry. His family is rich. This is nothing, but I really can't bear to see the Bennet family hurting you so badly but Aurora lives a happy life."

She pretended not to see the look in Zac's eyes and said exaggeratedly, "That man called Terry is good to her. He is so attentive and gave Aurora his coat for the fear that she might feel cold."

Zac's face was sullen as Wenny continued, especially when she said, "And it is said that they are living together."

Zac threw his fork on the table, making a loud noise.

"Zac, did I say something wrong?" Wenny realized she had said something wrong.

After all, this was related to the dignity of a man.

His ex-wife quickly threw herself into another man's arms after the divorce. This was a slap on Zac's face.

"No." After a long time, realizing that he had overreacted, Zac's expression returned to normal. He coldly spat out the word, picked up the handkerchief, and wiped his mouth.

"I'm done eating. I'll wait for you."

"Alright." Wenny smiled and lowered her head to eat, covering up the haze in her eyes. Aurora had a glorious time. Wenny had envied her for that when Wenny was still in the showbiz.

But then things changed. Wenny didn't want Aurora to live a happy life.

After finishing his meal, Zac went straight out of the restaurant. A waiter had already driven his car over.

He took out his key and got into the driver's seat.

Just as Wenny was about to get into the car, Zac paused. He was fastening the seat belt. He turned his head and said to her, "Carter will pick you up later."

"Zac, it's late at night. Are you going to leave me here alone?" Wenny was not happy about that.

"Be my good girl." Zac was trying to be patient, but his voice was lower.

Wenny did not dare to challenge his temper. She could only get out of the car. As soon as she got out of the car, the door was closed.

The car flew away.

This was the first time that Zac's attitude towards her had changed completely.

Wenny watched as the black car sped away, disappearing into the hazy night. She gritted her teeth.

She knew that Aurora was in trouble, but there was a trace of uneasiness in her. It came from Zac.

Zac was driving very fast. He rolled down the window, and the whistling wind blew past his ears. He kept reminding words, "Aurora and that man called Terry are living together."

Living together...

With her father dead and her family property gone, she could still throw herself into the arms of another man indifferently.

"Aurora, in the end, I underestimated you."

He held the steering wheel tighter, put on his Bluetooth headset, and dialed a number.

"Do something for me."

Aurora had failed a few interviews, but she was not discouraged. Every day she woke up, the first thing she would do was look for jobs.

Three days later, a call came, and she thought it was an interview.

The call went through, and it was a middle-aged woman. "Hello, is this Ms. Bennet? I want to see you."