CEO is Chasing Ex-Wife Back Chapter 12

Chapter 12 I Will Give You My Life

"What else do you want?"

She raised her face with a stubborn expression when she was at Creek Club, "My father is already dead! We have already been divorced! Zac, please leave me alone."

"Shawn killed my parents. Now that he is dead, that's only one life." The man's voice was deep like he was giving her a sentence!

Zac was holding her chin so hard that her bones made a sound of dislocation, but Aurora was silent.

At that moment, Aurora suddenly understood something from Zac's deep eyes.

Only one life.

It turned out that she still owed him a life.

"In that case, how about I pay you back with my life?" She trembled as she forced herself not to cry. Her stubbornness even hurt Zac a little bit.

Perhaps Aurora was out of mind, or maybe the extreme desperation made her lose confidence for a moment.

Sweeping past the shoulders of Zac, Aurora threw herself against a coming car.

Zac was shocked. By the time he had realized what had happened, it was too late. He heard the loud sound of human flesh hitting a car.

SOU

The car tried to stop and the driver quickly got out of the car, seeing a woman lying in a pool of blood.

"This, this, this …Help!" The driver screamed.

The driver tried to call an ambulance, but he was pushed away.

Zac rushed forward and hugged the woman who was bleeding. He was shocked and displeased.

He did not expect Aurora to do that.

"Tim, to the hospital!"

In a daze, Aurora smelt a trace of tobacco.

With the man's deep and commanding voice by her side, she sensed his rough fingertips patting her face. "Aurora, wake up. Don't sleep."

But she was tired and sleepy. When she closed her eyes, she could see her father standing against the light and reaching out to her, "Aurora, daddy misses you. Come to daddy…"

Aurora closed her eyes.

Her finger was clenching his clothes and left blood on his suit. But she let go of the clothes. Zac's face was sullen. He looked up and ordered in a cold voice, "Drive faster."

In the hospital, after eight hours of surgery, Aurora slowly woke up, but her whole body was in pain.

She endured the pain and sat up, trying to remove the needle from the back of her hand, but was immediately stopped by the nurse who had just entered the ward to change medicine.

"Ms. Bennet, you had better not move. You just had a car accident and a miscarriage.

You are very weak and need to rest."

Aurora stopped moving, her face pale as if she had not heard clearly, "What did you say just now? A miscarriage?"

"Yes, Ms. Bennet, don't you know? You have been pregnant for more than a month! It's a pity, this child…"

"Ms. Bennet … Don't be too sad. Take good care of your body. You will have babies in the future."

The nurse changed the medicine for her and left the ward, leaving Aurora alone with her mind buzzing

Child…

Her child…

She raised her hand to touch her belly. Tears finally fell. She couldn't believe she had a child. It was on that day at the funeral with Zac…

It was proof that Zac and she should never be together.

She wanted to cry and laugh. After a long time, she calmed down, but her eyes were attracted by a half-heart-shaped pendant on the bedside table.

Aurora remembered that she had taken it from Zac when he was holding her after the accident.

She couldn't help but pick it up and study it closely. Her expression gradually changed.

This was the pendant that she had lost many years ago after she had saved Zac!

She had lost for a long time and Zac had been worn all the time.

What did this mean?