Chapter 21 Playboy

Zac did not explain much, and Franco could only shut his mouth in embarrassment. They saw through what Franco was thinking. Carter stood behind Zac and whispered, "Chief Derek, you don't have to worry. As for the Swon family, we will deal with it." Franco nodded repeatedly, "Well, Mr. Buchanna, we will do our best."

The interrogation room.

The door was suddenly opened, and the female police officer was still in a businesslike manner,

"Alright, the interrogation is over. Come out."

Aurora's anger was like a punch on cotton, so she could only follow her out for the time being.

However, Aurora felt that someone was looking at her behind the glass. Though it was especially cold, she felt familiar.

When Aurora reached the door, she looked over at the glass.

Zac stood behind the glass and looked at Aurora. They looked at each other through the black one-way glass.

But the difference was that Aurora couldn't see Zac. However, Zac saw the stubbornness in Aurora's eyes.

It was as if something had hit Zac's heart. For the first time, when facing Aurora's gaze, Zac chose to look away.

The police took Aurora away.

However, it was difficult for Zac to calm down.

It was as if something was completely different.

Aurora lost a child.

Their child.

Perhaps, it was even for them.

Zac closed his eyes and became the emotionless Zac again. He pushed open the door of the interrogation room and walked out.

Franco brought a team of police officers to the door.

Suddenly, an ear-piercing brake sounded, and a man walked down from the red car.

Terry's face was full of anger. The moment Terry saw Zac, he punched out!

"Zac! When can you let her go? Has she been living a good day since she met you? Doesn't your conscience hurt?"

In Terry's eyes, Wenny and Zac were a pair of adulterers.

Zac dodged the fist and looked coldly at Terry.

Was Terry the man who lived with Aurora?

Terry seemed to be an impulsive rich kid. Why did she defend him?

"Here is the police station. What is going on?"

When Franco saw this scene, he immediately intended to lead his men to control Terry.

Zac reached out to stop him, "Chief Derek, it's just a personal grudge."

With that, his cold gaze swept across Terry slowly.

“I have told Aurora. You can’t even handle your mother’s problem. What else can you help her with?”

With a mocking smile, Zac did not stay any longer and left with Carter.

“Zac, you are just a playboy!”

Terry’s exasperated voice came from behind.

Aurora paused in her tracks. Was she hearing imaginary voices? How could she hear Zac’s voice...

Chapter 22 Davion’s Statement

In the end, Aurora didn’t see Terry and she was detained for three whole days.

In the morning three days later, a car brought Aurora to the court.

The Swon family refused to give up and wanted to punish Aurora.

On the plaintiff seats, the Swon family did not come. Only the top lawyer they invited stated all the crimes of Aurora.

“Your Honor, the defendant has insulted the plaintiff many times. She has been trying to hurt the plaintiff on purpose. Whether it is the subjective motive of murder or the objective fact of the attack, it is enough to prove the crime of the plaintiff.”

Aurora smiled mockingly. This lawyer could turn white into black.

At this time, Terry’s concerned voice came from the side. “Don’t be afraid, Aurora!”

Aurora felt a warmth in her heart, and she nodded gratefully.

These days, although she refused to see Terry, Terry still helped her find a lawyer.

Soon it was Aurora’s lawyer, Davion Tripp’s turn to speak.

“Your Honor, we have the relevant evidence and believe that the surveillance content provided by the plaintiff was clearly edited. Now the police have provided the complete surveillance video.”

Then, Davion took out a fully recovered surveillance camera.

The people of the public gallery were all shocked.

Even Aurora could not believe it.

Davion had not talked with her about the surveillance video before.

Next, Davion continued to argue. “It can be seen that the defendant was completely in self-defense at that time, not a motive for murder. Therefore, the defendant’s subjective opinion is not to murder the plaintiff. Should we deal with it as a criminal case?”

Terry didn’t know what was going on either, but his intuition told him that Aurora would be saved!

But Aurora still had doubts in her heart. Suddenly, a cold gaze stared at her back. She turned around and met Zac’s gaze.

Zac’s gaze was meaningful, carrying something Aurora could not understand.

Then, Aurora remembered three days ago ... she was not hallucinating!

At that time, no matter how Aurora complained, no one looked back at the surveillance camera.

It was not long after Aurora heard Terry say “Zac” that they released her from the interrogation room.

If it was not Zac, who else could do it?

However, why did Zac do this?

Just as she was in a daze, Wenny pulled up Zac's arm. Other than the corner of her forehead being bandaged, she didn't have any other injuries.

Wenny showed Aurora a smug smile. Zac was hers after all!

Aurora sneered, so they were all here to watch the show.

Aurora only wanted to draw a clear line with everything related to Zac!

Since Aurora didn't die last time, this time...

Aurora opened her mouth and said silently, "Don't you just want to see me go to hell? I'll satisfy you."

Turning her gaze, Aurora fearlessly puffed out her chest. Even standing on the dock, she did not have the slightest bit of cowardice.

Zac's heart trembled and he straightened his back.

What did Aurora mean by this?

Then, the judge finished watching the video and frowned.

"Defendant, you have the right to state your defense."

The lawyer looked at Aurora encouragingly. "Ms. Bennet, you can now tell us what happened at that time."

Aurora's eyes flickered, "Mr. Tripp, thank you for your help."

Davion looked at Aurora in surprise.

Aurora closed her eyes and took a deep breath. When she opened them again, there was fearlessness in her eyes.

"Your Honor, I'm guilty. At that time, I didn't do it out of self-defense. I wanted to kill Wenny Swon."

CEO is Chasing Ex-Wife Back Chapter 23

Chapter 23 Aurora Pleads Guilty

It shocked everyone, and the people from the public gallery gasped.

Even if it was a real murderer, few of them would directly plead guilty.

Terry's eyes were filled with shock.

Why did Aurora say that?

The judge was also surprised. "Defendant, this is in court. You have to take responsibility for your words."

Aurora looked at the judge.

Since Wenny wanted to kill her, perhaps this was the only way for Zac to let the Bennet family go!

"Your Honor, what I said is the truth, and it is also my real thoughts. I hate Wenny. I want her to die!"

"Aurora! Are you crazy?"

Terry shouted in despair. He stood up from the side and was about to charge toward Aurora!

The judge picked up the gavel in his hand. "Silence!"

The staff member who maintained the discipline brought Terry out.

Silence returned to the court.

The judge looked at Aurora, who was standing on the dock. He looked at Zac and asked in a low voice, "Defendant, are you sure your motive was to kill the plaintiff?" Davion stood up anxiously and wanted to explain, but he was interrupted by the judge. "Let the defendant say it herself."

Aurora looked over at Wenny, and sure enough, Aurora saw ecstasy in her eyes. Did Wenny feel that she could topple Aurora?

ora

On the other hand, Zac was frowning as if he was still worried about Aurora.

What a joke.

"Yes, I admit that I wanted to kill her," Aurora repeated her words.

Aurora looked determined. Obviously, she did not need anyone to defend her anymore. Even Davion wiped his sweat and felt sorry for her.

After the court trial, someone escorted Aurora down.

When Aurora passed by Zac and Wenny sitting at the side, she paused.

Her straight backbone supported all of her pride.

Her gaze fell on the pile of red jade pendants on Zac and Wenny's necks, and her lips curled into a deep smile.

"I wish you all the best."

With that, she walked away and finally disappeared at the gate of the court.

Zac's gaze followed closely, and he felt uncomfortable.

Aurora ... actually pled guilty.

When Wenny saw that Zac was looking at the door, she held his hand and shook it. She said coquettishly, "Zac, what are you looking at? Aurora is too vicious. I didn't expect that she actually wanted to kill me from the beginning! Fortunately, Zac, you came quickly..."

When Zac heard that, a faint disgust rose in his heart.

Zac had seen the surveillance video.

Zac withdrew his hand from Wenny's hand and stood up.

"Let's go home."

Chapter 24 The Wedding of the Century

A broken family, the dead family, divorce, and prison.

Every day when Aurora was in prison, she lived in a nightmare that she could not wake up.

Until one year later...

"No.326, Aurora, due to your good performance, you are allowed to leave prison now."

Aurora was released.

The cold and hard door had isolated Aurora from the inside world. Aurora was dressed in white casual clothes and slowly walked out.

The long-lost freedom was like the wind, coming and blowing in her ears.

Was this the feeling of rebirth?

Aurora slowly closed her eyes, took a deep breath, and opened them again. Her gaze was firm.

Not far away, a low-key sports car was waiting over there, and the door opened. Terry ran over and muttered, "Silly, you didn't have to go to jail. The evidence that Davion has is enough to prove that you are innocent, but you insist on making things difficult for yourself!"

Terry had run around because of this matter, but Aurora was stubborn. Seeing that Terry was still the same as before, Aurora smiled, "It's fine." Terry was dumbfounded. He felt as if something had changed in Aurora, but he couldn't explain it.

Aurora smiled indifferently as if the woman who had just been released from prison was not her.

Terry nodded, "Let's go. We should leave this unlucky place."

"There's a big event today. Why don't you check the trending topic?"

Terry sat in the driver's seat and handed her a new phone, pretending to be casual. Aurora raised her eyebrows, took the phone, and clicked open Twitter with some unfamiliarity.

The first trending topic on Twitter was "The Wedding of the Century."

Aurora clicked in and saw that it was a live broadcast of Zac and Wenny's wedding. She let out a mocking laugh.

On the screen, there was no change on Zac's face. Aurora's hand could not help but tighten, hatred hidden in the bottom of her eyes.

What a coincidence. On the day she was released from prison, they got married.

"Do you want to have some fun? Let them see that you are not easy to trifle with. No matter what. I will support you."

After a moment of silence, Aurora readily agreed.

"Sure."

They had personally sent Aurora to prison. It was to get revenge.

Terry did not expect Aurora to agree so readily and was stunned for a moment.

But then, Terry smiled with a hint of excitement and evilness. The sports car was like an arrow that had taken off its bowstring, galloping on the highway in the direction of the wedding ceremony.

The wedding was majestic and glorious. The guests were either rich or noble. Wenny's father, Davis Swon, was busy receiving the guests who came to propose a toast. Beside him stood a beautiful woman, Faye Green. They looked intimate.

"Thank you for helping prepare Wenny's marriage."

Faye smiled gently and leaned into Davis' arms. She said softly, "This is what I should do. I married you, so I naturally have to treat Wenny as my own child. It's just that I don't know when I can hear her call me mother."

Davis' expression stiffened and he laughed dryly.

"You just married me. Wenny can't accept it at the moment. Don't worry, take your time."

Faye knew what he meant. She smiled shyly and didn't say anything else.

The guests walked in one after another. Terry parked the car and got out with Aurora.

The Walton family also received the wedding invitation. When Terry came to pick up Aurora from prison, he brought two invitation cards from home just in case.

Aurora looked at the exquisite invitation and her eyes were cold.

As she walked up the steps, she saw the beautiful woman in the distance and her expression shook.

"Terry."

"What is it?"

"Why is Faye here?"

Faye used to be Aurora's stepmother.

Faye had been by her father's side for six or seven years, although her father missed his dead wife and had never gone through the marriage formalities with Faye, Aurora knew how good Faye was to her.

In fact, Aurora was ready to accept Faye.

Unexpectedly, Faye chose to leave when something happened to the Bennet Group and the Bennet family was in the most difficult time!

Faye had disappeared without a trace!

Aurora thought that Faye had disappeared from this world. But how could she appear at the scene of Zac's second marriage?

Aurora's were as cold as ice.

Terry followed Aurora's line of sight and frowned, "Aurora, she is now Wenny's stepmother."

Aurora felt as if she had been struck by lightning.

Well...

What a small world.

Aurora clenched her fists and stared at Faye's bright smile.

Faye, who was leaning in Davis' arms, suddenly looked into Aurora's cold eyes. She exclaimed softly and subconsciously pushed Davis away and stood up straight.

"Aurora?"

Why was Aurora out?

Wasn't he sentenced to two years? It was only one year.

Faye hastily wanted to hide, but there was no place for her to hide, so she could only lean into Davis' arms.

Faye's voice wasn't loud, but it attracted the guests outside.

Everyone knew Aurora, the ex-wife of Zac, who had been in prison for a year.

"Security," Davis frowned.

But before the security guard could chase Aurora out, the door of the hotel behind them opened and a tall figure appeared.

Zac was dressed in a black suit, and his hair was slicked back with a few strands of fringes hanging loosely in front of his forehead, which covered his cold eyes.

Everyone present gasped, there would probably be a good show. Mr. Buchanna's ex-wife got released from prison in advance. She came to Mr. Buchanna's wedding with Terry Walton. Did she come here to wreck this wedding with Terry?

CEO is Chasing Ex-Wife Back Chapter 25

Chapter 25 The Pendant

aplseves swept over Aurora. He realized that she had lost a lot of weight after not seeing her for a year.

Aurora's skin was so white that it was bloodless, but her eyes were filled with determination.

Zac stared for a long time. His brows furrowed. He did not expect that they would meet again at such a time.

Aurora also saw him at the same time. Zac was today's groom!

Aurora did not escape weakly like in the past but met his gaze directly.

Her tough and sharp eyes made Zac frown.

Her long hair had been replaced with refreshing ear-length hair. It was not so elegant but more suitable for the current Aurora.

Aurora had nothing to do with Zac anymore.

In the end, Zac first shifted his gaze away.

As if he didn't see her, Zac nodded to the guests and walked toward Davis.

"Mr. Swon, the wedding can begin now." Zac's voice was neither cold nor heavy, but it was extremely oppressive.

Davis' expression changed as he replied, "Alright."

Even though today was the day Wenny married Zac, Zac still called Davis Mr. Swon, but not Davis or father.

Davis didn't feel good about the distance, but he could only endure it.

Anyway, it was no one else but Zac.

Davis and Faye followed Zac inside. Faye glanced at Aurora secretly, her eyelids twitching non-stop.

They hoped today's wedding would be carried out smoothly.

Terry looked at Aurora and asked, "Are we going in?"

He was afraid that Aurora wouldn't be able to stand it.

"Of course, the show is not over."

Aurora took the lead and walked towards the hotel entrance.

Terry followed her. They had invitations in their hands, and they were unimpeded.

Wenny was dressing up in the hotel dressing room, followed by a few bridesmaids, all smiling and saying some compliments.

Wenny became even more pleased with herself. After today, she would be a figure in Berchun City!

At this time, Davis walked in with a gloomy face, "Are you ready?"

"Yes."

Wenny smiled shyly and was overwhelmed by joy. She did not notice Davis' strange look and walked out with a sweet smile on her face, holding his hand.

On the red carpet, the doors of the auditorium slowly opened.

Wenny was wearing a white veil and a customized wedding dress. She was shining and appeared at the end of the red carpet. At the end of the line stood Zac in a suit.

Wenny looked at Zac through the wedding dress, her heart burning.

Zac finally belonged to her.

Under everyone's gaze, the band struck up the "wedding march". Wenny held Davis' hand and walked towards Zac.

"The bride's father can hand the bride to the groom."

ca

Following the emcee's words, Davis put Wenny's hands into Zac.

They wore white gloves and continued the wedding according to the process.

Wenny could not feel the warmth of Zac's palm. She lowered her eyes to hide her shyness.

"Before the wedding ceremony officially begins, I would like to share the tokens of the bride and groom with everyone present. This is the witness of their love."

The etiquette lady on the side held a tray in her hand and showed the two and a half pieces of pendant on it to everyone present.

Below the stage, Aurora raised her eyebrows. This was the start of a good show.

"Sir, please stop!"

The clear and elegant voice penetrated the soft background music, making everyone's hearts tremble.

On the stage, Zac was the first to hear her voice. He turned his head and looked at Aurora with a warning expression.

Aurora blinked and did not care at all.

Under the gaze of all the guests, she stood up cheerfully and stepped onto the red carpet towards the couple.

The moment Wenny saw Aurora, her back froze.

Aurora!

When did she come out?

How could Aurora be allowed to go to the wedding scene?

"Zac, she must be here to make trouble. Drive her out now." Wenny was anxious.

Zac's eyes darkened. Everyone in Berchun City knew about his relationship with Aurora.

The Aurora in his memory would not do something so absurd.

Zac frowned and looked at Aurora. Step by step, Aurora walked to the center of the auditorium.

"Zac."

Wenny stomped her feet anxiously. Why was Zac so silent? Did he still have feelings for Aurora?

With a smile on her face, Aurora endured the gazes of the spectators and slowly said, "It's your wedding day. As an experienced woman, I would like to personally give my blessings. Is that okay?"

Zac stared at Aurora coldly.

Wenny, however, was very impatient. "Ms. Bennet, this isn't proper. Let's wait until the ceremony is over. We can talk privately."

With that, Wenny maintained her smile while blinking at the security guards below the stage.

Aurora curled her lips.

Not waiting for the security guard to come over, Aurora suddenly stepped forward and took the pendant from the emcee.

"What? You..." The emcee didn't know what was going on.

Aurora shook the pendant, "There are some things that Miss Swon might be embarrassed about. Then let me tell you, this pendant has a very romantic origin. This was accidentally lost when Miss Swon saved Mr. Buchanna."

Wenny stopped smiling, and her hand holding the wedding dress tightened.

Aurora noticed that Wenny was in a panic. So she smiled wildly, "Do you want me to tell you, or are you going to confess?"

"Aurora, what are you doing? Give it back to me!" Wenny was anxious.

Aurora's elbow moved and avoided Wenny, but then she felt a force on her wrist, which made her unable to move at all.

Wenny gritted her teeth in anger and pointed at Aurora. "Zac, this woman is here to ruin our wedding. Are you still going to ignore her?"

Zac's hands under his sleeves slowly tightened, and his imposing aura spread out.

Aurora knew that this was a sign of his anger.

Aurora blinked and smiled. "Mr. Buchanna, don't worry. This is a fake."

"Fake?"

There was a noisy discussion below the stage.

It was just a pendant. Why bother to differentiate between real and fake?

"Aurora, don't test my patience," Zac pulled Aurora's hand very hard, not caring if she was hurt or not.

Aurora turned her head and ignored his warning.

"What a coincidence. I have no patience as well. By the way, let me remind you that so many reporters are taking pictures. You had better be a gentleman so that you won't be awkward when you see the news tomorrow."

Zac felt Aurora became a little strange. Zac was in a trance for a moment, and he loosened his hand involuntarily.

Aurora took the opportunity to take a glass of red wine and gently threw the pendant in front of Wenny and Zac.

She shook the wine glass, then loosened her hand.

The glass fell.

It shattered on the ground, scattering all over Wenny's noble wedding dress.

"Damn!"

Wenny was so angry that she screamed. If the bridesmaid didn't pull her, she would pull Aurora's hair on the spot. "Are you crazy? Do you know how much this wedding dress is worth?"

"Is it valuable? That's a pity because you will soon be worthless."

Aurora squatted down and picked up the pendant from the ground. The gray color on the pendant faded and revealed its original red color. But strangely, the red pendant was engraved with the word "Aurora"! All the guests widened their eyes. This was better than magic. The bride and groom's token of love was engraved with the name of Zac's ex-wife? How could... Wenny was also shocked, unable to speak for a long time. Aurora looked at them with a mocking smile. "Mr. Buchanna, you didn't expect this pendant to be mine. You treat a liar as your savior." In that instant, Wenny looked pale, "No, Zac, it's not what she said!"

CEO is Chasing Ex-Wife Back Chapter 26

Chapter 26 I Am Pregnant

Wenny's eyes were about to split apart. She left the wedding dress behind and rushed off the stage to hit Aurora.

"Aurora! Nonsense! This is me and Zac..."

Before Wenny could finish her words, Terry grabbed her hand with one hand.

Terry raised his eyebrows and looked at Zac, who was frowning. "Mr. Buchanna, I feel that you are a little pitiful. You can even mistake the woman you want to protect."

Terry let go of Wenny in disdain and left with Aurora on his shoulder.

Zac stood on the stage as if his gaze was glued to Aurora.

As for Aurora's words, they struck his chest like a bell.

The savior back then was mistaken? It wasn't Wenny, but...

The name seemed to come out of his throat but was stuck.

"Zac!"

Wenny was completely mad.

IV was C

Wenny took a step forward and tugged at Zac's hand. "Zac, don't believe her. I saved you back then! This pendant was something I accidentally left for you back then. Have you forgotten?"

Zac looked at the beautiful face in front of him and felt that something was wrong. His eyes became colder.

At this time, the guests were discussing.

"What the hell is going on? Didn't you say that this pendant is a token of love for the bride and groom? Why does it belong to the ex-wife?"

"Oh my, how can they make a mistake like this?"

Zac's face was dark. He shook off Wenny's hands that were coming again and intended to leave. When Wenny saw that, how could she let him go? She staggered and threw herself onto Zac!

"Zac, don't go. I'm already two months pregnant!

"If you chase after her, what about the child in my belly?"

Wenny cried. Her tear-stained appearance was very pitiful. The words she said successfully stopped Zac's steps.

"What did you say?"

Zac turned around and stared at Wenny with his eagle-like eyes.

"A few days ago, I felt unwell and went to the hospital for a check-up. Only then did I realize that I was pregnant. It has been two months."

Wenny felt guilty under the gaze of Zac.

After all, this child was not... Fortunately, Wenny was prepared. She quickly took out the prenatal examination report that she had prepared.

Zac took the report and glanced at it. The words "pregnancy nine weeks" froze his vision.

When Zac got drunk two months ago, did he have sex with Wenny?

Zac frowned, but no matter how this child came about today's matter needed to be settled.

ng." Zac's thin lips moved as he instructed the middle-aged man in a suit beside him.

"Alright, Mr. Buchanna. I'll go make the arrangements now."

Soon, the guests present were dismissed.

The rest of them returned to the lounge together.

Davis looked troubled. He looked at Zac and said hesitantly, "Alright, alright, we won't hold the wedding anymore? Then wouldn't all the guests laugh at us?"

Standing behind Zac, Carter keenly sensed Zac's displeasure.

"Mr. Swon, please call Mr. Buchanna. The wedding has ended."

Thinking of the financial strength of the Buchanna Group, Davis struggled for a while and forced a smile.

"Mr. Buchanna, Wenny didn't do this on purpose. Please..."

Zac sat on the sofa and looked at Davis coldly. "Oh? Do you think that deceiving is the way of business, Mr. Swon?"

"How ... how could it be?" Davis was speechless.

Wenny's face was pale, and she fell on the sofa, not daring to look up.

"No matter what, Wenny is pregnant. Let it go." Faye said.

When Wenny heard Faye's words, her eyes lit up as if she had grasped a life-saving straw.

"Zac, I beg you, please don't leave me for the sake of my baby, okay? The child is innocent. We can't let him lose his father as soon as he is born."

Zac's face seemed to become even more sullen.

Wenny was sophisticated.

No father.

When Zac closed his eyes in the middle of the night, he could still dream of his father's tragic death.

Zac knew well the pain of losing his father.

"So this child should not be born." Zac raised his hand and Carter immediately handed him a check.

"Write the amount you want and have an abortion," said Zac, placing the check on the table.

The huge lounge was instantly silent.

Wenny did not expect Zac to be so decisive. "What... you want me to have an abortion?"

Davis and Faye did not expect it either, and they were also shocked.

"Well... Zac, it's a life!"

CEO is Chasing Ex-Wife Back Chapter 27

Chapter 27 Back Then

Wenny was immediately cowardly. After all, she knew Zac well, who was ruthless enough.

Wenny began to cry. "I admit that it was my fault that I lied to you, but that was all because I love you. I love you and this child! I beg you, Zac... Don't be so cruel. Miscarriage is harmful to a woman!"

Miscarriage! This was not the first time that Zac heard this word.

More than a year ago, Aurora also experienced a miscarriage. Even though her face was pale from excessive blood loss, she still refused to lower her head to him.

Everything seemed to happen yesterday.

There was an unknown surge of emotion in Zac's heart.

"Zac, it was Aurora's scheme. She doesn't want us to be happy. She was deliberately taking revenge on us. You must believe that I do love you!"

Wenny's words pulled Zac's thoughts back. Zac frowned as if he was interested in these words.

"You can keep the child for now." Zac finally compromised.

Wenny was delighted, but she wasn't happy for too long. Zac stood up. The tall shadow shrouded her. "It's only temporary. During this period, you stay in the Swon's place."

Carter looked sympathetically at Wenny, who was kneeling on the ground. He clicked his tongue and did not forget to take the check on the table before leaving.

Aurora made a scene at the wedding. But after leaving, she was not happy.

After getting in the car, Aurora removed all her disguise and looked a little tired.

Terry tapped his fingers on the steering wheel, trying to find a topic, "I have a racing match in a few days. Come to play?"

"Not interested," Aurora said indifferently. "I haven't raced for a long time."

Terry nodded. "That's right. You haven't raced for a long time. It's a pity. I'll spend the bonus myself. It's only 17 thousand dollars."

17 thousand dollars!?

US

"I'll go!"

GEL DOO

Aurora sat up straight.

She needed money very much.

Terry smiled.

This year, when Aurora was in prison, Terry almost ran around the world to participate in all kinds of racing competitions, and slowly became famous.

Almost everyone in the racing circle had heard of Terry.
They called Terry the Black Rider.
In front of the racing field, a person was pacing around anxiously.
After seeing Terry had arrived, he immediately rushed over.
“Oh my god, you are finally here! Hurry up, I have been waiting for you for a long time!”
The moment the man saw Aurora, he paused. “This is...”
Terry smiled as he introduced, “Aurora, this is my manager, Abel Drake. She is Aurora.
This time, she is here to be my co-driver.”
When Abel heard that, his eyes widened. He pulled Terry to the side and asked, “Are you crazy? Did you ask her to be your co-driver? No, impossible.”
Aurora raised her eyebrows. She didn’t need to eavesdrop, but she knew the general content.
Terry coughed awkwardly.
“Abel, take a look first.”
After Terry finished speaking, he ignored Abel’s obstruction and pulled Aurora inside.
“I thought you didn’t have a co-driver, so I agreed,” said Aurora after hesitating.
“You’re already here,” Terry smiled indifferently. “It’s so boring if you don’t have a round,” he said.
“See you inside,” Terry said, handing the helmet to Aurora.
Aurora didn’t hesitate either.
Sitting in the car, Aurora and Terry were stuck in the middle of the car seat. Their line of sight
became very low, almost equal to the horizon.
Aurora touched the inner wall of the car and a familiar feeling that she had not felt for a long time surged up.
In the past, when Terry was not famous, Aurora was often his co-driver, which was before she married Zac.
Terry seemed to see her nervousness and turned his head to comfort her. “Don’t be nervous. You can do it.”
Aurora was slightly relieved and smiled at Terry.
“Alright.”
At this time, at the Buchanna Group.
Zac looked sullen, and the aura around him was cold. Even Carter did not dare to get too close.
“The result,” Zac said.
“Mr. Buchanna, I found out that the little girl back then was indeed Ms. Bennet.”
Carter handed over the document. It was the shot of a surveillance video of the villa and the oral statements of the staff, as well as the list of personnel who were in the villa that day.
There was Shawn’s name on it, but not Davis’.

Wenny was not in the villa that day. How could she save Zac?
Zac gripped the pendant, his joints crackling. For three years, he had mistaken it because of the pendant around Wenny's neck.
The girl who had truly saved him was Aurora, the daughter of his father's enemy. Aurora had many opportunities to tell him the truth. Why didn't she tell him? Did Aurora endure until today to slap him in the face?
Ora
Revenge. Wenny used the right word.
The image of Aurora at the wedding kept lingering in Zac's mind, disturbing his mood. Aurora knew everything, but why didn't she say it?
Suddenly...
Zac slammed his palm on the table, and the pendant left a mark on the table, carrying his anger and unwillingness.
"By the way, Mr. Buchanna, one more thing," Carter said.
Zac raised his eyes.
"Ms. Bennet followed Mr. Walton to the racing field today."
Zac had ordered him to keep an eye on Aurora's every move.
"Racing field?" said Zac, turning his head to the side.
"Yes, I heard that Ms. Bennet would be Mr. Walton's co-driver and participate in the competition together."
Zac's eyes darkened as he pressed his fingers on the table.
It turned out that after two years of marriage, he knew little about Aurora.
Could Aurora race?
Zac twisted his tie in annoyance. After a long time, he asked, "Martin told me that there was an investment project, and that competition was also a race, right?"
Carter was dumbfounded. "Mr. Buchanna, it was the same competition."

Chapter 28 The New Investor

In the racing field, Terry stepped on the accelerator. The car was like an arrow leaving the bow, rushing out of the starting line at the fastest speed!
According to the switch in the surveillance video in the car, Aurora's operation was so beautiful that people could not take their eyes away.
Finally, when Terry's car sped past the finish line, Abel could not help but clap his hands and shout, "Good!"
Abel hurriedly ran down to welcome them.
"Terry, good boy. Where did you find such an excellent co-driver?"
Terry came out of the car, took off his helmet, and said in high spirits, "She is my treasure."
"You will win! You guys are lucky. I just received a notification when you guys were training. The organizers of the competition added more investment and the top three prize money doubled! If we can win, the prize money alone is hefty.”

“What the hell? Which company is in such a hurry to send us money?”

“It’s the Buchanna Group. It invested in racing for the first time.”

Terry didn’t know what to say.

Terry looked at Aurora.

Aurora was stunned for a moment, obviously not expecting that. After all, Zac was never interested in racing

However, since it was the money of the Buchanna Group, she had to make a profit.

“Terry, I want to run a few rounds,” Aurora said as she put on her helmet, signaling

Terry to get in the car.

“Great,” Abel said as he looked at Aurora’s purposeful air.

But as Terry stood there, his usually roguish face revealed a hint of sympathy.

For the next few days, Aurora practiced crazily on the racing field.

It was not until the field closed that Aurora tiredly got out of the car. Terry had been waiting for her and handed her a bottle of water.

“Let’s go back. It’s not good for you to be in such a hurry to achieve success and gain short-term benefits.”

Aurora was a little disappointed. She nodded and walked beside Terry with her head lowered.

She walked without looking at the road and almost hit the utility pole.

Terry simply freed a hand and hooked it around her shoulder.

Far away, a limousine was parked by the roadside, and behind the car window was Zac’s cold face.

Zac knew that Aurora had come to this field to train, so he came over to take a look. He didn’t expect to see such a scene.

“Is she already living with Terry?” Zac narrowed his eyes and asked coldly.

“Yes...” Carter hadn’t finished speaking when he felt a chill by his side.

Carter coughed dryly and quickly corrected himself, “I don’t think so.”

Carter shook his head hurriedly.

Only when Zac calmed down did Carter dare to let out a sigh of relief.

Zac glanced at him coldly and asked, “When will they be competing?”

“It seems to be three days later.” Carter blurted out.

Then, Carter seemed to think of something. He turned his head from the passenger seat and said, “Mr. Buchanna, but three days later, we have a very important bid...”

A sharp gaze instantly made Carter feel like he was being pricked by needles. He immediately added in a low voice, “However, I can inform them to change the date...”

Carter kept silent.

After a long time, Zac twisted his tie and two words came out of his throat. “No need.”

Three days later.

The preliminary round of Clouston Racing had begun.

It was only eight in the morning, and the contestants were basically already in position.

The organizers also came to the scene early.

“Mr. Williams, I heard that there is a new investor.”

“Yes, it’s lucky.” The middle-aged man in a suit turned his head and smiled.

"That's because you guys did well in the competition. I heard that it was..."

"Mr. Williams!"

Suddenly, a gentle voice came from behind them.

Milton Williams's expression tightened. He immediately turned around, a flattering smile already on his face.

"Hey, Carter. Come this way."

Carter nodded and walked over to Milton.

On the side, Milton saw that only Carter came over and asked tentatively, "Mr. Bacon, are you the only one here today? Mr. Buchanna, he..."

Carter glanced at Milton.

"Mr. Buchanna has other arrangements. I'm on his behalf. The investor doesn't have to do anything special today, right?"

"Yes. Everything depends on Mr. Buchanna's schedule." Milton smiled flatteringly. Even if Carter was just Zac's assistant, Milton had to curry favor with him.

On the circuit.

Aurora and Terry arrived early in the morning. After changing their clothes, they went into the field together.

At this time, two flashy sports cars drove into the field noticeably.

Aurora turned her head and saw two familiar men, Daniel and Martin.

They were from the Buchanna family.

Aurora had seen them before when she went to Creek Club.

Are they going to participate in the race?

Aurora thought with a frown. She had a bad feeling.

Aurora had always felt that someone was watching her since she had been here.

Who is it? Aurora thought.

Aurora and Terry checked the car together. Just as they were about to get into the car, the bright sunlight shone and dizzied her. She blinked, but meanwhile, she felt that the gaze that was following her became even colder.

She looked around and finally fixed her eyes on the stands.

Aurora soon met the gaze in surprise.

"Aurora, hurry up!"

Chapter 29 Stay Away From Her

Terry urged Aurora but did not get any response from her. He said again worriedly, "Aurora?"

Aurora regained her senses and looked at Terry in a daze, "OK!"

As the countdown reached zero, a gunshot rang out, and all the cars at the starting line ran out with lightning speed.

Aurora sat in the front passenger seat while her mind was filled with the man she had just seen and his cold, emotionless eyes. He's Zac, but why would he come here?

Aurora thought.

"Aurora, where is the obstacle?"

Terry asked in an anxious voice.

Aurora came back to her senses and looked forward. Her eyes widened soon. Their distance toward that obstacle was now almost shorter than the safe distance! Aurora forced herself to calm down and quickly determined the direction of the obstacle, "It's in the direction of nine o'clock! Slow down right now! Front brakes now." Terry responded quickly as he turned the steering wheel. The car soon slowed down. And it dangerously passed the obstacles at a very close distance, with sparks flying around the wheels. At the same time, Daniel and Martin's car made the corner overtaking! "Aurora! Wake up!" Terry glanced at the rearview mirror. They were in the lead before, but now they were overtaken. He shouted in a loud voice, trying to get Aurora back from her thoughts. Aurora immediately perked up. "Turn around!" "Speed up!" With smooth cooperation, Aurora and Terry's car finally surpassed Daniel's car at the last second and crossed the finish line. When Aurora and Terry got out of the car, their clothes were almost wet with sweat. Aurora felt a little guilty and apologized to Terry, "I'm sorry. I just..." "That's okay. We still won the race!" Terry held the helmet between his arms. He stretched out his hand and gave Aurora a high five. Terry could see that Aurora was somewhat absent-minded. Aurora forced a smile. Meanwhile, it was bedlam in the stands. "Zac! Did you see that? I almost won!" Daniel jumped over the railing and said loudly. Zac said coldly, "But you're still the second!" Daniel muttered in dissatisfaction. Zac had already ignored him and directly looked at Aurora. Her performance just now was indeed amazing. Aurora frowned, Why is he still there? she thought. She subconsciously quickened her pace and headed to the locker room with Terry. "Why is he sitting on the stands instead of in the VIP room?" Terry asked. Aurora made no reply. Terry followed behind Aurora and deliberately mentioned, "Is he going to repay your kindness?" "What?" "For saving him at the wedding. Otherwise, why would the Buchanna Group invest so much money in the race?" Aurora knew that Terry was joking, but she looked gloomy, "Stop talking about him! It's impossible!" She quickly walked into the locker room. Zac sat in the same place with the same cold gaze looking at Aurora's back meaningfully until Aurora disappeared. Zac never took his eyes off Aurora since he had been here... On his way to the venue, Zac suddenly changed his mind and came over.

Martin noticed Zac's look and asked, "Are you surprised that your ex-wife could race?" Zac shot Martin a glance.

Daniel suddenly understood something. He raised his hand and placed it on Martin's shoulder, "I have to say that she is pretty good at driving. She seems to be more beautiful than before." Daniel said with a sly smile.

"Stay away from her!"

Zac said coldly and walked towards the direction that Aurora left.

Daniel paused for a moment before he said, "What did he just say? Does he want me to ignore that woman, or not approach that woman?"

"Anyway, you stay away from her." Martin shook Daniel's hand off and walked in the opposite direction with his helmet in his arms.

"I'm not interested in a woman who had a relationship with Daniel at all!" Daniel snorted disdainfully.

Half an hour later, Aurora walked out of the locker room and unexpectedly saw Zac. Zac stood at the end of the arch. Wearing a casual shirt, he was now more attractive. Aurora narrowed her eyes and prepared to ignore him, but Zac grabbed her arm and said coldly.

"Let's talk."

Or

Without a second thought, Aurora shook his hand off and looked at him, "Mr. Buchanna, I have nothing to talk to you."

Aurora had just taken a shower, and there was a faint refreshing smell wafting around her, but her eyes were full of disgust and vigilance towards him.

Zac suppressed the displeasure in his heart. His eyes darkened as he tried to break the deadlock between the two of them, "I never expected that you could race."

Aurora smiled, "There are too many things that you did not know!"

After several arguments with Zac, Aurora could face Zac calmly.

"Mr. Buchanna, just to remind you that you are already married and I have nothing to do with you!"

The shadows of them lengthened with the approach of sunset.

Zac swallowed hard and didn't get angry. "Since when did you find out that I got the wrong person?"

"I've already made it clear at your wedding. I'm sorry, but I'm not interested in recalling the past

"I've already made it clear at your wedding. I'm sorry, but I'm not interested in recalling the past with you." As soon as Aurora finished speaking, she directly stepped around him.

"If you had told me earlier, you wouldn't have had to suffer the imprisonment of one year," Zac said coldly as he turned to look at her arrogant back.

He could let her go just for the sake of that pendant.

What Zac had said was like a needle directly inserted into Aurora's heart and hurt Aurora again.

Aurora didn't know what made Zac think that he could master her life?

That was so ridiculous!

She stopped abruptly and clutched the helmet in her hand, "It seems that you have a bad memory, Mr. Buchanna. I admitted my sin in court and I asked them to put me into prison. That was my choice."

Chapter 30 A Hypocrite

"If I tell you, will you let the Bennet family go? Will you let my dad go? Will you give up the plan that you schemed to destroy my family?

"Will you?"

Aurora took a step closer and stared at Zac's face.

A smile bloomed at the corner of her mouth. It was a look that Zac had never seen before.

The word "Yes" was stuck in his throat, but he couldn't say it.

"Stop pretending," Aurora smiled contemptuously and walked away decisively.

Zac stood there and saw Aurora leaving.

When they met again, Aurora changed into a whole different person.

With mixed feelings, Zac returned to the car, took off his baseball cap, and threw it onto the passenger seat.

When he was about to step on the accelerator, he saw two figures.

Terry pulled Aurora by the arm and got her into the car by the side of the road. "Are you alright? You don't look too good. How about I send you back first?"

"I'm fine. Probably because I didn't have breakfast, I'm having hypoglycemia," she replied absentmindedly.

"Are you hungry? I'll take you to eat!"

As Terry spoke, he stepped on the accelerator.

The night wind blew through the window and scattered Aurora's short hair. "We must get the trophy for the finals!"

When Zac returned home, the servant immediately brought him a clean towel, "Mr. Buchanna, we'll leave now."

The servants did not stay for the night. This was the rule of the Buchanna family.

Even if he was the only resident of this house.

Zac raised his hand and took his phone into the study. Wenny sent him a couple of voice messages and photos again. "Zac, I have been taking good care of the fetus. Look, I had some soup today. When will you come to see me and the baby?"

The baby?

The baby again.

In the past few days, she had used the baby as an excuse and mentioned it many times, but she had never apologized sincerely.

Zac never came to visit her. He would never change his mind easily. Moreover, he was determined to teach Wenny a lesson this time. He should let her know the rules of the Buchanna family and his bottom line.

He walked to the sofa and closed his eyes. He saw Aurora's face.

Zac opened his eyes and turned on the TV. There should be a broadcast for today's preliminaries.

As he expected, it happened to be today's match on the broadcast, and his eyes were locked on Terry's car.

He watched as the car rushed past the finish line, watched Aurora get out of the car, and watched them clap.

She had a graceful figure. He had never seen her charming look before.

Based on how familiar she was with racing cars, she had put a lot of effort into it. But she managed to hide it from him flawlessly.

"Sure enough, the daughter of the Bennet family has two faces."

Zac furrowed his brows in frustration and turned off the TV.

Zac was irritated because Aurora once again drove him mad.

It was the day of the official competition,

"Ladies and gentlemen, the Red Flame Cup Race is about to begin!

"Now we come to our contestant area. Racing car number one..."

With the voice from the broadcast, all the racers were making their final preparations.

Daniel sat on the steps, his eyes fixed on racing car number four. It was Terry's car, and Aurora was standing next to Terry while checking with him.

"I was simply careless in the preliminary round. Do they think they can win?" Daniel spat on the ground and his eyes became fierce.
