Chapter 301

She did not realize it before. Yet, now that she heard what her son said, she realized she was a rich woman.

The houses were a hundred and fifty million, and so was the necklace on her neck.

That meant that she already had three hundred million worth of assets.

However, she still felt pity that it was not in cash. After all, there was no way she could sell the house because the three houses were gifts for the children from their grandfather.

Thus, she would have to keep the houses for them. Besides that, the necklace might be hers, but Patrick told her that she would have to keep wearing it.

All in all, she was still poor.

“Sweetheart, work is important to me. I have to work no matter how rich we are.”

At that moment, Juliette ran over and noticed the beautiful dress Gwendolyn was wearing after she took off her coat.

“Gwen, this dress is stunning! Did you go to a prince's ball?” she asked as she blinked her big, round eyes in envy.

Gwendolyn smiled. “I went to work, not a prince's ball. I'll hold a grand birthday party for the three of you when it's your birthday. That way, you'll be the little princess, and your brothers will be little princes.”

Juliette jumped in joy at her words.

“Hooray!” she exclaimed.

“Hurry up. Otherwise, I'll go and kidnap you myself,” said Patrick as he had already lost all of his patience.

He was serious about barging inside himself if Gwendolyn was still not going out.

Instantly, Gwendolyn got up and said, “No. I'm coming down right now.”

Then, she hung up the phone and put it inside her pocket. Carefully, she opened the door and poked her head out to look.

She and her three children lived on the second floor while Camille was on the third. She looked down at her feet and decided to carry her shoes in her hand since she would not make a sound in bare feet.

Fortunately, there was a thermostat in the house. Thus, it was not cold at all.

They also had a floor heating system, so it felt warm even when she walked on the floor barefoot.

Gwendolyn walked out of the door cautiously and headed toward the stairs.

At that point, she began to feel exhausted because she felt like a thief going about in the house. Suddenly, the door opened when she arrived at her sons' room.

Gwendolyn was surprised as Justin and Julian looked at her with slightly widened eyes. Then, she noticed the glass in their hand and realized they were going downstairs for a drink.

The three went upstairs after that, and Gwendolyn had no choice but to go for another shower after all that sweating.

As soon as she opened the door to her room, she noticed the man sitting on the bed. Similarly, he looked up at her as soon as she stepped in.

Gwendolyn almost cried out in shock as she was surprised by how a man got onto her bed.

However, she was relieved when she recognized that the handsome face belonged to Patrick and quickly shut the door behind her. She even locked it.

"How did you get up here?"

"Through the window," Patrick replied coldly.

Gwendolyn went over and sat down on the bed in exhaustion. She smiled as her body relaxed once she sat.

“You've got quite some moves, Mr. Lowen.”

Meanwhile, Patrick smelled the covers on her bed. It was full of her scent, and he thought of how enjoyable it would be to sleep in that bed.

“You finished exercising?” he asked.

It turned out that he searched the entire house when he came in and did not see her.

Then, he found her exercising with the two kids in the gym. Thus, he returned to her room and waited for her as he lay on the bed.

Patrick sat up and rubbed his face before he turned to the boys.

"I really love your mommy. Believe me. I'll never let her feel wronged again."

Justin and Julian turned their gaze to Patrick at his words. Then, Justin said coldly, "We'll believe you if you marry our mommy."

Patrick's expression changed at the mention of marriage. It turned out that he was planning on keeping the relationship a secret from Hector.

After all, Hector was not well. Thus, Patrick worried that something would happen to Hector in a fit of rage.

He dared not think about it too much, but he would not allow anything to happen to his grandfather.

However, Justin and Julian scoffed when they saw his hesitation.

"Don't mess with her if you can't marry her. She cannot afford to play games with you."

The boys thought that their mother was too naïve and kind. They even assumed that she had no idea about the affairs between a man and a woman.

Similarly, Gwendolyn was also stunned by Patrick's response. She turned to look at him as she wondered if he really never thought of marrying her.

Felicia leaned on her mother's shoulder and said, "That's great, Mom. I'll go and change right now. Let me go and see Uncle Gregory with you."

It turned out that Felicia's uncle was a hooligan, and the entire Dannings family avoided him like the plague.

Her mother was the only one who was still in contact with him, and they were pretty close.

Felicia knew why. It was because her uncle brought some men with him to reason with Felicia's father and forced him to marry her mother when Candace was pregnant with her.

Thus, Candace had always been grateful to him for that.

It was the same reason that Candace would give Felicia's uncle money without hesitation whenever he asked.

Felicia used to think her mom was a fool for being nice to her uncle. After all, it was best to stay as far as possible from a greedy man like him.

However, she realized now that her mother must have foresight in things. As it seemed, they could get her uncle to do the dangerous stuff, which would be good for the mother and daughter. After all, if one were to look into it, her uncle would be the one at fault.

At that point, Felicia had already planned out the whole thing in her mind. She thought of giving her uncle a large sum of money if he could carry out the task successfully.

After all, Felicia was not short of money. The thing she lacked was an identity, one that could make her stand out.

Ultimately, she would have anything within her reach once

At that moment, Candace looked at the woman who followed into the living room and said coldly, "Get this woman out."

Candace said that since she did not want an outsider to be in the room as they were about to talk about murdering someone. There was no way she would risk leaving a potential threat toward her.

However, the woman was furious when she heard Candace's words. She could not believe that an old and ugly woman like Candace would try to steal her man.

Even though Candace was rich, the woman believed that Gregory would not kick her out.

Thus, she went over to Gregory and leaned against him.

"Gregory, I don't want to leave. Didn't you say you love me?"

However, Gregory was unbothered now that he had money. He pushed her away and said, "Go. Don't bother me. Hurry up and get out."

The woman clenched her teeth and refused to give up as she continued, "Gregory, I don't want to."

Annoyed, Gregory dragged her by the arm, threw her outside, and shut the door behind him.

The woman started crying at the door when that happened. "Gregory, you son of a b*tch. How dare you toss me out like trash once you're done with me. You didn't even pay me!"

Yet, no one bothered themselves with her as Gregory went back to the living room.

Alice noticed Gwendolyn's blushing face. She had clearly seen Patrick attempting to kiss the woman.

Then, the old lady realized that she had arrived at the office at an inappropriate time. Alice would not have disturbed the two of them if she had gone there later.

Holding Gwendolyn's hand, Alice smiled happily.

“Gwen, it's been a long time since you last paid me a visit. I've missed you.”

Meanwhile, Gwendolyn sat next to her on the couch. Rosalie was grinning sweetly as well.

“Gwen.”

Seeing this, the other woman gently nodded. Every time she met Rosalie, the latter would smile at her. She seemed harmless and cute!

“Old Mrs. Lowen and Ms. Chavez, let me make some coffee for both of you.”

As Gwendolyn knew that Alice liked to drink coffee, she rose and walked toward the entrance, intending to make a cup of coffee for her.

In the meantime, Patrick was seated at his office desk. He received a call and signed a few documents. Thereafter, he got up and approached Alice.

Patrick glanced at his cup of coffee, then he picked it up and grinned slightly.

A faint smirk flashed across his handsome face. He leaned closer to Gwendolyn and whispered in her ear, "Gwen, wait for me after you get off from work. Let's have a date!"

Gwendolyn's eyes were filled with happiness after she heard his words. She had fantasized about a date with her beloved before.

Finally, she could experience what it felt like. Gwendolyn nodded at Patrick smilingly.

Then, she walked into the office, while Patrick walked out of the office.

Gwendolyn placed the cups in front of the two women. "Old Mrs. Lowen, Ms. Chavez, please have some coffee."

When Alice noticed that Gwendolyn was about to leave, she called her out.

“Gwen, have a seat. I've bought some strawberry cake for you. I know that it's your favorite food. Also, I've ordered extra so you can bring it back for Juliette and the other children.”

Gwendolyn glanced at the two boxes on the coffee table. Indeed, there were a lot of desserts in there.

Thus, she beamed and thanked her. “Thank you, Old Mrs. Lowen. Juliette and the rest of my children will be overjoyed to receive these.”

Gwendolyn only headed back to the office after seeing off Alice and Rosalie.

She was outside the office when she heard the other secretaries talking among themselves.

“Did you see that? That was the third daughter of the Chavez family. Her grandmother and Old Mrs. Lowen are best friends, and as the rumor goes, that young lady is the one who'll actually be Mr. Lowen's future wife.”

“She looks rather young, but she's quite cute. She and Mr. Lowen would be a good match.”

“Then what about Ms. Ashton? Is Mr. Lowen really planning to keep her as his mistress?”

At that, they burst into laughter. To them, Gwendolyn was just someone who had managed to use her beauty to win Patrick's favor temporarily.

She couldn't compare to Felicia, and she definitely couldn't hold a candle to Rosalie.

Nonetheless, Gwendolyn was not the least bit bothered by their nasty remarks. She used to think that way too, but Patrick had told her he'd stay by her side forever. She had to trust him.

She strode into the office, her heels clicking on the floor so loudly that it startled the women gathered in the cubicle. They dashed back to their seats, not daring to say anything more.

Gwendolyn no longer tried to wrest free and let him hold her hand as they walked out of the office.

Amber and Liam were still outside, and they subconsciously took a step backward when they saw the couple walk out while holding hands.

"Mr. Lowen," they said in unison before greeting Gwendolyn. "Ms. Ashton."

Once again, Gwendolyn felt the urge to withdraw her hand. Yet, Patrick refused to loosen his grip.

A hint of embarrassment crept across her face. After all, they were still her colleagues. She would be lying if she said she didn't feel awkward after being seen holding hands with Patrick so openly.

"The two of you should call it a day, too," Patrick responded calmly.

Still holding Gwendolyn's hand, he led her past them and headed straight for the private elevator reserved for the CEO's use.

Liam hurried after them, saying, "Mr. Lowen, we'll send you home."

"All of you are to get off work now. There's no need to follow me," Patrick answered coldly.

Usually, Liam and a few bodyguards would leave with Patrick after work to ensure his safety.
