Super CEO Daddy

Chapter 361

Gwendolyn was hearing about the contract for the first time. Surprise then flashed in her eyes as realization finally dawned on her.

Felicia couldn't stop shaking her head when she heard his declaration. Tears kept flowing down her cheeks too.

"But I have fallen for you, Patrick. I love you. I really do."

Felicia sobbed miserably as pain and misery took over her heart.

Seeing her daughter's condition, Candace rushed to embrace her.

"Fel, how could you be so stupid? He has never taken you seriously. You must forget about him."

However, after hearing the advice, Felicia looked at Patrick greedily and screamed, "No, Mom. I will not forget about him. I love him very much!"

Gwendolyn was deeply irritated by her stepsister. She couldn't help glowering at the latter while being impressed with her shamelessness.

Didn't Patrick say they merely have a contract between them? Honestly, she can't even be considered his ex-girlfriend. How could she be so shameless and pronounce her love for him?

At that moment, Gwendolyn could feel jealousy inside her. Though she knew many women would be attracted to Patrick, it didn't mean she would be fine with seeing one pronouncing her love for him so loudly.

Upon hearing her declaration, Zachary lifted his voice a pitch higher. "That's enough! Do you think you haven't disgraced yourself enough? We're going home now."

Just then, Candace's phone rang. Blood immediately drained from her face after she answered it.

Patrick took a look at the desserts on the table and took a piece of strawberry cake. He then dug a full spoon of it and put it in his mouth.

It was sweet and tasty. However, Patrick's gaze was on the woman not far from him the entire time.

The smile on her never faded as she ate the cake. The gaze on her three children was soft and full of the halo of motherly love. It was magnificent, and Patrick was fully absorbed in it.

After seeing such a scene before him, Liam murmured, “Happiness will surround the family whenever they spend time together. It will be nice if those children are Mr. Lowen's.”

If they are his children, Mr. Lowen will be able to hang out with them. Leaving that aside, I have to admit that the three children and Mr. Lowen will look good together, especially the two boys. They do share some of Mr. Lowen's features.

However, Liam kept the thought to himself as he didn't dare to say it out loud.

After all, a man like his boss would know pretty well if they had children. He decided that, as a subordinate, he shouldn't worry too much about his boss' private life.

At the same moment, Gwendolyn turned to look at Patrick too. Her eyes glimmered with delight as the two stared at each other intensely.

Patrick's expression slightly lit up too. Finally, she remembers me.

Meanwhile, Zayden was sitting on the hospital bed alone inside the ward. He looked at the clear blue skies through the window and sighed softly.

It seemed that his eyesight was getting better that day, but he wasn't happy about it since he hoped he could stay blind.

Gwendolyn then returned to her children's side. After making sure they had gotten everything they needed, she decided to ask Patrick to send them home while she rushed to the hospital.

With such thought in mind, she approached Patrick, who still had the tiny shoes in his hand. She found it funny when she noticed the immense difference in size between him and the shoes.

Patrick was massive, and the shoes for newly born babies were exceptionally tiny. When he held them in his hand, they seemed like toys instead.

Patrick then shifted his gaze to the shoes in his hand after looking at her smile and asked, "Are these for newly born babies?"

Since he didn't have the experience of being a father, he was curious about it.

Gwendolyn nodded. "Yes. Juliette wore these tiny shoes when she was newly born. As for Julian and Justin, their feet were slightly bigger then. So they had shoes with a larger size."

She pointed at the shoes with a size bigger when she explained it to Patrick. At that instant, she was brought back in time when she had just become a mother and the three children were hatchlings waiting for food.

If it weren't for Zayden's help back then, she wouldn't have made it to today.

That was why she felt horrible when she thought about his eyes. She could only hope that he could get better soon.

Patrick then reached out to take the shoes with a size bigger. Patrick was a stranger to the world involving tiny items.

Seeing Patrick acting like a curious child, the smile on her face grew wider.

How could she call him Daddy after seeing Mommy kiss him? Juliette is not being helpful and is going against our plan.

When Juliette heard her brother, she widened her eyes to stare at her two brothers and pouted.

"Don't you two want a daddy too? Giselle called me a stray kid last time. I don't want to be a stray kid!"

She then gripped Patrick's hand tightly and said, "Gwen was the one who attended the sports event every year. She always worked hard but could never win against those who had their Mommies and Daddies. Are you two willing to let that happen every time?"

It seemed that Juliette was trying to seek solace by blurting out all the aggrieves she felt.

After hearing what she said, Patrick thought of Gwendolyn and the difficulties she had to go through to raise the three children.

Though she could satisfy them monetarily, she could never give them a father's love.

The light in Julian and Justin's eyes dimmed when they heard their sister's rant. They'd been through the same thing, but it didn't bother them as much.

However, Juliette was different. She was a sensitive girl, and her heart was not as strong as theirs. That was why she needed more love.

Seeing that the two couldn't respond to her complaints, Juliette placed her face on the man's hand and said, "I like him, so I want him to be our daddy."

Julian and Justin merely looked at her expressionlessly and remained silent.

Chapter 365

Gwendolyn drove to the hospital. When she arrived at Zayden's ward, she saw his lonely figure seated on the bed. His despondent appearance made one feel uncomfortable when looking at him.

Hearing her footsteps, Zayden yelled, “Didn't I tell all of you to go away? Don't bother me!”

The housekeeper had told her earlier on that the food packet was situated on the side table in front of the couch. Thereafter, Gwendolyn ignored Zayden.

Then, the woman approached the short table and took the food packet. She brought it to Zayden.

“Zayden, it's time to eat.”

Her voice was full of laughter. It gave one a familiar feeling and was extremely sweet.

Flinching, Zayden replied, “Why're you here? I don't need anyone's pity.”

Meanwhile, Gwendolyn set the table and maintained her smile.

“I won't leave you, nor would I pity you. Do eat.”

After that, Zayden wanted to push the food on the table away. Subsequently, Gwendolyn grabbed Zayden's hands.

“Zayden, I don't pity you. You don't need my compassion. Your family and I care about you deeply and wish for your recovery. You're very blessed!”

In the meantime, Zayden's eyes were lifeless and dazed. Feeling the warmth in Gwendolyn's palms, he abruptly chuckled coldly.

Subsequently, Gwendolyn paused in her actions. Her eyes darkened. Mrs. Surrington always treats me like this.

Raising her eyes, the woman replied, “Mrs. Surrington, didn't you tell me that I should repay Zayden's kindness now? You don't have to pay me.”

After that, Gwendolyn walked toward the counter and began peeling the fruits with a knife. Afterward, she cut them up.

Angeline followed after Gwendolyn. As she was very precise in her actions, the former knew that she did not have an easy life.

Since young, Angeline had not done any housework. Thus, she wanted to have a daughter-in-law who was from a rich family. Obviously, the woman looked down on Gwendolyn, who waited on others.

“You have to accept it.”

If not, Zay will certainly assume that Gwendolyn took care of him sincerely. Then, he won't forget her that easily.

Sighing, Gwendolyn responded, “All right!”

She knew Angeline for a long time, so she understood the other woman's temperament perfectly. If Gwendolyn did not agree to what she said, Angeline would continue pestering her.

I guess I'll accept it so Angeline will be at ease.

Following that, Angeline was contented. “Cut more fruits. I didn't eat dinner today, so I'll eat some fruits to satisfy my hunger.”

Chapter 367

Zayden remained silent. It was too awkward for the mother and son to be interacting like this, so Gwendolyn said, "Zayden, it's getting late, and I should get going now. My three kids are still waiting for me at home."

Zayden did adore her three children, and she knew it would be a concern for him if he knew the kids were left alone at home.

"Sure, go ahead!"

Gwendolyn took another glance at Angeline, who still had a gloomy expression and looked sad.

She hated seeing Zayden and Angeline like this too. Similarly, she believed Julian and Justin would also break her heart if they went against her words like that after becoming adults.

As a mother, she could understand Angeline's feelings very well.

"Mrs. Surrington, I'll take my leave then."

Before leaving, she whispered to Zayden, "Make sure you talk things out with your mother. Don't leave things hanging just like that."

Gwendolyn left after taking her bag. Angeline asked Zayden, "What did she tell you? I'm sure she was speaking ill of me."

Zayden sighed. "Mom, why are you so against Gwen? She's from a noble family too, but her father cheated on her mother with another woman, which was why she ended up living a miserable life."

Patrick was distracted after hearing that. He moved his gaze away from the manual and to her instead.

Seeing this, Julian curled up his lips. It was wise of Justin to distract the enemy with just one move. Patrick would never get to defeat them now that he was distracted.

Gwendolyn smiled wryly and explained, "I only dropped by to visit him on my way back. It's not intentional. You have to trust me."

She was almost losing her mind. It was not until now that she had learned the lesson that one should not be lying around in their lives, or it would be exhausting trying to come up with different excuses to cover up that one lie.

Moreover, it was even humiliating when her kids were the ones who exposed her lies.

Right then, Patrick was no longer interested in playing Lego. Instead, he stared at her, waiting for her to explain herself further.

He could not accept what she had just said.

Feeling uneasy under his stare, Gwendolyn had no choice but to surrender. "I'm sorry. Zayden has some issues with his vision, and he can no longer see anything. He's in a terrible state, and he refuses to eat anything. I only want him to get better."

No one else would understand what Zayden meant to her.

Patrick pursed his lips. "What does it have to do with you that he can no longer see anything?"

It turned out that Gwendolyn was away to visit Zayden alone. She might even have fed him during her visit.

Chapter 369

Gwendolyn did not have a restful slumber, for Patrick's scowl haunted her dreams throughout the night.
She knew he was angry, but she did not know how to pacify him.

Gwendolyn glanced at the clock when she woke up and realized it was half-past six in the morning. So early!

She sat up and had no desire to sleep again. Looking out of the window, she discovered that it was still dark outside, and the sun had not risen.

“Patrick, you're such a pain!” she murmured.

Indeed, people who were in love were idiots. Gwendolyn felt that she was one of them.

She was perfectly aware that Patrick was oblivious to her current situation. In spite of that, she could not sleep well and had no appetite.

A chill ran down Gwendolyn's spine when she remembered his expression prior to his departure. Patrick was really terrifying when he got angry, and she dared not approach him as a result.

After getting out of bed, Gwendolyn got ready to head to his house and make breakfast for him. By doing so, she could probably placate him.

At any rate, she had decided to comply with all of his wishes on that day in order to ask for his forgiveness.

Gwendolyn washed up and applied light makeup on her face. She selected an outfit that seemed professional yet sexy.

Patrick leaned against the headboard. His splitting headache made him feel immensely uncomfortable. As a result, he could neither think properly nor calm down.

His sharp eyebrows were locked in a tight frown, and his voice sounded low and husky.

"It's normal, Pat. After all, the bullet is still inside, and it's normal for you to feel pain. You don't have to worry as long as the pain subsides after you get out of bed. If the pain doesn't go away, you've got to come to the hospital at once," Kevin explained.

He felt worried, too. Even if Patrick did feel unwell and came to the hospital, the doctors dared not operate on him.

Kevin sighed. He had to find a way to cure Patrick as soon as possible.

Patrick hung up, shut his eyes, and rested for a moment.

Once the pain had subsided, he got out of bed to wash up. When he came downstairs, he saw the food on the dining table and a note that read: Patrick, I've made you breakfast. The oatmeal porridge is in the pot. Enjoy! Gwen.

Patrick glanced at the side dishes on the table. They were his favorites. Then, he looked at the pot on the countertop. Soon, a faint smile appeared on his face.

He knew Gwendolyn was trying to pacify him. Why didn't she wait for me to have breakfast together?

Patrick called her, but Gwendolyn did not notice it. She was in the hospital lobby and in a hurry.
