Chapter 541 Stealing A Kiss

Gwendolyn broke into a smile and breathed a sigh of relief when she heard that.

That was when Kevin finally understood why Patrick didn't want them to tell Gwendolyn about it.

Although she tried to act like she didn't care, it was obvious that she still had feelings for him and was worried about him.

One could only imagine how she would react if she found out about Patrick's condition.

If I were Patrick, I probably wouldn't want her to know about my condition either. No man would want to worry his woman like that.

"This won't leave a scar, but you'll have to apply the medication as instructed and keep the wound dry at all times. You'll make a full recovery if you keep it up for ten days," the doctor said after stepping out of the examination room.

"Got it! Thank you!" Gwendolyn replied with a nod.

I knew I was overthinking it. This doctor may be young and beautiful, but she is still a professional. They don't care how handsome or ugly a man looks. To them, all patients are nothing but a bag of organs. I can't believe I actually got jealous back there!

Gwendolyn felt her heart fill up with a sweet sensation when she gave him a quick peck on the lips.

Just as a thief wouldn't stick around after stealing a person's belongings, she got ready to leave immediately after stealing a kiss.

To her surprise, Patrick's eyes shot open when he felt the familiar warmth of her lips on his. He then grabbed the back of her head and pulled her in for a deep and passionate kiss.

He even stuck his tongue out and sucked her tongue into his mouth.

Gwendolyn was on the verge of losing her mind at that point. He was kissing her incredibly forcefully and aggressively.

She tried to put up a struggle at first, but went weak and gave in after a while.

It wasn't until he got on top of her that she snapped out of it and realized she was "in danger."

Patrick is being a lot more domineering and passionate than usual...

"Yeah, I do," Gwendolyn replied firmly with a sweet smile and tightened her grip on his waist.

Having kept her grandfather company all day and looking after Zayden, she was a little tired and fell asleep shortly after nuzzling against his shoulder.

For some reason, being around him filled her heart with a sense of security.

There was a hint of displeasure in Patrick's eyes when he saw how quickly she had fallen asleep.

There are a lot of things I want to tell her but I guess it'll have to wait till next time...

He then pulled the blanket over her shoulder and hugged her tightly in his arms.

Gwendolyn was woken up by the incessant ringing of her phone the next day.

By the time she sleepily opened her eyes, she heard Patrick saying in a deep voice, "I'm afraid she's asleep at the moment."

His voice was deeper than usual as he had just woken up, which made him sound a lot sexier.

Patrick then cradled her in his arms and gave her a gentle kiss on the cheek.

As he couldn't care less about staying at the hospital, he simply nodded without saying anything in

I'm just glad I can have the surgery done within a month. Otherwise, I'd...

Unable to bring himself to think about it any further, Patrick shot Felicia a cold glare and asked, “Didn't I tell you not to show yourself in front of me again?”

Felicia pursed her lips as she replied, “I was worried about you, Patrick.”

She sounded as innocent as a lamb, which was a trick she had learned from those books she read.

“Pat, how could you talk to Fel like that? She will soon become your fiancée, and eventually, your wife and the mother of your children!”

Hector got a little impatient at the thought of having great-grandchildren and continued, “You know what? Why don't you two just skip the engagement part and get married straight away? I'm not getting any younger, and those great-grandkids aren't going to make themselves!”

Lucy smiled faintly. "I'd never considered marrying into the Gomez family. At least I won't deign to be with somebody who doesn't want me, unlike some people."

"You..."

Felicia stamped her feet in anger.

Patrick's attitude toward me is something I can never allow to reach another pair of ears, or I'm going to be a laughingstock. They are all waiting to see me fail. No matter what it takes, I will be the one to marry Patrick.

Without another word, she made to enter the elevator but found the doors shut. She stabbed the down button, yet the elevator descended with its doors remaining firmly shut.

Felicia cursed. "Godd'mn Gwendolyn for not waiting for me."

She thought Gwendolyn closed the doors on purpose to make her wait for another elevator.

Lucy laughed. "Have fun waiting, Ms. Felicia."

Then, she turned to head to the ward.

Zachariah could not resist another glance at Gwendolyn hearing those words.

Over her frequent visits to the Lowen residence, he thought she was rather charismatic and had a kind face.

It looks like she is actually kind-hearted too.

"It was Old Mr. Lowen who requested your presence in the car, Ms. Ashton. It should be all right."

Only then did Gwendolyn nod and marched toward the parked car while Zachariah held the umbrella over her. "Thank you," she said to Zachariah upon getting in.

"My pleasure, Ms. Ashton."

Zachariah shut the door after her. He had formed a favorable impression of her character from how she was courteous even with a helper like him.

Unlike Felicia, who only shows respect to Old Mr. Lowen but gives all the helpers the cold shoulder, and even calls us derogatory names.

When Zachariah came at that thought, he mused to himself.

Why doesn't Old Mr. Lowen choose this one instead?

Gwendolyn could not resist a giggle seeing the two elderly men bickering.

Noticing Hector's empty cup, she refilled it.

Hector glanced at her impassively. If not for this girl's meddling, I might be able to hold my great-grandchild in my arms in a matter of months instead of a year.

The more he thought about it, the more irritated he became.

His expression, too, reflected his mood.

"The reason for my invitation tonight is to have a chat with you, Ms. Ashton."

"Though the Lowen family cannot hope to compare with the Ashton family, a prodigious family, we Lowens too, have had several decades of eminence. Though the Lowen family has been regaining its glory, Pat is still not worthy of you, the eldest daughter of the Ashton family. Thus, he can only marry Ms. Felicia. I hope you can understand."

Gwendolyn set down the intricate mug and blinked.

Nate smiled at Gwendolyn when she emerged from the private room.

"Lowen has always been like that, young lady. Don't take it to heart. I have another grandson. Why don't I introduce you to him instead?"

Nate noticed how beautiful and sweet she was.

Being a good judge of character, I can tell she's a decent girl. Lowen might think little other, but not me!

Gwendolyn laughed. "Thank you for your consoling words, sir, but I am not upset."

After bidding Nate farewell, she exited the cafe and awaited a cab at the entrance.

Suddenly, her phone rang.

“Zayden,” she answered.

“Were you with Patrick last night, Gwen?”

He called that morning, but Patrick answered the phone and told him she was still asleep. Zayden had been so furious that he thrashed his study.

“I summoned you to ask if the doctor had taken a look at Mr. Surrington's injury.”

Watch what you say.

Suzanne shook her head. “No. Mr. Surrington did not allow me to get the doctor. He was worried Mrs. Surrington would be notified, which would cause her to worry.”

Gwendolyn nodded. "Bring me the first-aid kit."

After helping Zayden to sit up by the bed, she undid the bandage on his hand.

Zayden grabbed her hand. "You said yes to my proposal, Gwen. That means you are my fiancée. I hope you will be true to me."

His tone sounded bleak with hints of sadness.

His words reminded Gwendolyn of the night before. She had slept deeply in Patrick's arms.

Rosalie noticed the odd look he had in his eyes when he saw the ring. Patrick is normally an emotionless guy. However, his expression changed dramatically when he saw the ring. I bet he knows about this ring.

With that in mind, she quickly hid the ring with her shirt. Besides, she avoided the topic because she was afraid of saying something wrong.

"Pat, please have a look at our tender!" She rose to her feet and averted her gaze.

Yet, Patrick was still staring at her. Since he had never looked at Rosalie that way, she knew it had something to do with the ring.

Seeing that, she decided to thoroughly investigate the matter.

Not only would Patrick usually not look through tenders, but that was also not within a CEO's job scope. I don't get it. How did that ring end up with Rosalie?

Nevertheless, Patrick went through the tender patiently and said, "It looks rather promising. Good luck!"

By then, Rosalie had already recomposed herself, so she flashed Patrick a faint smile and replied, "Thank you for your encouragement, Pat. We won't disappoint you."
