

After the Divorce, CEO Realizes He's the Stand-In Lover By Madison King

Chapter 16 Totally different from Julian

"Natalie, I haven't told you that before you married Julian, he had a brother..."

"So, he was like this when he was a child."

His smile was so warm, straightforward and sincere.

He was totally different from Julian.

Linda thought that what Natalie said was Julian. She pointed at Julian in the photo and smiled kindly. "Yes, he has been so cold since childhood. He hasn't changed at all."

She then turned to look at Henry in the photo and said, "This is Julian's brother, Henry."

"Henry was talented and excellent since he was a child. Mr. Graham has always been proud of Henry, so he has neglected Julian."

"Julian grew up under the shadow of Henry, and he was lonely. Especially after Henry left, he was getting worse and worse."

With tears in her eyes, Linda held Natalie's hand slowly.

"In fact, as his mother, I have responsibilities for this. If I had cared more about him at that time, he wouldn't have become so cold and indifferent..."

Natalie looked at the photo quietly. She didn't hear what Linda said, and her attention was all attracted by Henry when he was a child in the photo.

Her mind began to wander.

Some memories that she had deliberately forgotten flooded in. It suddenly occurred to her why Henry had gone abroad that year.

She had asked him why he went abroad before.

He smiled and said that it was G o d 's guidance to let him meet her abroad.

Now she knew.

It was because he didn't want to bother Julian.

If he continued to stay at home, his father would treat Julian worse, and Julian would become more and more isolated.

Henry, you are so stu pid.

Why did you always sacrifice yourself silently?

Not noticing Natalie's distraction, Linda continued, "I didn't want to mention it, but I don't want you to miss it.

You love Julian so much. Don't divorce"

"You are the one that Julian proposed to marry. You must be very special to him. He is so lonely that he needs a person like you to accompany him."

Coming out of her memory, Natalie looked at the tearful Linda in front of her. Although she didn't want to make Linda sad, she still made up her mind and said with difficulty, "Aunt, I will find a better man."

Julian had found his Mrs. Graham, hadn't he? Niki would accompany him.

As for the annoying character he had developed from an early age, let Niki bear it!

Although Julian's pain brought by the original family was heartbreaking, she didn't want to be kidnapped by morality. His pain should be healed by the person who loved him.

Not her.

Linda wanted to say something, but didn't.

The two of them kept silent for a long time.

The reason why Natalie came to the appointment was to say goodbye to Linda.

She broke the silence and asked, "Auntie, how are you feeling recently?"

Since the day Henry left, Linda had been seriously ill, and she had been looking for famous doctors all over the world, but did not recover.

The main reason why Natalie decided to marry Julian was to take care of Linda. She wanted to help Henry take care of his mother.

Linda's illness was a heartache, a mental one.

Natalie thought she knew well about medicine. After all, the Spears family had some attainments in medical treatment when they were kids. She had tried her best to treat Linda in the past three years, and before she married Julian, she had specially developed a special medicine for Linda.

So, her condition finally stabilized.

"I'm in good health now. I rarely have nightmares recently," Linda replied softly.

It seemed that Natalie was determined to divorce. So, Linda couldn't say anything more. She knew that it was all Julian's fault.

She had tried her best to fight for Julian. There was no regret, and it could be considered that she was not destined to have such a good daughter-in-law.

"That's good. I'm afraid that you lack medicine, so I've brought you a few bottles. Remember to take them. when you're not feeling well." Natalie took out her own medicine from her bag and handed it to Linda.

After taking the phone call yesterday, she worked overtime to improve the medicine, which was better than the version she developed three years ago. It was more suitable for Linda's condition. After she left the Graham family, she couldn't have to pay attention to Linda's illness all the time. When there was really something wrong she could cope with it

Linda took the medicine and said, "I'm relieved to take it."

"I've taken all the medicine. If you want a divorce with Julian, I'm too embarrassed to ask you for it," said Linda apologetically.

"Auntie, although I have divorced, you can contact me at any time if you are not feeling well."

Linda nodded repeatedly. "We are really sorry for you."

After the meal, Natalie stood at the door of the restaurant and watched Linda leave by car.

After a long time, the wind blew her hair. She stood still and murmured, “Aunt, it’s my fault. I’m sorry for

Henry.”
