

Chapter 12 I HATE YOU ALL

SUZIE'S POV

I stirred, my eyes fluttering open. I could feel large arms wrapped around me and when I looked up, I saw Blair, his eyes forward as he carried me through the forest. I instantly turned beet red as memories of what we did.

I could not believe everything that had happened. The way I had given into my desire was so unlike me, but I could not describe how much I was being pulled to him. My senses had been completely taken over and I let myself drown in the pleasure he gave me.

And despite my hate for him, I still enjoyed it.

I flushed some more, burying my head in his chest.

“Are you up princess?”

“Prince-“

I flushed even further. Blair chuckled, his grip on me tightened. It took me a while to realize that we were both naked.

“Um, Blair, we’re n-naked.”

“Well yeah. We were both in our wolf form and we transformed.”

I raised an eyebrow. “Is that why we were naked?”

“Yeah,” He looked down at me. “You didn’t know that ?”

I shook my head.

He sighed. “That explains why you were out there all naked. Don’t worry, we’ll be at the pack house soon.”

I nodded and he kept walking down the forest. The pack house came into view after a few minutes of walking. Blair walked through the back, a secluded area where no one was and I was grateful for that.

He took me up the stairs and as we walked down the hallway, right in front of my room door, was Felix, who was pacing around, his face filled with worry. Once he noticed our presence, his head snapped to us and in an instant his eyes lit up with rage.

“Where the fuck were you and why are you with her, and-“

He looked at our bodies and the anger in his eyes increased.

“Why the hell are you both naked?”

Felix reached out and grabbed my hand. “Give her to me, I’ll take her to the room.”

Blair grabbed on to me tighter and pushed Felix away harshly.

“Don’t you fucking touch her,” He growled. “You seem to have forgotten that she doesn’t only belong to you now, she’s OUR mate. I brought her here, and I’m going to take her to the room.”

“Blair, you bastard,” Felix barked.

I could feel the tension escalating and I couldn’t take it anymore. I pushed Blair away, my feet touching the ground.

“You both should just leave me alone!” I yelled and ran into my room, slamming the door shut.

I let out a sigh of relief. I could not stand the way they were both acting. It seemed weird that they would fight over me, but then again, it made me slightly happy, because them fighting over me, means that they care about me.

I immediately stepped into the bathroom, hopping Inyo the shower and enjoying the warm water as it cascaded down my skin. I stood under the shower for a long time before hopping out of it and wrapping myself in a towel.

I approached the wardrobe and picked out a simple floral dress from it. The brothers had prepared a selection of clothes for me, since I came here with nothing. I slipped the clothes on, and as began to put my hair in a bun, I heard a knock on the door.

Curiosity took over and I walked over to the door, swinging it open. Right in front of me was Asher, Blair, Roy and Felix.

“What do you want?” I hissed, already irritated that they didn’t want to give me space.

“I figured it would be best to fill you in on some things about the pack, since you would be staying here for a while.”

I mulled over his words for a bit and nodded. It seemed like a good idea and I was a bit curious.

“Lets talk as we walk then?”

I folded my arms. “And why should I take a walk with you all? You do know I despise you, right?”

Asher licked his lips as he tried to find words.

“Don’t worry, we’ll make it worth your time,” Blair chimed in.

I glared at each of them and rolled my eyes. “Fine, you better make it worth my time.”

I stepped out of my room and we all began to walk down the hallway.

“So me and my brothers oversee most of the affairs in the pack,” Asher began. “We all have different roles and each role helps to maintain stability in the pack.”

“And?”

“I am in charge of the internal affairs of the pack,” He continued. “Blair is in charge of training the wolf warriors and overseeing border patrol. While Felix and Roy here are left to attend to the social aspects, like going to school and being social, as they deal with diplomacy between our pack and other wolf packs.”

I listened to his words as I walked in front of them. They all desperately tried to keep up with me as they trailed behind me. We kept walking and soon enough, we were out of the pack house. The whole place was packed with people walking around. Soldiers, women and their children, young girls, the whole place was littered.

We passed by a group of girls and they all perked up and smiled at the brothers.

“Hello!” They chirped.

The brothers nodded in response. As they walked by us, I instantly noticed how much their bodies looked toned and sexy. But it wasn’t just them, even the other women that walked by, the mothers, all of them looked fit and toned.

“The women...” I said, “Do they train too?” I asked, shooting a glance at Asher.

Asher nodded. “We have a special training for female wolves and each of them have the opportunity to train and learn.”

I cocked an eyebrow. “Aren’t female wolves relatively weaker?”

Blair chuckled. “Not in our pack. Female werewolves still have a role in the battle field. Most of them use the bow and arrow, and act as support.”

I nodded, my eyes fixed on a woman in awe.

“We also want everyone in the pack to be trained to stop anyone from being bullied. We don’t tolerate that after all.” Asher said.

I stopped, my eyes looking at him in disbelief.

“You all are bloody hypocritical, seeing as you bullied me every single day.”

Asher went pale and he could not look at me, or utter a word anymore.

“You’re right Suzie,” Felix sighed. “And we’re really sorry about that again. If you want, we can atone for what we did to you in any way.”

I frowned, waving my hand in the air. “Forget about it. I don’t want to talk about this anymore.

My mood had suddenly went from a ten, to a zero and I was feeling like utter shit. Silence hung in the air, and none of us said a word to each other. Blair and Roy walked over to me and wrapped me in a bear hug.

Blair cleared his throat, breaking the silence as he spoke. “Why don’t we go have lunch at this restaurant? I’m sure you’ll love their food.”

I looked at Blair and scoffed. “And why on earth would you suggest something so horrendous. Eating with all of you would ruin my appetite.”

They all looked at me as if they were desperately trying to find the right words to say.

“Please Suzie, we’ll do anything you want, if you don’t want us to speak, we won’t speak.”

I scoffed. “Don’t get ahead of yourself. The only reason I even followed you out here, was not out of my free will, the mate bond keep drawing me to you. If not for that, got all mean nothing to me.”

Asher went pale. “We promise to take you to the best restaurant, I promise you’ll love the food.”

“Save it, I’m not interested.”

I made a U-turn and began to walk into the pack house. I ignored them as they called out to me, and walked in. I slipped into my room and fell flat on the bed. My eyes went to the ceiling as thoughts swirled around in my head.

Was this how my life was going to be from now on?
