

Chapter 154

When she heard Alyssa's words, Ella's face turned red. She said softly, "I didn't do anything. I just don't think that guy is good. The way he looks at you is sneaky. He doesn't look like he likes you at all. Mr. Hunter looks at you differently."

"Huh?" Alyssa came to her senses. Knowing Ella's good language, she asked, "How many adjectives can you use to describe what Leon's eyes look like when he looks at me?"

Alyssa was a little curious.

What exactly did Leon's eyes look like when he looked at her to others?

She looked at Ella curiously, only to find Ella blushing.

Alyssa had a bad feeling. Ella couldn't be into Leon, could she?

So, she was shy!

But how could that be possible?

She had to ask about this now.

Alyssa pulled Ella, "Ella, we are friends. Leon and I are already married. We are a couple, and we can't be separated."

Ella suddenly panicked and whispered, "What are you thinking? Mr. Hunter is your husband. I just want to say it but feel embarrassed. I feel like the look on your face when you look at Mr. Hunter shows more that you love Mr. Hunter."

"Huh?"

Alyssa froze!

"When you looked at Mr. Hunter, you had a light in your eyes."

Ella told the truth, "I saw the way you looked at Mr. Hunter the other day. You looked as if you were going to eat Mr. Hunter in one bite. That's when I knew you liked Mr. Hunter."

Alyssa blushed when she heard that.

But Ella was telling the truth. She had nothing to say.

Alyssa lowered her head, still feeling unconvinced, "What about the way he looks at me? He doesn't care about me at all?"

"Of course not, I can also see that Mr. Hunter really likes you. His eyes are also full of love for you."

Alyssa smiled.

"But I still think you love Mr. Hunter a little more."

Alyssa's smile froze.

Ella continued, "But as long as you love each other, what does it matter who loves who more! Alyssa, you and Mr. Hunter love each other, and that's all that matters, isn't it?"

Alyssa thought Ella's words made sense.

Ella was right.

She had loved Leon a little more.

But now it was different.

They both loved each other.

And that was good.

Alyssa didn't care about that anymore.

"Alyssa, you told me last time that you often had nightmares at night. Are you better now? Did you still have frequent nightmares? Do you want to go to the hospital? Have you been under too much pressure from studying lately?"

"I'm probably too idle, so I come up with a solution. This solution seems pretty good. I'm in a much better mental state now."

"What solution?"

"I went to work for your cousin's company. I think I'm too idle to think about things. After going to work in your cousin's company, I feel much more fulfilled. Maybe I've adapted to the busy state I was in before. I feel pretty good now."

"Alyssa, can your body stand it? You have to attend classes, prepare for your exams, and work at my cousin's company at the same time. I heard that my cousin is always mean. He is very strict with his subordinates when he works. The most important thing is that you're pregnant now."

Ella naturally knew to protect Alyssa's privacy. When she said the final words, she lowered her voice to the lowest level.

Alyssa knew Ella's good intention. She said, "I had a deal with Hassan. As long as I can get the project done, he doesn't restrict my work hours, so I'm quite free. Don't worry! I know how to handle these things, and I won't tire myself out too much."

"Then I'm relieved, but my cousin really treats you differently. I feel like he's a lot gentler with you. As far as I remember, he's never been this considerate to his subordinates."

Alyssa smiled and didn't say anything. Maybe she had really good luck.

So, she got special care from Hassan.

In this life, she was really lucky. Her friendship with Ella was not broken.

Moreover, her relationship with Leon was getting better and better.

Thinking of this, Alyssa couldn't help but smile.

Ella had no idea what Alyssa was smiling about. She only knew that if they didn't hurry to eat now, the cafeteria would soon run out of food. She hurriedly pulled Alyssa in the direction of the cafeteria and ran.

They had no classes in the afternoon.

Ella and Alyssa went to the library.

There were few people in the library now. It was quiet all around.

Ella was reviewing her English.

Alyssa was studying Sky's case.

Sky was a legitimate dynamic capacity company. Ten years ago, it was split off from the city's water-energy company. For some reason, Sky became independent. After a year of changes, Sky officially started operations. Its chairman and president was Riley King. In the past, there was no water in the backward countryside around A City, so Professor King personally inspected the geography and found a way to bring water.

Also, the most famous development Sky did was "Water Windmill". "Water Windmill" used other green energy to successfully filter the sewage quickly. The most important thing was that this invention provided great convenience to people in remote mountainous areas.

Because of this invention, Sky became famous.

Alyssa spent an hour reading through Sky's infringement case from three years ago.

She learned that the infringing project was called "Hydrodynamic".

She didn't know exactly what "Hydrodynamic" could do. But she didn't understand how a patent that had been unsuccessful three years ago had suddenly been granted. Then, it was accused of infringement.

The most important thing was that the prosecutor seemed to have sufficient evidence.

Riley was a very authoritative professor.

Alyssa had read Riley's history before.

He had received many honors and should not have plagiarized.

If he did plagiarize, then how did he get those previous achievements?

Alyssa searched for two pages of information and quickly found Sky's address. She was going to pay a visit to Riley later.

3:30 PM.

Alyssa arrived at Sky's building.

As soon as she got downstairs, she saw a lot of reporters waiting outside the door.

The reporters looked like they had been waiting for a long time.

They didn't know Alyssa. The receptionist was talking to the reporters, so Alyssa immediately took advantage of the chaos and went upstairs. But when she got upstairs, she realized that there was a steel door upstairs.
