

Chapter 161

Leon sat in the passenger seat and watched Alyssa, who was particularly careful when she first learned to drive.

Now, she drove very steadily. Alyssa wasn't the same as she used to be.

He knew she could actually do everything. Gradually, she would definitely become even better.

She had grown up well and fast. In the meantime, she could take care of herself. He didn't need to worry about her.

Even when she was pregnant, she could take care of herself.

More than ten minutes later, Alyssa sent Leon to Hunter Group.

"I won't bring you food at noon. You need to eat on time."

"You too. Call me in time if anything happens."

"Okay."

Alyssa felt warm.

Nothing would happen to her. Even if something went wrong, she could fix it.

With such a person warming her, she felt like the whole world was warm.

She drove to Citic and upon entering, she saw Hassan sitting in his office.

The door to Hassan's office was open and there was a lot of smoke coming out of it.

Alyssa thought something was on fire and rushed in.

The strong smell of smoke entered her mouth and nose. She immediately coughed uncontrollably.

Hearing her cough, Hassan hurriedly put out the cigarette. He looked up and saw Alyssa, who had turned to leave.

He looked down at his watch. It was only eight o'clock, and she was here. Did all pregnant women get up so early?

He thought that pregnant women were really annoying. But he still turned around and opened the window to ventilate. Smelling his clothes, he thought the smell of tobacco was very strong. So, he simply went to the next room to change his clothes before walking out.

He went out just in time to see Alyssa return with a glass of water. Seeing him, Alyssa frowned.

"Mr. Wood, are you practicing some kind of Kung Fu to get to the universe?"

"If I go to the universe, I'll take you with me. What's the point of not taking you with me?"

Alyssa couldn't help but laugh, "Earth is beautiful, and I don't want to go to the universe. If you think being a god is what you want, then hurry up and go. Don't waste time."

She had to stay on earth and be with Leon!

No one would put their mind on the company like Hassan.

Hassan smiled and asked, "Did you find out anything about Sky?"

"Not yet." Alyssa looked at Hassan and took a sip of water, "Just give me more time! I need time now. You go back to your work first. I'll try to handle my work, okay?"

"You really don't need my help?"

Alyssa shook her head, "Not yet. What's important about this case doesn't seem to be the interest anymore."

"Then what is it?"

"You'll know when the time comes. You just mind your own business. I'm going to do some research."

Hassan suddenly felt uncomfortable. It seemed that she knew something but didn't tell him.

He looked at Alyssa and smiled.

He knew he was right about her. Looking at her confident look, he knew she must have a way.

Hassan turned around and went back to his office to continue his work. Occasionally, he saw the cigarette-stained suit he had put aside, and he frowned slightly. He seemed to care about Alyssa's preferences.

Probably because there were not many interns that he could take so seriously over the years.

Alyssa was kind of a good intern.

His intention was just to get her to stay and work for him!

Hassan suddenly felt that he was like a bad guy in the fairy tale.

However, he never felt he was a good person.

After Hassan left, Alyssa started looking up information.

This time, she focused on Riley, who used to teach at A University, but that was twenty years ago. At that time, Riley should have just graduated with a doctorate and was retained at the school. However, he later went to work for the water department. After working in the water department for two years, he started Sky.

It turned out that he was a teacher at A University. That was good.

Alyssa packed up her things and went to school.

When she got to school, she went to her mentor and asked about Riley.

Alyssa's mentor told her clearly that Riley had worked at A University for a while. However, Riley and she were not in the same office. She didn't know him very well, except that he was quite honest.

However, she had heard that his leaving had something to do with his behavior. She wasn't sure about the specifics of that time because she happened to be pregnant at that time and didn't know what was going on at the school.

Alyssa asked her mentor about who else knew about Riley.

Her mentor asked curiously, "Alyssa, why did you start researching this matter instead of focusing on preparing for the exam?"

Alyssa didn't want to lie and directly said that she was working on the case of Sky.

The mentor laughed at Alyssa's words.

Alyssa was suddenly a little nervous when she saw her mentor smile, "Our school doesn't seem to have a rule that students can't work part-time while they're in school, right?"

She finished and panicked even more. She was also pregnant!

What if it wasn't allowed?

The mentor smiled, "There is indeed no such rule. I'm smiling because I'm happy. I rarely have a student as capable as you. Before, I was against students getting married before graduation, but after seeing a real example, it's not all bad. You are a most positive example. After getting married, you have improved your grades. At the same time, you are still actively involved in your work. However, students like you are still in the minority."

The tutor sighed. After finally getting into college, many students were overwhelmed by love.

Alyssa smiled awkwardly.

After marrying Leon, she did become more mature.

It was also because she was in love with Leon that she had become more mature.

However, the most important thing was not this. Because she had already died once, she knew what was more important.

After saying goodbye to her mentor, Alyssa knew that besides the fact that Riley did teach at A University, she had her mentor's approval.

Alyssa was happy and investigated Riley more actively.

Alyssa wanted to take her chances at the library. She might be able to run into her foreign language professor.

The foreign language professor was about Riley's age. She might be able to ask for some useful information.

Her luck was good. She did run into her foreign language teacher. Unfortunately, she didn't get any useful information.

Instead, she saw the boy who had asked her to deliver the letter yesterday.

She was about to go to him when she saw Ella reading a book right across from him.

When he saw Alyssa, the boy immediately greeted her. He had come early in the morning to help Alyssa take a seat, which he had promised her yesterday.

Ella was also here, which was an accidental gain for him.

But Ella had been reading her book and didn't notice him at all, but she saw Alyssa instead.

Ella stood up and waved at Alyssa. Then she walked to Alyssa.

"There you are. I thought you weren't coming again today. I don't have class until this afternoon." Ella said as she gave Alyssa the notebook in her hand, "This is what I put together yesterday."

Alyssa smiled. She really didn't like to take notes. This was a bad habit she had developed since she was a child.

"Thanks, Ella, do you see that guy sitting under the window? He's the boy who asked me to give you the letter yesterday." Alyssa looked at Ella apologetically, "Yesterday, I accidentally broke the letter and saw its content. But I didn't mean to. Ella, you must forgive me."

Seeing the torn envelope in Alyssa's hand, Ella blushed.

She hadn't seen anything like this before. Alyssa had actually opened the letter.

She was a little curious, but her curiosity was quickly squashed by her shame.

She was not going to read such a thing, so it was better for her not to read it.

Alyssa knew that Ella really didn't have any intention to have a relationship.

Otherwise, she would have stared at the letter long ago.

She turned her head and saw the boy giving her a wink. So she whispered, "Do you want to talk to him personally? I think that boy seems to be serious. He likes you quite a lot. I think it's better for you to settle this kind of thing in person."

"Alyssa, please help me out. I'm really embarrassed."

"Then I'll go with you. Ella, you're an adult. You'll have to face a lot of temptations and choices in the future. I can see that you really don't like that guy. Since you don't like him, then you should say so."

After hearing Alyssa's encouragement, Ella felt that Alyssa's words were quite reasonable.

Even when she was faced with something that wasn't easy to make a decision, she still had to make a choice.

She didn't like making decisions when she was a child, and it showed in her personality that she would put off making decisions. So she did the same thing when she dealt with work.

Alyssa was right. She should face it, not run away from it. Maybe it wasn't as hard as she thought.

Ella nodded and decided to talk to him about it with Alyssa.

She and Alyssa walked to that boy. Seeing them, that boy was so surprised that he stood up and didn't say a word.

Ella was originally quite timid. But now that Alyssa was by her side, she suddenly wasn't as nervous as before. She rejected him directly.

When the boy heard Ella reject him, he was still a little surprised. But looking at Ella's serious look, he believed Ella's words and nodded his head, "I know you may not like me. I've been secretly watching you from afar for a while, but you never even looked at me. I think if you liked me, you would have looked at me. But it's okay. Ella, I've liked you for two years. Can we be friends?"

It was also good to be friends with the girl liked.

Ella was a little embarrassed when she heard the boy's words. But after thinking for a while, she said softly, "I don't think so! However, we are from the same school. We are classmates. If you need my help with anything, you can come to me at any time. I'll help you."

She said these words with good intentions. Her gaze was like the water of the melted mountains and rivers.

The boy looked at Ella's gaze and lowered his head. Ella's meaning was clear enough.

Ella really didn't like him.

Hearing this, the boy finally gave up.

Instead, he now felt less distressed than before, "I see. If I can help you with anything, I will try my best to help you too."

Ella nodded and took Alyssa's hand, "It's getting late. Let's go! It's time for class later."

Alyssa knew Ella was lying.

They had no more classes in the morning, only in the afternoon.

Ella obviously wanted to leave.

Ella, who had always been sincere, could lie too. It turned out that they had both changed.

Alyssa nodded, "Okay, let's go."

They turned around and left together.
