

Chapter 169

"No need. I paid for Citic to find me a company to finance because I want to grow my business. These materials are all about my company, and I know more about my company than you do."

"You're right. You do know more about your company than I do, but you probably don't understand Citic's rules. According to your company's situation, you are not eligible for financing right now. Your company's projects are not large enough to gain a foothold in the market, either in terms of size or in terms of featured products. I recommend you consider expanding your company after you get on a firm footing."

Alyssa made it clear. She didn't want to waste time talking to this overconfident Mr. Reed.

She turned around and left. But as she reached the door, she was stopped by two bodyguards.

Alyssa looked at the two bodyguards in black, "What do you mean?"

"What do I mean? I paid you to help me with my asset appreciation, not to listen to your useless nonsense. Let me be clear with you. Today, you have to help me finance my company. I don't care about the rules. For me, there are no rules, only what I want or don't want."

Hearing Javon's words, Alyssa suddenly laughed.

Hearing Alyssa's laughter, Javon walked up to her and raised his hand to slap her.

But his hand missed and hit the door frame directly.

Alyssa had ducked aside unharmed.

Javon glared at Alyssa, "How dare you!"

"You're the one who's in over your head. According to the scale of Javon Drink, you can hardly even get on your feet now. In the past three years, your company has lost money every year. Three years ago, your products were just brought to the market, and you were accused of infringement. At that time, you paid a lot of money to settle this matter. Do you really think that everyone in this circle has forgotten all the ugly things you have done?"

"What do you mean?"

"With your shoddy past, who would want to work with you?"

Alyssa looked at Javon without any fear. Instead, she stood up straight.

Javon was angry, "You ... nonsense! Sky has been hitting the headlines for days. Even if Sky's chairman Riley infringed, you still helped him, didn't you? At least, I didn't end up like him. If you guys can help him, why can't you help me?"

Alyssa laughed at those words. His company didn't even qualify for financing. Who was he to compare himself to Professor King?

"Say something." Javon hated Alyssa's smile at the moment. She looked like she was taunting him, and even more like she was looking at an ignorant person.

"How about we make a bet?" Alyssa said while looking at Javon's grim face. Suddenly she felt bored. What was she doing betting with someone who had no conscience at all?

But she still said, "Within half a month, Sky's case will be reopened. When the time comes, the result will be announced naturally. Then you will know why Citic helped Sky."

"I don't have time to wait. I give Citic money and Citic has to help me get the financing done. You have no right to turn down a client now. I am your client."

Javon looked at Alyssa with a serious face.

Alyssa still smiled, not panicked. She just felt more and more that Javon wasn't capable of anything at all. No wonder he hadn't made Javon Drink bigger in the past three years.

She turned to leave, but the bodyguards at the door stopped her.

"Get out of my way."

"You messed with Mr. Reed and you still want to leave?"

Alyssa laughed as she raised her hand and squeezed one of the men's shoulders, slamming him directly against the door frame.

The man was wrestled to the ground. He immediately tried to stand up.

But before he could stand up, Alyssa had pushed the table next to him and pinned him between the table and the door, making him unable to move.

The man next to him saw how tough Alyssa was and was instantly scared.

She looked up at the man who was almost dumb with fear and said expressionlessly, "Fuck off!"

The man was instantly scared out of his wits and immediately ran away.

After watching the man leave, Alyssa turned her head to look at Javon, "Mr. Reed, can I go now?"

Javon didn't expect Alyssa to be so strong. She just looked like a delicate little girl. One man was knocked down by her, and another man was scared off by her.

He looked at Alyssa's expressionless face and nodded hurriedly.

Alyssa frowned. He had thought that Javon was just stupid. Now it seemed that he was also a wimp. So Javon Drink was in this mess. This man really sucked.

Alyssa got out of Javon Drink and went to see Hassan.

Hassan frowned at Alyssa's words, "You've offended our client."

"You even take a case from a client like that? Not only will he not benefit you, but he might even discredit you. You want a client like that?"

Hassan frowned.

"Don't tell me that you don't know anything about Javon. You have so many resources. How could you not know about it beforehand? You just did it on purpose!"

"In your opinion, do you want to do this project and help Javon raise money?"

"I've met Javon, and he's a man who's desperate for profit. Hassan, I suggest you work less with this kind of person, so you won't get nothing done and tarnish your reputation. Sky's case will be on its second trial next month. I'll be there with Citic's lawyers. Will you be there?"

Alyssa didn't want to talk about Javon anymore.

She didn't like to repeat. It was enough to get the point across.

"I won't. You said you were going, didn't you?"

"Okay, don't give me any new cases these days. I can assist others."

Alyssa wanted to focus on Sky's project these days. It was less than a week until the first of next month. She wanted to make sure nothing went wrong.

Hassan looked at Alyssa and found another good thing about her.

She was cautious in what she did and understood the priorities.

"I'll go first, then."

"Wait!"

Hassan immediately stood up, "It's almost dinner time. Let me buy you a meal?"

"No, I have to go home." Alyssa smiled at Hassan, "Leon said he'd be home by noon. I'm going home too. We can meet at home."

Hassan looked at Alyssa's back uncomfortably.

He was the boss. He invited her to dinner, which was a sign of respect.

Not only did she turn him down, but she also showed her love for Leon in front of him. Did she think he was easy to bully for not having a girlfriend?

Hassan was angry at the thought, but he couldn't help but go to the window and look at Alyssa's figure. After seeing Alyssa drive away, he returned to his desk.

Hassan quickly got into his work.

Alyssa's investigation was similar to his.

Javon's attempt at financing was out of order.

So without Alyssa saying anything, he would immediately stop working with Javon.

According to his observations, Javon was a bad person, and Alyssa was right on that point.

Thinking about it this way, Hassan felt that Alyssa was not a profit-oriented person.

Otherwise, she would have been in cahoots with Javon by now.

He wanted to make money, but he also had to maintain the harmony of the circle.

In the blink of an eye, it was the day of the trial.

Alyssa arrived at Citic early in the morning and instructed the team of lawyers to bring all the materials. Then she went to Sky to pick up Riley and went to the court together.

10:00 AM.

The second trial between Sky and Venture Corporation regarding the rights of the defendant was officially opened in the court.

After the defense and the investigation and evidence.

The court concluded that Venture Corporation's core technology was different from Sky's.

The first trial was overturned.

The infringement case was not established. The result of the verdict immediately reached the media.

Immediately, Sky became a trending topic and received a free advertising campaign.

Alyssa breathed a sigh of relief and started the next step of its financing program.

In the past few days, Alyssa started to have a slight reaction to pregnancy vomiting, which was most severe in the morning and evening.

Since taking on Riley's case, she had been working around the clock. Although she didn't stay up all night, she was exhausted.

Now, the case was over. She was finally relieved.

She sat in her car and looked out the window.

Suddenly she thought of Leon.

What was he doing now?

Leon had been preparing for the last few days to catch the people who had followed him, too.

He had just finished his work and went home to see Alyssa.

As soon as he entered the house, he heard the low sound of vomiting.

Alyssa heard footsteps and glanced out just in time to see Leon walk in. She moved over to Leon and hugged him in aggravation.

Looking at Alyssa's pale face, Leon hurriedly carried Alyssa to the bed, "Are you not feeling well?"

"Yes." Alyssa leaned into Leon's arms, "I want to throw up and I feel nauseous."

"I'll take you to the hospital."

"No."

Alyssa felt funny hearing Leon's words.

It was a normal reaction to pregnancy. She didn't need to go to the hospital.

However, she still pretended to be aggrieved. That way, Leon would feel more sorry for her.

She shrank into Leon's arms, "I can feel better if you hold me."

Leon heard Alyssa's words and hurriedly hugged Alyssa tightly.

Alyssa was happy. She looked up at Leon and smiled, "As long as you are by my side, I feel better. I want you to be with me all the time. Leon, I really need you."

Leon was so moved for a moment that he didn't know what to say. Looking at Alyssa's aggrieved look, he suddenly wanted to kiss her.

So he bent down and kissed Alyssa.

Alyssa sensed Leon's intention and smiled at Leon. She kissed him on the cheek first.

Leon was relieved to know that Alyssa was okay.

He saw Alyssa's laptop on the table. Picking up the laptop, he found that Alyssa was working on a financing proposal. The proposal she made seemed great. At Citic, she could really use her strengths. If he had brought Alyssa to Hunter Group, she might not have gained this much experience.
