

Chapter 570

"I'll teach you."

When he finished, he shoved the gun into her hand, then walked behind her, lifted both her arms, and showed her how to aim and shoot.

They were so close that Evelin could even feel the warm, numbing tickle caused by the man's breath spraying behind her ear as he spoke, and she couldn't help but have her cheeks burn slightly.

The two had been in closer contact before, but things were different then.

At that time, his consciousness wasn't clear, and all she wanted to do was save him and help him, not caring much at all.

At this time, however, their bodies were pressed tightly together like a couple in love, full of ambiguity and sweetness.

Evelin uncomfortably twisted her body and received a low squeal from the man in return, "Don't move!"

Then adjusting her arm that was holding the gun, she said, "Okay, that's it, right arm clamp down, left arm relax a little, that's it, okay, shoot!"

"Bang!"

Plastic bullets pass by with balloons.

Evelin put down her gun with a regretful expression and said with a pout, "Oh my! Missed."

Tailor Feng rubbed her head and laughed, "Three feet of ice movement is not a day's cold, you've never practiced before, it's normal for you to miss a hit."

Evelin gave him a blank look, "Don't comfort me, sharpshooter!"

Afterwards, the gun was returned to the vendor and the two men took the doll and left.

Next, at Evelin's suggestion, the two went to play pirate ships, roller coasters, flying trapeze and a series of other exciting items, the initial Evelin did not have much intention of having fun, but after one or two rounds of play, it also brought back a lot of childhood memories, but in high spirits.

After three hours, they were both a little tired and found an outdoor café next to the playground to rest.

Next to the coffee seat was a Turkish ice cream shop, and as soon as they sat down, Tailor Feng asked her, "Do you want to try it?"

Evelin used to not like sweets much, but since she became an artist and had to diet often to lose weight, she just gave up sweets, and since then, she has become interested in sweets instead.

After being out for so long today, the calories had been consumed so much that even eating one wouldn't gain weight, so I nodded.

Tailor Feng got up and went to the next shop to buy an ice cream and handed it to her.

Evelin tore off the package, taking small bites as she squinted her eyes to take stock of the surroundings.

Suddenly eyes brightened.

"Let's go play that later, shall we?"

Tailor Feng followed her finger and looked over at a secret room adventure project.

He was meant to be out with her today, so of course he had no problem nodding his head.

After Evelin eats the ice cream, they go to the secret room to explore.

The rules of the adventure here are that once you enter the chamber, you need to find the three chests hidden in the chamber and follow the instructions in the chests to find the exit.

Of course, if you really can't find them or have an accident in the middle of the day, you can ring the alarm and someone will bring them out right away.

When Evelin used to study, she used to ask her classmates to go out with her on weekends, when the few girls they had were quite daring, they didn't know how many more exciting and thrilling games they had played than this, of course they weren't afraid.

Tailor Feng was even more insensitive.

So they were both relaxed when they went in.

Until the lights suddenly went out.

It was dark in the four directions, and Evelin subconsciously grabbed onto Tailor Feng's hand.

"Don't be afraid!"

The man's voice from up ahead steadied her a little.

The secret room was made up of a series of intricate tunnels, and the two of them moved slowly along the wall, not knowing how many forks they had passed in between.

Tailor Feng's logical mind was strong and they quickly found the first two boxes.

But after following the clues on the note in the box, it took a long time to find the third one.

Suddenly there was a cool breeze in my face through the passage, and I groped along the wall, but there was another four-way fork in front of me.

They stopped.

By the faint light of the flashlight, Tailor Feng turned his head to look at her, "How is it? Is it fun?"

Evelin pursed her lips and didn't reply.

For some reason, she felt panicked since the lights went out inside.

Never felt that way before.

The heart, a bit of a mess, as if some great fear was about to break through.

Noticing that something was wrong with her face, Tailor Feng's sword brows knitted.

"Afraid?"

Evelin gritted her teeth, "No, let's move on."

"Let me know if you feel uncomfortable, don't force it."

Evelin nodded.

They chose a path to continue on and soon found a third box.

Following the hint of the note in the box, the two find a way out and out of the tunnel.

As they looked at the still bustling playground in front of them, they smiled at each other and couldn't help but think that the game really wasn't that difficult.

It was already sunset, so Tailor Feng looked at his watch and asked her, "What do you want to eat tonight?"

Evelin said whatever, you can eat anything.

Eventually Tailor Feng decided to take her to a very famous upscale open-air western restaurant by the river called My Alice.

When we parked, Evelin noticed that there were already quite a few people in the shop, almost all of them couples.

It's near the river, and at night the river breeze is gentle and the neon lights are twinkling, and because it's open air, you can look up and see the stars, which is romantic.

They walked side by side to the restaurant.

Taylor Feng didn't seem to like the food here, so he only ordered something to drink and a salad.

The food comes up quickly.

Evelin said as she ate, "There's actually no need for you to accommodate me like this."

Half a day, going to all the crowded places that thirteen and fourteen year old girls like to go to, if she hasn't seen Taylor Feng's intention, she's an idiot!

Taylor Feng leaned against the back of the chair, elegantly sipping red wine and squinting slightly.

"I've checked your file, you've had a hard time over the years, and I apologize for not taking care of you."

Evelin stiffened slightly and raised her eyes, staring at him, "So, you're taking me to the places those little girls like to go to make up for all these years of my debt?"

Taylor Feng nodded.

"It's late, but I hope you have the same great memories as the others."

Evelin suddenly lost her appetite, and her interest was even more reduced by half.

She put down her knife and fork and thought about it, smiling bitterly.

"I know you mean well, but do you really think that this will make all the suffering I've endured over the years a sweet memory? It's impossible, you've never been through that, you'll never understand the despair and sadness of the moment."

"And, actually, in all honesty, whatever I'm going through has nothing to do with you at the end of the day, you've nothing to do with feeling indebted to me because of my past, you've never..."

Chapter 571

Taylor Feng suddenly interrupted her, "I know myself if I have any debt, you don't need to explain to me."

Evelin: "....."

She was a little helpless, yet deep down, there was a little bit of the same warmth that was slowly coming up.

Just then, suddenly, a piercing scream came from the left.

They turned their heads to see a table not far away, and a middle-aged woman covered in pearly whites suddenly rushed in through the door.

She rushed over to a table and then slapped another young girl, who looked to be no more than twenty, across the face in an exuberant gesture.

"You sl*t, how dare you seduce my husband, see if I don't kill you!"

The woman's voice was high and sharp, instantly catching everyone's attention.

The man sitting next to the girl, his face swollen red, immediately stood up and stopped her, snapping at her in a low voice, "What are you talking about? She's just a client of mine."

"Clients?" The woman got more and more toe-curling, "I think it's a client in bed!"

"You!"

The beaten girl covered her face in embarrassment and bit her lip, "Mr. Zhou, I think it's better to talk about the cooperation project later when there's a chance!! I'll go first!"

After that, you have to leave.

But the woman was pestered and held back.

"So much for wanting to leave? I'm telling you! If we don't get this out of the way today, I'm not done with you two!"

"Enough!"

A crisp slap suddenly landed on the woman's face, and after it, the man was stunned for a second, then he snapped his teeth and turned his head to apologize to the young girl.

"Miss Chen, I'm really sorry, you go first, I'll find time to meet with your company later about the cooperation."

The young girl looked at him with a cold face and said coldly, "No need, I think Mr. Zhou had better take care of your household affairs first."

After saying that, he strode away furiously.

"You b*tch! Don't you go, you..."

"All right! You're not embarrassed enough yet, are you?" The man took his wife by the hand and looked around at the strange eyes, his face bruised and white.

"Zhou Dechang, you're a thousand cuts, and you hit me! You son of a b*tch! What did you tell my father when you married into our family? Ooooooh, now that you've grown up and my dad's dead, you do this to me, you heartless..."

The woman saw that she could not hit the third child, a breath all out on the man, grabbed his clothes in a tearing.

The man was also her this one to stir up anger, especially the mention of the word into the family, more like a poke in the heart of the most hidden that point, grabbed her wrist will push her away, roar: "Enough! He Xiu Lian, if you keep making trouble, we'll divorce!"

The woman was pushed by him and fell to the ground, stunned for a second, then, in spite of her image, she cried out.

The man's face became even more ugly and dropped a harsh, "You're just going to die you!"

Then he strode off in a huff.

Evelin withdrew her gaze.

The steak in front of her was getting a little cold, so she put down her cutlery and wiped her mouth.

"This woman is so unreasonable, if I were you, I'd divorce."

Tailor Feng's appearance was indifferent, but his eyes flashed with a touch of sarcasm.

"Not really, did you just notice both of their watches?"

Evelin raised an eyebrow.

Tailor Feng continued: "Cartier launched a new couple's watch this year, the price is over six figures, the two of them have a partnership, and wearing a couple's watch, do you think there is such a coincidence in the world!"

The thing?"

Evelin hadn't really noticed this detail just now, and being told that by him, he also recalled that the girl seemed to shrink her left hand when she got up.

Not frowning, "So it's really the man's fault?"

Tailor Feng shook his head and laughed, "Not necessarily, any problems in a marriage can't be entirely one person's fault, look at that female..."

He suddenly paused and looked at Evelin who was waiting for his analysis with eyes wide open and raised his eyebrows, "Had enough?"

Evelin was slightly stunned, then nodded.

That's when he called the waiter to pay the bill.

After paying the bill, they got up and left the restaurant and headed for the car park.

Evelin pestered him and asked, "What did you say just now about that woman?"

Taylor Feng, however, did not answer and reached out and tapped her on her forehead head, "What does other people's business have to do with you? Where's the gossip."

Evelin twisted and covered her head, looking at him incredulously.

This man....

When did you learn this bad habit?

He hit her on the head. Does he really think she's a teenager?

They went to the car park, found their car, and got into it.

As soon as I started the car, suddenly, a sneaky figure appeared not far away.

At first glance, it was the middle-aged woman who had just spilled the beans in the restaurant.

I saw her shoving a ball of plastic bags into the exhaust pipe of a BMW sedan as she whispered something viciously under her breath.

Evelin couldn't help but laugh, "Looks like you were right, this woman is no slouch either."

Taylor Feng indifferently quirked the corner of his lips.

The woman finished plugging the exhaust pipe, stood up, and turned her head to see Tailor Feng and Evelin in the opposite car.

Permission to remain angry, she stared at her eyes and said loudly, "What are you looking at? Never seen a blocked exhaust before? Men are no good, and neither are you! At first glance, you look like a little white boy, it's fine to go out and fool around, but you won't even let go of such a young student, be careful of retribution ah you!"

Afterwards, he got into a sedan next to him and sailed away.

The whole time Tailor Feng and Evelin were both petrified.

Halfway through, Evelin puffed her head up and laughed.

"Hahahahaha..."

Tailor Feng's face had darkened and he turned to stare at her hard.

Evelin's looks were of the innocent hanging variety, especially when she wasn't wearing makeup.

Today, in order to go out conveniently, she purposely dressed simply, a white t-shirt and a pair of shorts, a pair of small white shoes underneath, and a high ponytail, at first glance, really looks like a student.

I just didn't expect the woman to misidentify her as her age.

Bwahahahaha...

The more Evelin thought about it, the more she found it funny, sitting on the seat and laughing uproariously as she said, "Don't mind, they're just complimenting you, little white boy! Haha! Laughing my ass off!"

Tailor Feng's face darkened even more, yet when he saw her laughing openly, he just had deep eyes and actually didn't say anything.

The car started up and eased out of the car park.

Kyoto's economy was developed, and the night was filled with colorful neon flashes, so after Evelin had laughed enough, she took out her phone and looked at it, not seeing any news, which was a relief.

It was ten o'clock at night when we got home.

Evelin had been playing all day, and even though she was staying with this man, her mood today was surprisingly not worse.

Chapter 572

After Tailor Feng dropped her off at home, he didn't linger much and soon drove off.

That night, Evelin surprisingly slept very soundly.

It was probably really because she had gone to an amusement park for the afternoon and fulfilled a dream she had always wanted to have as a child, so this night she actually dreamed about being small.

At that time, the Kang family had only just left Kyoto, Kang's father had not yet died, and the family was living happily and joyfully.

Once she heard from another student at school that her dad had taken her to an amusement park to ride the carousel, and she was envious.

When I got home, I grabbed my dad and begged him to take me too.

After the Kang family left Kyoto, they started a small business in a southern city.

Since he was just starting out, Father Kang was very busy every day, leaving early in the morning and returning late at night almost 365 days a year, leaving little time to spare.

But to make his daughter happy, Con's father agreed.

And promise her that if she gets a 100% on her final exam this semester, she'll take her on a trip abroad.

Evelin was so happy that she studied ten hard every day.

Just the thought that my dad would take himself and my mum on an overseas trip, and the family would be happy together, made me happy.

But the sky is the limit.

What she didn't expect was that on the day of her exam, her father would die in a car accident.

She will always remember when she was standing in front of her house with a report card that she had gotten one hundred percent.

The formerly warm home was gone, replaced by a crying, liver-stricken mother, neighbours watching and helping, and the cold, bloody corpse of Dad lying there.

She couldn't remember how she had gotten there, or what she had done in the time it took to bury her dad in a casket.

It's as if that period of time is a blur in my memory.

It was mixed up with tears and rain, so you couldn't see it.

Later, any deeper memory is of her mother taking her and living a hard life together.

Although the person responsible for the accident paid a large sum of money, the compensation has been used for the aftermath of his death because the business that his father ran at the time was affected by his death.

My mother had been married to my father for many years, not to say well-bred, but life had always been relatively easy.

Now that the pillar of the family has fallen, and her mother has to carry the burden of life and pay for her schooling at the age of ten, she has no choice but to go out and look for a job.

Where is it so easy for someone who hasn't worked in over a decade to suddenly look for a job?

Although my mother is considered to be from a highly educated background, time has passed and now she is best at parenting rather than dealing with all the paperwork and reports.

So, in the end, it turned out that the only way to find a job was to work for a domestic helper, babysitting for people and taking care of their children.

During that time, Evelin was well aware of seeing her mother age day by day.

The original radiant woman seems to have aged ten years overnight as life wears on her.

But she had no complaints.

Even if life was hard, I would bring her a bunch of candy canes when I came home late at night or buy her a new dress when the season changed.

She always cradled her in her arms in bed, with a gentle coaxing.

Say my little Yoyo, you have to be good, mommy is not hard, as long as you're happy, mommy will do anything.

Evelin didn't understand her mother's insistence at that time, and at her young age, she was still in a state of ignorance about the world.

The biggest feeling is just knowing that her dad is gone and no one will ever let her play ride the big horse on her neck or lift her up to make her laugh again.

Also, life doesn't seem so good anymore, even though her mother has tried her best to give her the best.

However, the daily meals were still getting worse day by day, and the situation at home was getting worse day by day.

She was obedient and never said anything, despite some feelings.

She doesn't fully understand how hard it is for her mother, but she knows that children have to be sensible, and her mother says she can't buy those toys.

Until one day, suddenly a strange aunt came to the school and called her out of the class she was in.

Mum fainted at work.

After being rushed to the hospital, it was found to be acute myocarditis.

She later learned that, in addition to myocarditis, her mother had a very serious heart attack.

This all happened after Dad died.

She hid all her tears and sorrows and always showed her the most beautiful and sunny side of her heart.

To use her warm and thin body to support her and let her know that even without her dad, she still has her mommy and she won't be one bit less than the other kids.

It was only then that Evelin couldn't help but cry.

She hadn't really felt the fear coming until that moment.

She was afraid.

She was afraid that in losing her dad, she would lose her mum at the same time, and she didn't want to watch her closest family member leave again.

So when He Si appears, disguised as a kind and benevolent uncle, in their mother and daughter's lives, she accepts him into her life with good sense.

She knew that her mother had worked too hard on her own, and that her mother's body could no longer withstand the burdens of life.

So she could, even if it meant having a stranger in their lives, she was willing to accept it.

Anything to keep mommy well, not sick or in danger again.

But where is life so easy?

The adults are in disguise and many times even the adults themselves can't see it.

How can a young child understand the sinister nature of the adult world?

After her mother married He Si, less than a short year of peaceful and happy life passed before He Si showed his true colors.

He drinks, gambles, and hangs out with people all day.

It's fine if you don't work every day, but when you come home, you wait like a grandfather for your mother to serve you.

The good news is that the Ho's have a couple of ancestral homes and are getting by on leases.

Plus, my mother sometimes took on a bit of tutoring work, and although she had forgotten all about maths, her English had always been very good.

It's also a good way to earn a living allowance for the collars' kids to tutor English and such.

The days drifted by with such good and bad days.

Evelin originally thought that the worst of life was nothing more than this.

But I didn't realize that God will always give you a big hit when you least expect it.

One night, she will always remember that day.

It was a stormy night when He Si suddenly stumbled back from outside.